A TOUGH DEFENSE BEGINS

WITH A DECISION TO BE TOUGH.

A PICOM policy comes with something you won't find on most other medical malpractice policies -- a "consent to settle" provision without penalties. With it, your defense begins in your office, not in court. You have the deciding voice in determining whether to settle your case or not. You work with people who specialize in professional liability defense. And claims without merit are vigorously defended. ■ Add this tough defense to our innovative products, 12 years of stability, and service, and you'll see why PICOM is Michigan's leading liability insurer for health care professionals. ■ To find out more, contact your local PICOM Agent or call our Customer Service Representatives at (800) 292-1036 or (517) 349-6500. ■ TOUGH DEFENSE. THE POWER BEHIND PICOM.

Over five years ago, the Michigan State Medical Society (MSMS) awarded its exclusive endorsement to the MBS On-Line Computer System. Since that time, over 4000 MSMS physicians have recognized the benefits of the MBS System. During that same time, MBS has maintained a solid reputation for performance while processing billions of dollars in medical receivables for our members.

However, some of our members may not be aware that their MBS computer system also connects their practice to the CDI Electronic Healthcare Network. This network-connection provides access to an array of additional products and services. This includes linkages to:

- Major Commercial and Hospital Laboratories
- Hospital Information Systems
- Credit Card Processing Services
- Managed Care Processing
- Cash Management Systems
- Numerous Electronic Mail/Communication Systems

Recent MSMS member satisfaction surveys have shown an overwhelming user satisfaction rate with MBS and the CDI Electronic Healthcare Network.

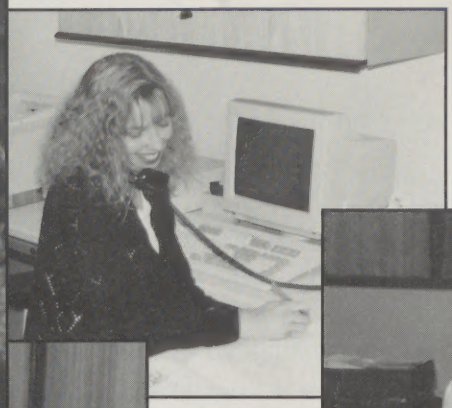

To find out how you can be easily connected to MBS and the CDI Network, return the business reply card or call MSMS at (517)336-7570.

The Michigan State Medical Society Group Insurance Trust provides quality insurance plans for 15,000 MSMS member physicians, their families and their employees. The GIT offers health, dental, disability, life and accident plans all underwritten by financially secure companies. The GIT continually strives to improve coverage, customize benefits and expand members' choices.

Quality service is another reason the GIT was created. Being responsive to the needs of physicians, the GIT is staffed by knowledgeable customer service representatives who are easily accessible. The GIT staff is available by telephone or in person to answer benefit questions and conduct benefit meetings. Subscribers can depend on the Trust's quality service assistance.

Call the GIT before renewing your health, dental, disability, life or accident policy. Remember, the MSMS Group Insurance Trust is the physicians Trust, providing quality insurance coverage for MSMS physicians, their families and their employees.

Working today for your better tomorrow!

The Benefits of Membership

The availability of comprehensive insurance coverage is just one of the many benefits of Michigan State Medical Society membership. Over the years, MSMS, through its affiliated insurance agency, Stratton, Cheeseman & Walsh has been able to offer many cost-effective insurance programs. With Stratton, Cheeseman & Walsh's three decades of experience, MSMS members can deal with them in confidence.

Designed especially to meet the diverse needs of today's physician's, MSMS members have access to quality, group life, disability, business overhead protection and accidental death coverage. Employee group life and disability plans are also available.

Striving to meet the needs of physicians, the Michig State Medical Society newest program, group auto and homeown coverage will be available early in 1994.

Why not join the several thousand MSMS members w currently enjoy the benefits of membership and call Stratto Cheeseman & Walsh at 1-800-968-4929 and put your memb ship to work for you.

MICHIGAN STATE MEDICAL SOCIETY
INSURANCE PROGRAMS

Offered Through
Michigan State Medical Society:

The coverage most doctors accept is also the coverage most doctors choose.

When it comes to health care coverage for themselves, their families, their employees, it seems Michigan's medical professionals do what everybody else does.

They choose Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Michigan.

If you'd like to do the same, we have some good news for you. Through the Michigan State Medical Society, you have access to Blue Cross and Blue Shield group products on an individual basis. Even better, whether you select a first-dollar program or a cost-sharing plan, you'll be offered benefit enhancements not normally available to small groups and individuals.

If you're a member of the Michigan State Medical Society and you'd like to know more, just write or call:

1994 MSMS MEMBERSHIP DIRECTORY ISSUE

This MSMS membership directory provides three different listings. Beginning on page 16 is a complete alphabetical list of MSMS members. Each name is followed by a letter code which refers to a membership classification, a specialty code, and then the county society code number, which serves as a cross reference to help the user refer to the assigned county society.

Beginning on page 90 is a list of MSMS members according to their county society memberships. County society members appear in alphabetical order and with mailing addresses and telephone numbers (where provided) as of November 15, 1993. The MSMS county society code number appears with the heading for each county society.

Beginning on page 330 is a list of MSMS members by specialty. Each name is followed by a county society code number, which serves as a cross reference to help the user refer to the assigned county society.

A reference guide to MSMS and other state medical organizations and agencies appears in the back of this directory. On the following page is a guide to county society codes. Specialty society codes are explained on page 15.

MAKING A DIFFERENCE...

The purpose of the Health Education Foundation is to advance the field of health for the public good. The mission of the Foundation is to achieve the following:

- Stimulate, support, and/or initiate lay or professional education, research programs, and projects in the field of health.

- Encourage the advancement of healthy lifestyles, prevention, diagnosis, or cure of disease, and the care of the sick and the dying.

- Provide a vehicle for the Michigan State Medical Society to foster humanitarian public service in health education and research, and

- Provide a resource for the management and distribution of signature funds or bequests designated for special health education and research purposes.

For additional information or to make a contribution, please contact Dawn M. Reha, Executive Secretary, at Michigan State Medical Society. (517) 337-1351

Do you work with a Dinosaur?

If you've noticed a drag on billing and office management, you may be working with a Dinosaur. Unable to adapt to the rapidly-changing health care landscape, the Dinosaur forces you to rely on old technology and outdated service attitudes. The cost is steep; not just in terms of increased expenses and reduced reimbursements, but in loss of management control, information and potential for growth. Do you work with a Dinosaur? It may be the computer or billing service in your office.

Consider an evolutionary alternative.
CIVITEC™ HEALTHCARE COMPUTERS provides the most highly evolved technology and service, to put you in control of critical practice management functions:

- Powerful Cash flow Management
- Completely Paperless Claims and Statements
- Sophisticated Patient Scheduling, Recall & Letters
- Integrated Clinical Records
- Risk Management - with Malpractice Discount

Join Michigan's forward-thinking health care providers and turn your Dinosaur into ancient history. Choose the evolutionary alternative; a powerful, easy-to-use computer system from CIVITEC™ HEALTHCARE COMPUTERS.

- Comprehensive Standard and Custom Reporting
- Interface to Hospital, Remote Offices, Payers, Lab
- Automatic Reporting and Management Controls
- Bar-code, Windows, Mail, Voice and Imaging

CIVITEC™ SYSTEMS have the future built in.
Our commitment to "open systems" standards, emerging technology, and customer partnerships can meet your evolving needs. After all, even in the changing health care landscape, billing and office management don't have to be a drag.

TO DO TODAY:

Find a new Computer System that will help me and my practice be PREPARED for Health System Reform...

☑ Done!

SECURITY. SIMPLICITY.
SAVINGS. CHOICE. QUALITY.
RESPONSIBILITY.

These are words that we've all been hearing a lot lately. While you're looking towards the challenges of tomorrow, you're obviously still faced with the responsibility of managing your practice today.

You need a computer system that will help you today and that will grow with you in the future as the healthcare industry changes.

You need a system from a company that's involved in setting the standards for Electronic Claims Submission and Electronic Data Interfaces.

You also need a vendor that you can trust for top quality training and support...

...a vendor that will guide you through the maze of Health System Reform and provide the advice that you need.

The Medical Manager®
Medical Practice Management Software

THE JAMES...THE NEXT GENERATION OF HOPE

OUR AREA OF EXPERTISE COVERS A LOT OF GROUND.

Cancer crosses all cultures and all nationalities without exception. So it stands to reason that the treatment and eventual cure of a condition experienced worldwide would require talent and intellect from around the globe.

That's why the planners of The Arthur G. James Cancer Hospital and Research Institute, a National Cancer Institute designated Comprehensive Cancer Center, set out to staff this promising medical center with the top researchers in their field, wherever they might be found. Their search resulted in a respected team of renowned specialists from all around the world.

However, this search would never have been successful without a highly attractive institution. Designed to provide the optimum environment for the development and application of effective cancer treatments, The James houses remarkable research facilities within the same building as an equally excellent treatment center. Because the organization's approach to research is so integrated, the lag time between laboratory breakthroughs and practical application is dramatically decreased. Collaboration between research teams and clinical specialists of the Comprehensive Cancer Center, which are composed of University graduate programs in chemistry, biological sciences, pharmacy and veterinary medicine, has enabled research efforts to advance efficiently while benefiting from the resources of one of the nation's leading University medical programs.

Beginning with the very first blueprints, The James was designed to provide researchers with the facilities, technology and opportunity to conduct their best work. Today, it is a reality that is dedicated to offering hope to the current generation of cancer patients as well as the promise of eradication to those in the future.

The Arthur G. James Cancer Hospital and Research Institute at The Ohio State University, 300 West Tenth Ave., Columbus, OH 43210, 1-800-638-6996

HEALTHY RELATIONSHIPS

"He's done a fantastic job with my patients, and he keeps me informed about their progress every step of the way."

Dr. Cesar Casten
Family Practice, Standish, MI

"The St. Luke's Specialist Referral Network introduced me to Dr. deBari. I work closely with a local foster home in our area that houses many individuals with paraplegia and other disabilities, and I frequently send these patients to Dr. deBari for the more specialized orthopedic care they need. It's a great relationship. I benefit. Dr. deBari benefits. And, of course, our patients benefit most of all."

Dr. Anthony deBari, Orthopedic Surgery
St. Luke's Specialist Referral Network, Saginaw, MI

"I've only been practicing in this area for three years, and St. Luke's Specialist Referral Network has been very helpful in marketing my practice. I've had many doctors refer patients to me and consult with me about a patient. I'm more than happy to do that. After all, that's what the Specialist Referral Network is all about. Physicians helping physicians."

SPECIALIST REFERRAL NETWORK

It's a simple idea. Rural physicians call St. Luke's Specialist Referral Network when they need the advice or services of a specialist. The Network contacts the appropriate specialist, arranges a phone consultation or makes a referral appointment, then calls the rural physician with the information. No hassles No waiting. A simple idea. And it's working.

When a healthy relationship with one of our Saginaw area specialists can help you and your patient, call the Specialist Referral Network at 1-800-541-3939.

St. Luke's Specialist Referral Network. Building healthy relationships among rural physicians, area specialists and their patients.

Prompt, accurate service is critical when doctors order laboratory tests. And for over twenty-nine years, we've provided doctors and their patients with results they can count on.

As a part of a national medical laboratory that performs over 40,000,000 medical tests each year, MetPath of Michigan continues to maintain its reputation for speed, accuracy, and convenience.

Health care needs are growing. MetPath of Michigan offers an expanded range of services to meet those needs.

With a highly-trained staff using the latest technology to assure accurate results, MetPath of Michigan is the comprehensive clinical laboratory where right results really count. Just give us a call at 1-800-777-0706 (formerly CBC) or 1-800-444-0106 (formerly Advance Medical).

Of these three, only one requires little time to heal.

At Rehabilitation Institute of Michigan, we know the human spirit is remarkably resilient. We care for people who call upon their internal strength to face physical and mental challenges every day as they strive to put their lives back together after a devastating illness or injury.

We're committed to helping these individuals reach their potential. We deliver specialized physical medicine and rehabilitation services with excellent clinical care backed by innovative rehabilitation research and aggressive advocacy for persons with physical and cognitive disabilities.

We're leaders in providing inpatient and outpatient rehabilitation services for spinal cord injuries, amputations, stroke, multiple sclerosis, brain injuries and arthritis. We're always looking for better ways to meet our patients' needs. That includes helping them make the best decisions for themselves and advocating public policies and legislation that support their needs and rights.

After more than 40 years of helping people rebuild their lives, we think we know a little about the human spirit. We'd like to tell you about it. Give us a call at (313) 745-9716.

Experience. Excellence.

When It Comes To Patient Education, We've Got The Cure!

Consider us your resource for patient education materials. When it comes to communicating important messages about diet and health, we can help by supplying the latest research-based nutrition data, patient handouts and a variety of educational tools. To learn more about the Michigan Beef Industry Commission, and to obtain free copies of the items featured in this ad, call or write us today!

Food In Focus
Created especially for nurses, this booklet provides answers to common nutrition questions and clarifies confusing nutrition issues. Food In Focus explores ways to reduce dietary fat and cholesterol through wise food choices and smart food preparation and is favorably reviewed by the American Association of Office Nurses and the American Dietetic Association.

A Food Guide For The First Five Years
Designed for parents, this booklet contains information on feeding and meal preparation as well as an explanation of nutrient density and energy balance. Favorably reviewed by the American Academy of Family Physicians Foundation and the American Academy of Pediatricians, this helpful educational tool also features tips on choking prevention, restaurant and travel pointers and nutritious snack ideas.

Nutrition Strategies: Designs For Heart-Healthy Living
This upbeat patient education brochure opens into a poster packed full of valuable heart-healthy diet and lifestyle information. Included are basic facts about cardiovascular risk as well as painless steps people can take to achieve better health. Nutrition Strategies is favorably reviewed by the American Academy of Family Physicians Foundation.

Bennethum Computer Systems

Has sold hundreds of medical systems.

Offers 3 different programs for medical offices starting at $1,500.

With 3 different programs we can much better meet your needs and price range compared to computer companies that offer only one program.

For a brochure describing our programs, please call or write today.

CHEAP INSURANCE

may be no insurance.

Price-shopping isn't the recommended way to acquire professional liability protection.

The price of your insurance can't be artificially low. Not as long as the liability climate remains threatening.

Your only real protection is your insurer's ability to cover the costs in this volatile line of business. Adequate premiums are critical — to your insurance company and to you.

Ludann

3310 Eagle Park Drive, NE, Suite 108
Grand Rapids, MI 49505 U.S.A.

"Are your patients at the CENTER of the health care process?"

"Is your patient education program promoting your practice?"

"Are you helping your patients to better understand the efforts provided?"

Patient education is an important and mandated part of medical treatment. The goal of LUDANN is to place the patient at the center of the health care experience through a comprehensive, structured process of patient education. Excellent and appropriate patient education materials enhance the perception of quality care received and allows all involved to collaborate and "share the care."® The LUDANN Process helps enable patients to realize that medical care and surgery is a human effort made to correct a malfunction of the body. LUDANN's education system attempts to bridge the communication gap and address patient management as opposed to disease management. ("LUDANN Achieves Collaboration.")

We believe that well-informed patients are more compliant and better able to understand the outcome of medical/surgical care. LUDANN has Teaching Videos and publishes patient and family education monographs in several specialities (neurosurgery, neurology, cardio-vascular, gastro-intestinal, internal medicine, anesthesiology), as well as Nursing Primers, Diagnostic Primers, and anatomical notepads. Please call us for any questions or to receive a brochure: (616) 285-7080/ 800-367-1553.

So Who's Got Money To Burn These Days.

American businesses watched 22 billion dollars in unpaid receivables go up in smoke last year. How much money are you letting vanish into thin air?

Before your unpaid receivables start stacking up, call I.C. System. We're endorsed for debt collection services by more than 1,000 business and professional associations nationwide, including yours. In fact, every month we collect millions for our clients.

Don't get burned by unpaid receivables. Call I.C. System today.

PHYSICIAN RESIDENT ALERT: IF YOU COULD USE OVER $25,000 A YEAR– ANSWER THIS AD.

The U.S. Army's Financial Assistance Program (FAP) is offering a subsidy of over $25,000 a year for training in certain medical specialities.

Here's how it breaks down - an annual grant, plus a monthly stipend and reimbursement of approved educational expenses.

You will be part of a unique health care team where you will find many opportunities to continue your medical education, work at state-of-the-art facilities, and receive outstanding benefits.

So, if you are a physician resident who could use over $25,000 a year, contact an Army Medical Counselor immediately.

Breast-Conservation Treatment

AT LEAST ONE-THIRD OF ALL BREAST CANCER PATIENTS COULD HAVE LUMPECTOMY FOLLOWED BY RADIATION THERAPY

The American Cancer Society, the American College of Surgeons and the American College of Radiology have agreed that women whose early breast cancer was detected by mammography are candidates for breast-saving treatment. According to new standards, women with small lumps, those with tumors as large as two inches, and even some women with positive nodes may be candidates for this treatment.

Stage for stage, patients treated in this manner have the same longevity and the same freedom from local recurrence as those treated with mastectomy.

For copies of the standards please contact Keri Sperry, American College of Radiology, 1891 Preston White Drive, Reston, VA 22091.

Because Time Doesn't Heal All Wounds–

Call 313-228-0741

If your patients have wounds that won't heal, call the Wound Care Center at Mount Clemens General Hospital. It's one of only 50 centers like it in the United States.

It was created for a single-minded purpose: the treatment of non-healing, chronic wounds caused by diabetes, poor circulation, surgical incision and pressure sores.

Our staff of physician specialists will coordinate care of your patient and keep you informed of treatment every step of the way. When our program is completed, the patient will be referred back to your care again.

To find out more or take a tour of the Wound Care Center, please call 313-228-0741.

Nothing is more important than your health.

ATTENTION PHYSICIANS:

ANNOUNCING THE MICHIGAN CONNECTION IN LOCUM TENENS

CompHealth/Kron, the nation's premier locum tenens (temporary physician staffing) organization, has established a local staffing network in Michigan.

That means we have qualified, experienced, local physicians available to fill in when your medical practice or facility is short staffed, or when you need daily, weekly, evening, weekend, or routine physician coverage.

It's a great way to make sure your patients have convenient access to quality care in your practice or facility.

Call us today to discuss your practice coverage needs, or to find out more about building a flexible, rewarding practice as a locum tenens physician with our Michigan staffing team!

Distribution of MSMS Members

The heavy lines on the map indicate the bondaries for the component medical societies. The numbers on the map indicate the number of members in each component society as of December 20, 1993.

COUNTY LISTING OF MSMS MEMBERS

Beginning December 1, 1993, Southwest Michigan Can Dial A New Area Code...(810).

New telecommunications technologies are using up all of the available telephone numbers in Southeast Michigan. But the solution is simple. A new area code. And you can start dialing it right now.

Cellular phones, pagers, fax machines and computer modems are rapidly using up all the telephone numbers available in the (313) area code. To keep pace, Ameritech is adding the (810) area code. Like dozens of other metropolitan areas across the nation with a similar need for growth, the additional area code will provide enough telephone numbers to meet your telecommunications needs now and into the next century.

Starting August 10, 1994, the new area code becomes official and you will need to dial (810). However, to east the changeover, you can begin using the new (810) area code on December 1, 1993. This early transition period will enable you to reach a telephone number in the (810) area code by dialing either (313) or (810). It also provides an opportunity to prepare for the official changeover and notify frequent callers if your area code is changing.

Try the solution for yourself by dialing (810) right now. For more information, call our toll-free Infoline at 1-800-831-8989.

YOCON®
YOHIMBINE HCl

Description: Yohimbine is a 3a-15a-20B-17a-hydroxy Yohimbine-16a-carboxylic acid methyl ester. The alkaloid is found in Rubaceae and related trees. Also in Rauwolfia Serpentina (L) Benth. Yohimbine is an indolalkylamine alkaloid with chemical similarity to reserpine. It is a crystalline powder, odorless. Each compressed tablet contains (1/12 gr.) 5.4 mg of Yohimbine Hydrochloride.

Action: Yohimbine blocks presynaptic alpha-2 adrenergic receptors. Its action on peripheral blood vessels resembles that of reserpine, though it is weaker and of short duration. Yohimbine's peripheral autonomic nervous system effect is to increase parasympathetic (cholinergic) and decrease sympathetic (adrenergic) activity. It is to be noted that in male sexual performance, erection is linked to cholinergic activity and to alpha-2 adrenergic blockade which may theoretically result in increased penile inflow, decreased penile outflow or both.

Yohimbine exerts a stimulating action on the mood and may increase anxiety. Such actions have not been adequately studied or related to dosage although they appear to require high doses of the drug. Yohimbine has a mild anti-diuretic action, probably via stimulation of hypothalmic centers and release of posterior pituitary hormone.

Reportedly, Yohimbine exerts no significant influence on cardiac stimulation and other effects mediated by B-adrenergic receptors, its effect on blood pressure, if any, would be to lower it; however no adequate studies are at hand to quantitate this effect in terms of Yohimbine dosage.

Indications: Yocon® is indicated as a sympathicolytic and mydriatic. It may have activity as an aphrodisiac.

Contraindications: Renal diseases, and patient's sensitive to the drug. In view of the limited and inadequate information at hand, no precise tabulation can be offered of additional contraindications.

Warning: Generally, this drug is not proposed for use in females and certainly must not be used during pregnancy. Neither is this drug proposed for use in pediatric, geriatric or cardio-renal patients with gastric or duodenal ulcer history. Nor should it be used in conjunction with mood-modifying drugs such as antidepressants, or in psychiatric patients in general.

Adverse Reactions: Yohimbine readily penetrates the (CNS) and produces a complex pattern of responses in lower doses than required to produce peripheral a-adrenergic blockade. These include, anti-diuresis, a general picture of central excitation including elevation of blood pressure and heart rate, increased motor activity, irritability and tremor. Sweating, nausea and vomiting are common after parenteral administration of the drug.[1,2] Also dizziness, headache, skin flushing reported when used orally.[1,3]

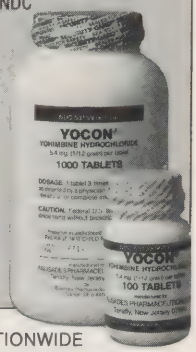

Dosage and Administration: Experimental dosage reported in treatment of erectile impotence.[1,3,4] 1 tablet (5.4 mg) 3 times a day, to adult males taken orally. Occasional side effects reported with this dosage are nausea, dizziness or nervousness. In the event of side effects dosage to be reduced to ½ tablet 3 times a day, followed by gradual increases to 1 tablet 3 times a day. Reported therapy not more than 10 weeks.[3]

How Supplied: Oral tablets of Yocon® 1/12 gr. 5.4 mg in bottles of 100's NDC 53159-001-01 and 1000's NDC 53159-001-10.

PERSONAL INSIGHTS

"Mercy allowed me to maintain my independence while becoming part of the team here. They did everything. They moved me, put ads in the newspaper, and printed up cards, stationery and announcements. They introduced me to the physicians in the area, and because they were actively recruiting someone in my position, I felt needed and wanted from the word 'go.' "

Dr. Paul Bizzigotti

Mercy Health Services North is actively recruiting physicians in Internal Medicine, Family Practice, Pediatrics and OB/GYN. We helped Dr. Bizzigotti find professional satisfaction and we'd like to do the same for you. For further information, call or send C.V. to: Physician Recruitment, Mercy Health Services North, Dept. MM, 400 Hobart St., Cadillac, MI 49601. (616) 779-7283.

Guide to MSMS Committees

MSMS has 46 committees and task forces which provide a platform for addressing issues ranging from aging to physician well-being. To effectively address such a wide range of issues, MSMS committees rely heavily upon member input. MSMS encourages involvement of as many different physicians as possible from every geographical area.

Committee appointments are awarded annually at the MSMS midsummer board of directors meeting held in July. Members are selected from a pool of applicants who have been nominated by current committee members, MSMS section officers and specialty and component society leaders. Committee appointments are for two-year terms, with new appointments taking place annually.

The first step toward obtaining a position, and the most difficult, is determining which committee (or committees) interests you most. A complete list of MSMS committees and task forces begins on this page. Each committee listing includes a brief statement of goals.

Members interested in serving on a committee must be appointed by the MSMS Board of Directors. Simply contact a current committee member, MSMS section leader, MSMS Board member, your county medical society or specialty society, or contact MSMS headquarters and request a recommendation. Each January MSMS begins seeking recommendations for committee appointments for the coming year. So now is a good time to start thinking about what committee you would like to join.

For more information on any of the MSMS committees, contact Jeanne Miller at MSMS.

Committee on Aging

This Committee provides physicians with an overview of the medical, social and psychological needs of the aged patient. Activities include examining the health status of the older patient, advocating preventative medicine programs, discussing Medicare financing, and exploring long-term care options for the elderly. The Committee works with many community organizations and the Michigan Office of Services to the Aging.

MSMS/MPMLC Risk Management Committee

The Michigan State Medical Society Section of Risk Management was developed with the support of Michigan Physicians Mutual Liability Company (MPMLC) to increase MSMS member involvement in the planning and implementation of risk management activities. This section has two main objectives. The first is to increase the number of risk management education programs available for physicians and related health care professionals, and to coordinate programs to insure that their content meets the needs and desires of the MSMS members. A second objective of the section is to inventory practice parameter development with Michigan and coordinate the involvement of Michigan physicians in practice parameter related projects. The purpose of the Risk Management Committee is to oversee the activities of the section and to provide assistance and guidance as necessary.

Task Force On Physician Well-Being

This Task Force has been formed to plan and help implement an MSMS educational program for physicians which focuses on professional well-being. The mission of such a program is to teach self-care skills to physicians so they and their families can cope with the kinds of stress unique to the medical professional. The educational goal is to promote the health of physicians and their families, to help them avoid impairment so they can continue to care for their patients. The Task Force includes representatives from the MSMS Board, MSMS Auxiliary, specialty societies and county medical societies.

MSMS/AMA offer tools for educating patients

HEALTH SYSTEM REFORM

MSMS and the AMA are combining forces to give every Michigan physician the tools to inform their patients of the ramifications of proposed health system reform.

You need only complete and mail this order form to obtain the tools to discuss and explain the proposed changes to your patients, your colleagues, your family and your friends. The materials listed below come from the AMA and MSMS. They will be supplemented as the reform debate continues.

"We may not be experts in economics but we are experts in patient care. And it's important that our patients know what's going to happen to them."

–James S. Todd, MD
AMA Executive Vice President

Help Your Patients Decide In Advance About Health Care

Durable Power of Attorney for Health Care Order Form

MSMS urges individual physician offices to order the new Durable Power of Attorney for Health Care Designation Forms to distribute to patients as a public relations activity. The forms were developed and approved by MSMS, the State Bar of Michigan, the Michigan Hospital Association and the Michigan Association of Osteopathic Physicians and Surgeons.

The forms provide patients with the means to appoint a patient advocate to make health care decisions for them if they become incapacitated. Distribution of the document serves as a goodwill gesture that can demonstrate to patients how physicians are working to help them.

Designation Forms and accompanying brochures can be ordered through MSMS. Price is 40 cents for the pair when ordering 100 or more. Under 100, the price is 45 cents. Minimum order is 50.

The Designation Form is an eight page 8 1/2 by 11 booklet. The document is designed to be a "user friendly" form, particularly for older patients. The short patient brochure accompanying each form covers more detailed information about the new durable power of attorney law.

To order, please complete this form and return to:

Michigan State Medical Society
P.O. Box 950
East Lansing, MI 48826-0950

Millions Victimized by Family Members Every Year!

Are you concerned about the effects of family violence and victimization within your community?

Become an advocate within your community for the prevention of family violence.

Violence among family members has reached staggering proportions. Every year more than 2 million cases of child abuse and neglect are reported, between 2 and 4 million women are battered by their spouses, and between 700,000 and 1.1 million of the elderly population are abused.

The American Medical Association has formed a National Coalition of Physicians Against Family Violence. Through the Coalition the American Medical Association hopes to involve you in activities that address issues of child abuse, sexual assualt, domestic violence and elder abuse because you have the unique ability to identify the symptoms, first-hand. By joining the National Coalition you will be showing your concern about the effects of family violence and victimization, and will become a committed advocate within your community for the prevention of family violence.

Through the Coalition you will:

- be informed about local contacts and referrals
- become aware of local and regional resources
- be provided with information regarding model educational programs
- become aware of treatment guidelines and protocols.
- have access to newsletters, public education materials and other publications
- receive an official membership card and frameable poster alerting your patients of your interest in and concern for this problem.

The only cost to you is your commitment to help curb this problem. Simply complete the membership application form below and mail to the Department of Mental Health, American Medical Association, 515 N. State Street, Chicago, IL 60610.

"Being a patient advocate is what being a physician is all about."

Dr. Kevin Fullin, Cardiologist, Kenosha, Wisconsin, Member, American Medical Association

Why would a cardiologist get involved in the issue of family violence? Perhaps, because what he saw simply cried out for action.

"Fully a third of all women's injuries coming into our emergency rooms are no accident," says Dr. Fullin.

While others were content to downplay the issue of family violence, Dr. Fullin would not. He petitioned state officials, and through his efforts the first Domestic Violence Advocate Program in his state was created.

"Organized medicine must serve as an advocate for patients," stressed Dr. Fullin.

The American Medical Association (AMA) couldn't agree more. We're committed to focusing physician attention on the issue of family violence.

You are invited to join Dr. Fullin and to join with him in his efforts to bring quality health care to those in need. Become a member of the American Medical Association today.

Members of the AMA are encouraged to join their state, county and specialty societies.

LEONARDO COULD HAVE QUALIFIED FOR AMWA MEMBERSHIP.

CAN YOU?

The great Renaissance man could have made it on the strength of his medical writing alone.

Or as an illustrator.

Or simply as a medical scientist.

But you can earn membership in the American Medical Writers Association — AMWA— by being any one of these. As well as by being a doctor, dentist, editor, librarian, educator, medical photographer... or by being professionally involved in medical communication.

The one inflexible criterion: you must share the conviction of AMWA's current 3,700 members that clear, concise communications is a vitally important art to be cultivated and refined.

To achieve that end, AMWA conducts workshop sessions in a variety of specialized facets of communications — including explorations into the latest electronic media. It holds local, regional, and national meetings that enable editors, physicians, film- and video-makers, writers, publishers, illustrators, and a wide spectrum of scientific communicators to meet, talk, and exchange ideas. And it publishes a journal that exists for one purpose only... to encourage and nurture concise, lucid medical communications.

To learn more about how to join the rapidly growing ranks of AMWA members who share your concerns, write, call, or Fax the American Medical Writers Association, 9650 Rockville Pike, Bethesda Maryland 20814, (301-493-0003, Fax 301-493-0005).

Just because DaVinci missed out on AMWA membership is no reason you should!

A TOUGH DEFENSE BEGINS WITH A DECISION TO BE TOUGH.

A PICOM policy comes with something you won't find on most other medical malpractice policies -- a "consent to settle" provision without penalties. With it, your defense begins in your office, not in court. You have the deciding voice in determining whether to settle your case or not. You work with people who specialize in professional liability defense. And claims without merit are vigorously defended. ■ Add this tough defense to our innovative products, 12 years of stability, and service, and you'll see why PICOM is Michigan's leading liability insurer for health care professionals. ■ To find out more, contact your local PICOM Agent or call our Customer Service Representatives at (800) 292-1036 or (517) 349-6500. ■ TOUGH DEFENSE. The wrong message of legalizing illicit drugs

Any policy discussion that includes consideration of legalizing illicit drugs reflects either a complete misunderstanding or ignorance of the key factors that affect trial and use of these substances. Legalization sends the societal message of public approval, eroding the anti-drug attitudes of our youth and encouraging them to try and use illegal drugs. What we need is the reverse—establishing the unequivocal message that our public behavior standard and social norm is "no-use," continuously reinforced through the attitudes of harm/risk and social disapproval that are proven inhibitors to our youth trying and using these substances.

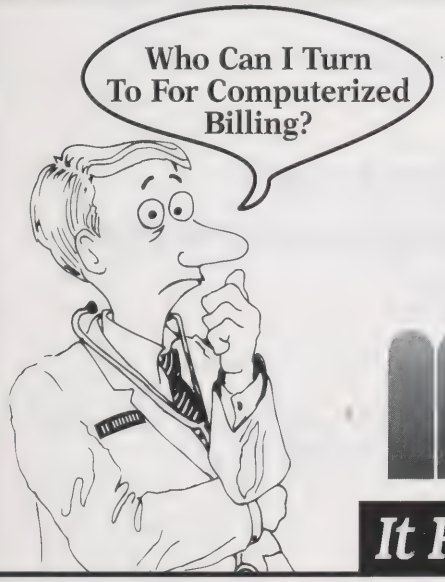

First, it is critical to recognize that drug abuse is, at its core, the result of the demand we as individuals and society create for these drugs. Prior to drug use becoming the disease of addiction, all drug trial and use is the result of decisions/choices we make to use or not use. The primary determinant in these decisions are the attitudes of 1) perceived harm/risk and 2) social disapproval. This is true across ethnicity, demography and geography. All progress in reducing drug use and, ultimately, addition, is the result of increasing anti-drug attitudes in order to change the behavior.

The message of legalization is precisely antithetical to everything we've learned about preventing the demand for illegal drugs. The epidemic of illegal drug use over the past three decades was the result of these substances, their use, and their users becoming "normalized" -- perceived as benign and an accepted part of normal social behavior. Normalization has led to nearly 80 million Americans having tried illegal drugs. Because we did not understand the impairment and harm that results from using illegal drugs, we passively and actively moved away from the behavior standard and social norm of no-use.

The reverse process of "denormalization" that began with the death of Len Bias in 1986 has resulted in a decline of more than 50 percent in the number of Americans using illicit drugs. This fact is not well known, and probably is responsible for much of the sense of hopelessness and helplessness that often surrounds the issue of drug abuse. As a nation, we began to recognize the harmfulness of drug use, and we began to re-establish the social norm of no-use. All the declines in trial and non-addicted use of illicit drugs are directly correlated with the increase in the attitudes of perceived harm/risk and social disapproval.

Importantly, however, most recent trends among young teens indicate an erosion in their key anti-drug attitudes of risk and disapproval, resulting in higher usage rates of marijuana, LSD, cocaine and inhalants. Further confusion in the behavior standard and social norm of no-use, especially consideration of legalizing (read "normalizing") illicit drugs, will surely accelerate this disturbing trend and put us back into the drug epidemic of the 1970's and early 1980's.

MSMS ON THE MOVE

Preparing physicians for change

AMA/MSMS seek antitrust relief in reform legislation

The AMA, MSMS and your county medical society are launching a major campaign to ensure that antitrust relief is included in any health system reform legislation. The AMA, MSMS and your county medical society believe strongly that physicians should be permitted to pool their market strength so they can negotiate more effectively on a variety of issues, including fees and quality. Unless the role of physicians is enhanced, health care delivery will be dominated by giant networks which seriously threaten patient choice and physicians' freedom to make medical decisions.

It's essential that physicians make their voice heard concerning this important issue. Please write your representatives and senators in Congress urging them to co-sponsor this important legislation. Grassroots support is key to enacting antitrust reform legislation. Contact Kevin A. Kelly at (517) 336-5743 for further information.

MSMS business alliance to aid PO/PHO formation

A unique alliance made by MSMS with a national expert in forming physician organizations (POs) and physician-hospital organizations (PHOs) will help Michigan doctors stay at the leading edge of health system reform. William H. Mercer, Inc., the largest US consulting firm in the field of employee benefits, compensation, human resource management and related areas, will work with MSMS to assist MSMS members in developing POs and PHOs. The alliance is believed to be the first of its kind in the country. (See page 30 in this issue for further details.)

Doctors stay involved, informed through MSMS meetings

Doctors can participate in the business of organized medicine, or stay informed in several areas by attending these important MSMS meetings in February, March and April:

- On Feb. 25-26, MSMS will hold its second major conference on forming physician organizations and physician-hospital organizations. It's in conjunction with the Michigan Physicians Mutual Liability Company.
- March 9-10, the annual MSMS Conference on Maternal and Perinatal Health will focus on "Collaboration for Prevention."
- On March 11, the third in the MSMS "Master's Series" of conferences will show doctors how to handle "Antitrust/Negotiations/Conflict Resolutions."
- March 11-12, MSMS will hold its annual Joint Section Meeting. This conclave brings together the Hospital Medical Staff Section, the Section for International Medical Graduates and the Young Physicians Section to meet simultaneously.

Each of these meetings will take place at the Ritz Carlton Hotel in Dearborn. Call Judy Marr at (517) 336-5744 for details on the Joint Section Meeting. Call the MSMS Office of Physician Education about the other Dearborn conferences listed.

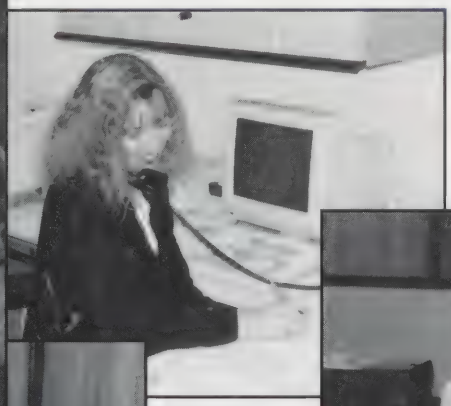

- April 20 physicians will visit Lansing to hear directly from legislators on what's happening in state government on health system reform in Michigan. As part of the MSMS and MSMS Alliance "Capitol Checkup Program" they'll also lunch with lawmakers to talk about what doctors are doing on the issue. Call the MSMS Department of Government Relations at (517) 336-5741 to get involved.

For details on these and other issues call William E. Madigan, Executive Director, MSMS 517/337-1351.

MSMS LEGAL BRIEFS

Michigan Court of Appeals Upholds Constitutionality of 1986 Malpractice Legislation

By Richard D. Weber

The Michigan Court of Appeals has rendered the first appellate court decision applicable to Michigan malpractice reform legislation. In Bissell vs. Kommareddi, the litigation is constitutional. MSMS filed an amicus curiae brief in support of the constitutionality of the legislation. The appellate court adopted the arguments asserted by MSMS.

In 1986, the legislature reduced the age by which a minor must commence a medical malpractice lawsuit from the minor's 19th birthday to his/her 15th birthday. The requirement that all other tort claims be commenced by a minor prior to the 19th birthday remains to this day. In Bissell, the minor plaintiff commenced a medical malpractice lawsuit prior to her 19th birthday, but subsequent to her 15th birthday. The trial court dismissed the suit and the legislation on due process and equal protection grounds under both the state and federal constitutions.

The Court of Appeals stated as follows:

> Section 7 is part of the Tort Reform Act of 1986 and was ostensibly enacted to eliminate the "long tail" that arises when a minor is allowed to pursue a cause of action that may have accrued 18 years earlier. Clearly, the object of the challenged legislation was to limit the period of time during which health care providers would be at risk from malpractice suits. In our opinion, the means sought by the Legislature was reasonably related to this object because of the extraordinary number of children receiving health care and the lengthy exposure to malpractice claims that results. The state unquestionably has a legitimate interest in securing adequate and affordable health care for its residents. And, it is reasonable to assume that a lessening of exposure would encourage health care providers to remain in this state. Plaintiff has failed to show that the classification is arbitrary and does not bear a rational relation to the object of the legislation.
> With respect to plaintiff's due process challenge, statutes of limitations are to be upheld unless it can be demonstrated that they are so harsh and unreasonable in their consequences that they effectively divest plaintiffs of the access to the courts intended by the grant of the substantive right. (citation omitted). In this case, even though the statute of limitations does shorten the time within which minors must bring suit, we believe that it provides more than a reasonable amount of time for their claims to be pursued.

> "The recent malpractice tort reform legislation, effective April, 1994, further reduces the statute of limitations applicable to minors to the minor's 10th birthday. This decision will have a substantial impact on constitutional challenges anticipated to the new law"

The recent malpractice tort reform legislation, effective April, 1994, further reduces the statute of limitations applicable to minors to the minor's 10th birthday. This decision will have a substantial impact on constitutional challenges anticipated to the new law with respect to the statute of limitations and the other significant reforms. It is expected that the plaintiff will seek leave to appeal to the Michigan Supreme Court.

To thrive under managed care, be prepared to negotiate

By Claudia Skutar

Editor's Note: The first conference of "The Master's Series: Cornerstones to Successful Health System Reform," was held January 13 in Southfield. The topic of the conference: "Managed Care in Michigan: The New Architecture of Health Care Delivery." Following are highlights of the conference, sponsored by MSMS and MPMLC.

Today's doctors no longer order their patients' care, but instead negotiate it with an entire health care team, unlike doctors of previous eras.

That's what Barry C. Dorn, MD, mediator for the Program for Health Care Negotiation and Conflict Resolution at the Boston University School of Public Health, told a group of 175 health care professionals in Southfield January 13.

Doctors no longer are seen simply as doctors, but as health care providers. Physicians in the past were trained to be independent thinkers, to care for their patients, make tough decisions about that care, and then live with those decisions. Doctors always have been able to take new information, synthesize it quickly and care for their patients, said Doctor Dorn.

However, doctors now are finding it necessary to synthesize information about managed care and health care delivery system changes on top of what they already absorb to help their patients. System changes are transforming the way doctors provide health care. Physicians today, said Doctor Dorn, are part of a team managing patient care.

"It's very important for doctors not to think that they can do patient care alone anymore because they're not going to be allowed to [as the health care delivery system changes]," explained Doctor Dorn. Still, he says doctors, as part of a team, are very connected to patient care.

Conflict negotiation key

But inherent in these new relationships is conflict and the need to negotiate that conflict. To be successful under managed care, physicians must participate and "learn to negotiate their piece of the pie." Doctors now are in a new system, Doctor Dorn pointed out, and that system, taking hold around the country, is a result of marketplace demand and not Congressional proposals on health system reform.

"We have to convince doctors to participate in managed care," he said. The evolving doctor can remain financially solvent if he or she learns to negotiate.

The need to negotiate effectively is underscored by the fact that 95 percent of Michigan employers provide at least one managed care plan, said MSMS President Gilbert B. Bluhm, MD, who moderated the conference. He also noted that 20 percent of health care delivery across the United States is handled through some type of managed care.

Managed care contract expert Paul Shirilla, an attorney for the firm Kerr, Russell and Weber, outlines what to look for and to avoid in such contracts. He spoke at the MSMS Masters Series conference "Managed Care in Michigan: The New Architecture of Health Care Delivery" Jan. 13 in Southfield.

"As doctors, we need to understand that we're going to be accountable for the care we provide," said Doctor Bluhm. However, doctors also "need to know how that's going to affect their research and creativity."

Rough spots in working out a new system will cause conflicts for participants. Some examples: who will be responsible for the risk of the patient, doctors or the managed care group? There's also the problem of over-utilization. "Utilization is a big issue because it means using health care dollars, using what's in the pot," said Doctor Dorn.

And what about the conflict between primary care physicians and specialists under the new system? In the past this wasn't an issue, said Doctor Dorn. Now when a primary care doctor refers a patient to a specialist, the primary care doctor loses money.

New strategy necessary

Resolving such conflicts will require a new strategy, a change from the win-lose positional negotiation style which doctors have been well-trained in, said Doctor Dorn. In the long run, win-lose creates losses for all sides, and "war is costly."

"You go to the table with the same people regularly," said Doctor Dorn. "If every time it's win-lose, that makes problem-solving very difficult." While some positional negotiation may still be necessary, collaborative problem-solving is more likely to take doctors where they want to go.

Doctors must look at the process and ask themselves how they are going to do that. "Leaders in health care must be aware that they're going to deliver a new product and that they're going to deliver it in a new way," said Doctor Dorn.

A cornerstone of the new system is the managed care contract. This is primarily a business agreement having little to do with patient care, says Attorney Paul Shirilla, an expert in managed care contracts and a member of the firm Kerr, Russell and Weber, Detroit.

Preparation, leverage and contract administration are essential to managed care contracting. "If you haven't prepared and created some leverage, you may have no options," he noted. Doctors traditionally have relied on someone else to create that leverage for them, but Shirilla says that will change as the health system changes.

And doctors should keep in mind that contracting is not a one-time event. Most contracts, he pointed out, are only for one year, meaning that "as soon as you sign the contract, you're creating the agenda for the next one." Ongoing administration is an important component of managed care contracting.

What's new about managed care contracts? Shirilla says they contain an increasing degree of economic risks for doctors. For instance, fee-for-service will be replaced with capitation, where doctors accept one fee for a specified number of patients over a specified period of time. How well doctors do will depend on how well they manage their practices, said Shirilla.

This skill will prove critical for physicians navigating a strong health system trend toward managed care groups. The level of marketplace activity in forming them is unprecedented, according to Shirilla. "We're seeing tremendous free market activity driven by employer purchasers," he explained. "The market is being divvied up into subgroups with various managed care contracting arrangements."

Many of these new enterprises are small businesses. Since a large percentage of all small businesses fail within a decade of startup, Shirilla cautioned doctors when contracting with these newer enterprises to "think about how long they'll be around."

"Preparation is the key in this process—you have to know who you're contracting with," he said.

Claudia Skutar is communications specialist for MSMS.

Michigan Health Council Launches New Physician Recruitment, Retention Campaign

By Herb Auer

An ambitious new project is being launched by the Michigan Health Council "to keep more Michigan-trained physicians in our state."

The project is called "Medical Opportunities in Michigan," a new recruitment strategy which also is aimed at attracting physicians to Michigan.

"The State of Michigan needs many physicians today and the estimated need will increase as federal legislation seeks to provide health care for all Americans," says Archie Bedell, MD, PhD, an MHC board member and speaker of the house for the Michigan Academy of Family Physicians.

Informational packets about the campaign are being distributed to Michigan hospitals and other medical-care delivery systems, as well as to residency program directors and medical schools.

MHC predicts all aspects of this unique service to physicians will be in place this spring.

MSMS will play a major role in encouraging county medical societies and specialty societies to participate and support this new project. In addition, MSMS plans to develop strategies to involve its sections for medical students, residents, international medical graduates and hospital medical staff representatives.

"Informational packets about the campaign are being distributed to Michigan hospitals and other medical-care delivery systems, as well as to residency program directors and medical schools."

Four key components

The four major components of "Medical Opportunities in Michigan" include:

- A Practice Opportunity Database — The first of its kind in Michigan, this database will function in cooperation with state agencies, community groups, business and industry. "Access will be through a phone modem computer connection that will enable a physician to obtain practice site information any time of the day or night," says Doctor Bedell. Physicians interested in selling their practice may also utilize the database. Those who prefer personal assistance with the database may contact Anne Rosewarne, MHC president and CEO, during business hours at (517) 337-1615.
- Information on Communities — Detailed information on communities will be available to enrolled physicians through the phone modem or direct personal calls to MHC. Information will cover physician/hospital data as well as spouse employment opportunities, schools, churches, recreation, etc.
- Residency Program Information — MHC staff and physician representatives will provide on-site information and insights into residency programs.
- State/National Outreach — MHC will advertise in state and national medical publications and exhibit at state/national medical meetings as part of its effort to recruit physicians to Michigan.

The "Medical Opportunities in Michigan" project is an outgrowth of MHC-organized focus groups with residency directors, hospital administrators, and other key players. The project will be financed primarily by the subscribers who need and want this assistance — like hospitals, HMOs, communities, physicians and physician group practices.

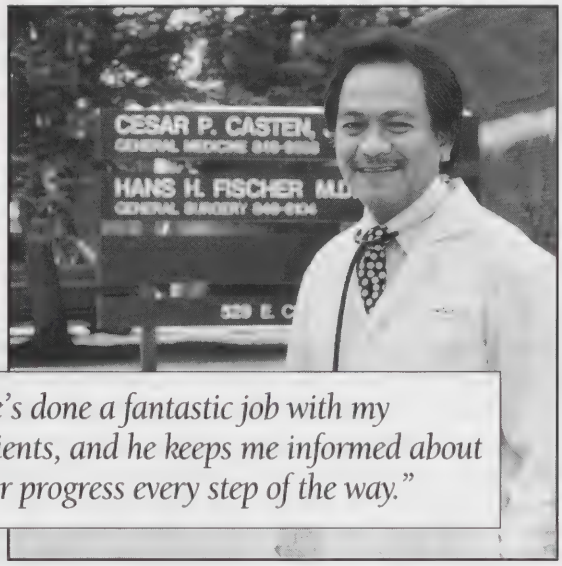

For roughly 40 years, The Michigan Health Council Placement Service has been helping match young physicians finishing residency training, physicians coming to Michigan and Michigan doctors wishing to change locations.

MHC has maintained close ties with MSMS, the Michigan Hospital Association, Blue Cross Blue Shield of Michigan as well as the medical schools and the many agencies and associations in the health care field.

For more information on the Michigan Health Council Placement Service, contact Anne Rosewarne at (517) 337-1615.

Herb Auer is past deputy director and former director of communications for MSMS.

Dr. Cesar Casten
Family Practice, Standish, MI

"The St. Luke's Specialist Referral Network introduced me to Dr. deBari. I work closely with a local foster home in our area that houses many individuals with paraplegia and other disabilities, and I frequently send these patients to Dr. deBari for the more specialized orthopedic care they need. It's a great relationship. I benefit. Dr. deBari benefits. And, of course, our patients benefit most of all."

Dr. Anthony deBari, Orthopedic Surgery
St. Luke's Specialist Referral Network, Saginaw, MI

"I've only been practicing in this area for three years, and St. Luke's Specialist Referral Network has been very helpful in marketing my practice. I've had many doctors refer patients to me and consult with me about a patient. I'm more than happy to do that. After all, that's what the Specialist Referral Network is all about. Physicians helping physicians."

SPECIALIST REFERRAL NETWORK

It's a simple idea. Rural physicians call St. Luke's Specialist Referral Network when they need the advice or services of a specialist. The Network contacts the appropriate specialist, arranges a phone consultation or makes a referral appointment, then calls the rural physician with the information. No hassles No waiting. A simple idea. And it's working.

Update on Physician Responsibility for Prescribing DMEPOS and Completing the Certificate of Medical Necessity

The Health Care Financing Administration (HCFA) entered into contracts early last year with four carriers to consolidate processing of claims for durable medical equipment, prosthetics and orthotics, and medical supplies (DMEPOS). AIC-AdminaStar in Indianapolis is the durable medical equipment regional carrier (DMERC) for region B which includes the state of Michigan.

The transfer of DMEPOS claims from the existing carriers will occur on a state by state basis; Michigan is scheduled to transfer February 1, 1994. As of this date, Michigan suppliers (including physicians who are also suppliers) will begin submitting DMEPOS claims to the DMERCS based on where the beneficiaries reside.

The following information has been submitted by AIC-AdminaStar to inform physicians of the DMERC transition and other mandates in processing Medicare DMEPOS claims.

Q - What is a physician's responsibility when prescribing Durable Medical Equipment, Prosthetics, Orthotics and Supplies (DMEPOS)?

A - Regulations specify that Durable Medical Equipment (DME) must serve a medically therapeutic benefit in order to be reimbursed under the program. The physician's prescription is the primary source of this information. The physician is responsible for supplying a complete, detailed, and accurate description of the patient's condition.

Section 4152 of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990 (OBRA '90) prohibits suppliers from distribution to physicians or beneficiaries any completed or partially completed forms or other documents required by Medicare to be submitted to show that a covered DME or related supplies who knowingly and willfully violates this provision is subject to a civil monetary penalty in an amount not to exceed $1,000 for each such form or document so completed and distributed.

Claims for DME home use and related supplies can be paid only if the items meet the Medicare definition of covered DME and are found to be medically necessary. The determination of medical necessity is made using documentation written by the beneficiary's physician.

Q - What are physician requirements for completing a Certificate of Medical Necessity (CMN)?

A - The physician is responsible for completing the medical documentation supporting the claim for Durable Medical Equipment (DME).

Physician completion of the required medical documentation assures that the DME items furnished to a beneficiary are those specifically needed for the beneficiary's unique medical condition. The documentation may consist of medical records, plans of care, discharge plans, prescription, and/or forms explicitly designed to facilitate the documentation of medical necessity. Regardless of the documentation format, the physician's documentation must establish that the DME being ordered is medically necessary for that particular patient and that coverage criteria are met.

In addition, the documentation must:

1. Be signed by the physician in his/her own hand and dated;
2. Include the diagnosis (ICD-9) and/or condition that is necessitating the item;
3. A realistic estimate of the total length of time the equipment will be needed;
4. Include the physician's name, UPIN, address, and telephone number
5. Provide substantiating medical information which communicates the need for DME;
   a. This can include the patient's general condition; and,
   b. A clinical assessment of the factors that the physician believes supports the medical need for items being ordered and/or;
   c. Treatment plan for the specific condition requiring the item.

The DME supplier may:

1. Complete only the administrative portions of the form or other comparable documentation:
   a. The beneficiary's name;
   b. The beneficiary's address;
   c. The beneficiary's Health Insurance Claim Number (HICN)
   d. The supplier's identifying information; and,
   e. The physician's name, address, and telephone number.
2. Enclose a cover letter to the physician:
   a. Giving a description of the patient's need; and,
   b. A complete narrative description of the specific equipment contemplated and the actual charge should be included as part of or in addition to the narrative description.

Physician may not charge suppliers or beneficiaries for completing DME certifications and recertification forms. Physicians requesting payment for completing Medicare required CMNs should be advised that the Office of Investigations considers the soliciting of such fees as a potential felony. Allegations of physicians charging suppliers or beneficiaries for completing CMNs should be reported to the DMERC Fraud and Abuse Unit for investigation at the address listed below:

DMERC Fraud and Abuse Unit
Post Office Box 6128
Indianapolis, IN 46206-6128

Audit of CMNs, prior authorization, and prescription requirements

The DMERC Fraud and Abuse Unit will be conducting random sample audits of all CMNs submitted to the DMERC; approved and denied, both EMC and hard copy. The purpose of the audit is to ensure that there are hard copy CMNs to support electronic CMNs, and to determine whether:

- A supplier completed any part of the medical necessity justification before or after the physician completed the justification;
- The recipient of the equipment or supplies were charged and paid deductible and coinsurance;
- The recipient initiated the request for the item(s) or was approached by the supplier;
- The diagnosis and other statements in CMNs or prior authorization are consistent with the medical records
- Equipment/supplies billed were actually received by the beneficiaries; and,
- Whether the items were received as billed.

In order to determine the medical necessity of the items billed, the DMERC Fraud and Abuse Unit will be requesting medical records from the prescribing physician. Upon receipt of a request for documentation, the prescribing physician should forward to the DMERC Fraud and Abuse Unit the required medical documentation which assures that the DME items furnished to a beneficiary are those specifically needed for the beneficiary's medical condition; i.e., medical records, plans for care, discharge plans, prescription and/or forms explicitly designed to facilitate the documentation of medical necessity. A copy of the completed CMN by itself would not provide sufficient documentation of medical necessity.

Offer for activations at participating locations in Bay City, Detroit (and metropolitan area), Flint, Grand Rapids, Lansing, Midland, Muskegon, Monroe, Port Huron, and Saginaw. Airtime is additional for features. Roaming charges, long distance and taxes not included. May not be used with any other Cellular One® offer. If during the term of your service contract you are no longer an MSMS member, regular service rates will apply. Other restrictions apply.

MSMS Announces New Member Benefit!

The Michigan State Medical Society and its Group Insurance Trust are pleased to announce the selection of Auto Owners Insurance Company as the exclusive writer of group auto and homeowner insurance coverage for member physicians.

Auto Owners Insurance Company with home offices in Lansing, Michigan, is rated A++ by A.M. Best. With assets totaling over three billion dollars and premiums in excess of one billion dollars, Auto Owners operates in 20 states.

Auto Owners Insurance Company has designed a group auto and homeowners program to meet the diverse needs of MSMS member physicians. The MSMS program assures access to a complete package of coverages for homes, automobiles, boats, snowmobiles, jewelry and other valuables.

For more information about this exciting new MSMS member benefit and a personalized quotation, call Stratton, Cheeseman & Walsh, Inc., MSMS's affiliated insurance agency, at 1-800-968-4929 and put your membership to work for you.

Genesee County's HIV programs serve as a model for community cooperation

By Tracy A. Baker

Not usually identified as an epicenter of the HIV epidemic, Genesee County is leading the way in providing services to the HIV-infected population in the region.

Through the efforts of the Genesee County HIV Task Force, comprised of 26 members representing the medical and dental communities and many community-based organizations, several innovative programs have been established to provide extensive medical and support services.

The programs in place in Genesee County include those traditionally associated with community-based organizations offered through Wellness HIV/AIDS Services, Inc., of Flint. Educational programs and support groups for HIV-infected people, their partners, friends and families are where much of Wellness energies are targeted.

Even though the Wellness programs provided an exceptional support system, members of the HIV Task Force saw an unmet need in the continuum of care.

Having identified a critical area needing attention, the Task Force cast its efforts into establishing the HIV Service Center. Opened last fall, the HIV Service Center is a unique resource in Flint. The Center provides case management, mental health and substance abuse counseling services to 207 clients. Robert Bader, executive director of Wellness Networks, also is responsible for operations of the HIV Service Center. To assist him is a staff of two social workers, a nurse, a substance abuse therapist and an executive assistant.

GCMS efforts credited

The Genesee County HIV Task Force was established by the Genesee County Medical Society in 1987 after receiving several requests from local community groups. At the time, the number of cases of HIV was relatively low in the area, but the community needed direction to provide adequate services for those affected by HIV.

The Genesee County Medical Society stepped in and, working closely with Wellness HIV/AIDS Services, Inc., laid the foundation for years of productive, patient-oriented programming. Robert M. Soderstrom, MD, GCMS president, is very pleased with the involvement of member physicians with the HIV Task Force.

"This was a very innovative program and I am very proud of the group of physicians who came forward to lead the effort," says Doctor Soderstrom.

Bader also praised the Genesee County Medical Society involvement. "You would be hard pressed to find another medical society that has taken this strong a stand on HIV," he says. "They played a large part in the success of the program."

Community involvement key

The strength of the Task Force lies with its members, according to Michael C. Boucree, MD, current chair of the Genesee County HIV Task Force. "It is a multi-faceted organization that represents the best minds and most current knowledge on HIV."

The defining characteristic of the Genesee County HIV Task Force is its ability to bring together people from various backgrounds for a common good. Though many approached the original group with diverse agendas, the differences were overcome by a desire to provide the best possible care for HIV patients.

Several Task Force members view this as a great achievement of the Genesee County effort. "In the beginning it was phenomenal that turf battles were put aside to come together for a common good," says Willys F. Mueller, MD, founding chair of the Genesee HIV Task Force.

Task Force member Jack R. Price, MD, agrees. "An eclectic group of people met in a cooperative manner and despite battles, worked toward a common goal."

Cathy O. Blight, MD, a Flint pathologist and member of the MSMS Board of Directors, praises the Task Force for its efforts. "The quality of health care patients have received and the quality of life they now enjoy have been greatly improved, thanks to the efforts of the task force. Members of the task force should feel most proud of their achievements."

The volunteer efforts of the Genesee medical community played a large part in the success of the HIV programs in Flint. However, GCMS Executive Director Peter A. Levine points out that it could not have been accomplished by the medical community alone. He credits Wellness with much of the success. "Wellness created an environment that allowed physicians to become involved in the planning and oversight of an incredibly unique and innovative continuum of care program," he says. "This atmosphere encouraged physicians to participate."

In addition, the Community Foundation of Greater Flint is another local organization deserving of recognition. Thanks to its generous funding and progressive thinking, both the HIV Service Center and Wellness HIV/AIDS Services have been given a much greater opportunity for success.

Looking ahead

Effective and innovative programs are underway in Genesee County, but local efforts are not resting on their laurels. The Genesee County HIV Task Force is planning for the future.

One of the main tasks of the Genesee County HIV Task Force over the next several years will be the coordination of a nine county consortium responsible for the regional distribution of federal funds for continuum of care. This is funding awarded through the Ryan White Care Act.

While the Task Force is pleased with its progress in providing care for HIV infected patients, members feel more work is needed in the area of HIV prevention.

"We have a good foundation and guiding principles, but we do not have a handle on prevention," says Doctor Boucree. "We do not have answers about HIV prevention strategies. HIV breaks all the rules."

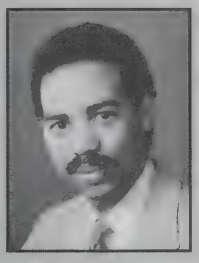

Getting a handle on effective and appropriate HIV prevention strategies is an enormous challenge, but based on its past successes, it is a challenge the Genesee County HIV Task Force is certain to meet.

Preparing for Change.

MSMS offers the assistance you need

By Fred E. Patterson, MD
Chair, PO Committee and MSMS Board Member

When MSMS conducted a series of focus groups on "Medicine in the Year 2002" less than two years ago, the majority of the 50 physicians who participated in the project expressed concerns about their future and their ability to preserve a sense of autonomy and control in their professional lives. Health system reform was on the horizon, but few could envision the exact changes it would bring.

With President Clinton's health system reform plan now in full view, physician concerns for their future are ever stronger. Worries about their autonomy and control have never been greater.

What came out of the "Medicine in the Year 2002" focus groups nearly two years ago was this: that our future is in our hands. "We are the makers of the future in everything we do and say and think," said then MSMS President Thomas C. Payne, MD. "It seems especially incumbent upon us then, to do and say and think what we want the future to be."

MSMS has been listening to your concerns. The recent establishment of its Physician Organization and Management Services (POMS) division is just one example of the many initiatives MSMS is taking to help physicians prepare for change... and to preserve their autonomy and control.

This month's cover story explores the many forces that are driving the changes in our health care delivery system. More importantly, it details the steps MSMS is taking through its POMS division to help physicians position themselves for the future. I encourage you to read the following pages carefully and then decide to take an active role in shaping your future. Afterall, it is far better to act today than to react tomorrow.

Preparing for Change

POs and PHOs are your ticket to autonomy and control

By Tom Wolff

Three key forces are driving the changes in our health care delivery system. They are: rising health care costs, the high number of Americans who have either no health insurance coverage or inadequate coverage, and the perception that there is a considerable amount of waste in the health care delivery system. Undoubtedly, the most significant of these forces is rising health care costs.

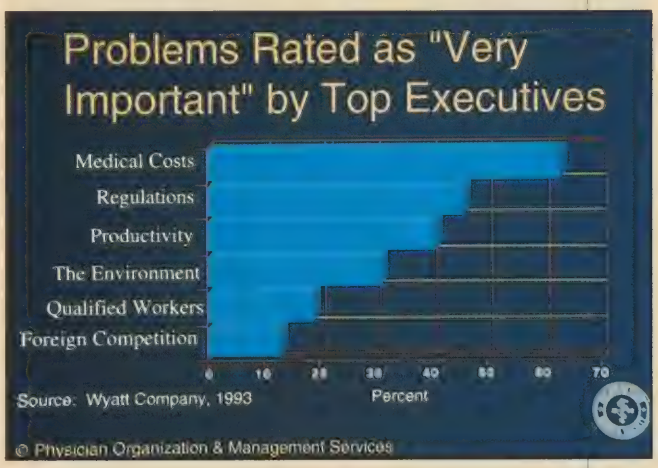

Health care costs in the United States have risen dramatically over the past 30 years and are projected to increase significantly without any fundamental changes in the health care delivery system. In 1960, US health care costs were $27 billion; in 1993, it is estimated that US health care expenditures exceeded $900 billion. Moreover, by the year 2000, some experts are projecting health care costs may be as high as $1.7 trillion.

The rapid increase in health care costs has gotten the attention of top business executives, so much so that they now rate medical costs as a more significant problem than worker productivity, government regulations, and foreign competition. (see illustration) It's no surprise that business executives are so concerned about health care costs since average per capita employee health care costs have more than doubled in the past eight years from less than $2,000 per employee to nearly $4,000 per employee. Business executives argue that these expenses hurt companies' profitability and make it more difficult for them to compete against foreign business. In addition, many employers have the burden of paying their retirees' health care costs.

Federal and state governments also are concerned about rising health care costs because they fund the Medicare and Medicaid programs.

Two significant changes ahead

Two significant changes are occurring in the health care delivery system that will affect the way physicians practice medicine. The first change is the trend toward capitation and the primary care gatekeeper model. The second change is the growth of large vertically integrated delivery systems, which are comprised of physicians, hospitals and insurance companies. These changes are well underway in some parts of the country, particularly in California, and are spreading to other parts of the country, including Michigan. Regardless of whether President Clinton's health care reform plan is enacted, these changes will continue to occur in Michigan.

For those of you who don't know, capitation is a fundamentally different method of paying physicians than fee-for-service. Under capitation, physicians are paid a specified amount per covered life per month. Physicians then must provide all of the medically required services for that person during that period of time for that amount of money. Thus, the physician receives the same amount of money for each covered life regardless of the amount, type, and cost of the medical services provided to the person.

The trend toward capitation is occuring because businesses are becoming increasingly concerned that fee-for-service medicine has helped to fuel the rapid rise in US health care costs. Businesses want lower, more predictable, health care costs and believe that shifting the risk to physicians and hospitals will cause them to be more prudent in their use of health care resources. There is, in fact, some data that suggests that health care costs, in general, are lower in HMOs.

- HMO costs tend to be lower than costs in both traditional indemnity plans and preferred provider plans. In some markets, HMO costs are markedly lower, while in others the difference is not as great. It is significant, however, that, according to A. Foster Higgins & Co., average HMO costs in the United States are more than $700 per person less than the cost of indemnity coverage in 1992.
- Not only are HMO costs less on average than indemnity costs, but they are increasing at a slower rate than the rate of increase for indemnity plans. Business executives and patients are becoming increasingly aware of these cost differentials. The result has been a four-fold increase in HMO enrollment since 1981.

There are several reasons why HMOs tend to be less costly. One reason is that, in HMOs, patients are usually seen by a primary care physician first and are less likely to be referred to specialists. The result is that there are fewer tests and procedures performed in HMOs. In addition, fewer patients are admitted into the hospital and those who are admitted tend to be discharged sooner. In summary, a different, less resource-intensive type of medicine is practiced in HMOs. While some may argue that HMO medicine is substandard medicine, there is no convincing data that this is the case. Thus, it is not hard to see why capitation is attractive to business executives and patients since it tends to be significantly less costly without any demonstrable quality difference.

Implications vary for primary care physicians and specialists

The implications for physicians of the trend toward capitation differ significantly depending on whether a physician is a primary care physician or a specialist. Managed care will likely result in an increased demand for primary care physician services because of the key role primary care physicians play as the gatekeeper or coordinator of patient care. Another factor that will likely boost demand is the increased emphasis on prevention that usually occurs in managed care plans. The increased demand for primary care physicians' services and the current shortage of such physicians should result in higher incomes for primary care physicians over the next five to ten years.

The outlook for specialists under managed care is much bleaker. Because patients will not be able to go directly to specialists, there will likely be reduced utilization of specialty physicians' services. The result is likely to be an oversupply of some specialists and, thus, a decline in the incomes of some specialists.

Implications for hospitals

The implications for hospitals of the growth of managed care is also very bleak. Because fewer patients are hospitalized in managed care plans, there will likely be a continued decline in demand for in-patient services. The result will be an oversupply of hospital beds with many hospitals merging or closing.

The second significant change that will affect the way physicians practice medicine is the growth of large, vertically integrated delivery systems. These systems are composed of physicians, hospitals, and insurance companies who will compete against one another for patients on the basis of quality and cost. Already, on the West coast, in Minneapolis-St. Paul, and in several other areas around the country, many large systems have been developed which force physicians to join them or risk losing their patient base.

> "The only physicians who may be able to afford to adopt a "head in the sand" approach are those only a few years from retirement."

In Michigan, nearly half of all physicians are still in solo practice while another 42 percent are in single specialty groups, most of which are small. Only 10 percent of Michigan's physicians are in multi-specialty groups, which tend to be larger than single specialty groups. Thus, the trend toward large integrated delivery systems will be a major change for most Michigan physicians.

To summarize, we are seeing a trend away from fee-for-service medicine toward the primary care gatekeeper model and capitation and away from solo practitioners and small group practices toward large vertically integrated delivery systems. These are extremely significant changes for physicians.

Physicians have options

Physicians have several options for responding to these fundamental changes. One strategy is to simply ignore the changes and hope that they do not affect your medical practice. This is an extremely dangerous strategy because physicians are likely to lose increasing numbers of patients to large integrated delivery systems. The only physicians who may be able to afford to adopt a "head in the sand" approach are those only a few years from retirement. The second and third alternatives involve physicians joining a delivery system established by a hospital, HMO or insurance company. However, many physicians would rather not become an employee or join an HMO or insurance company network. These physicians are looking at physician organizations and physician-hospital organizations as a means to organize and operate their own integrated delivery system.

Many physicians are interested in becoming employees of a hospital or HMO because of the security that employment appears to offer. Many hospitals want to control the integrated delivery systems that are being established. To do so, these hospitals are hiring physicians, particularly primary care physicians.

The advantages of forming POs

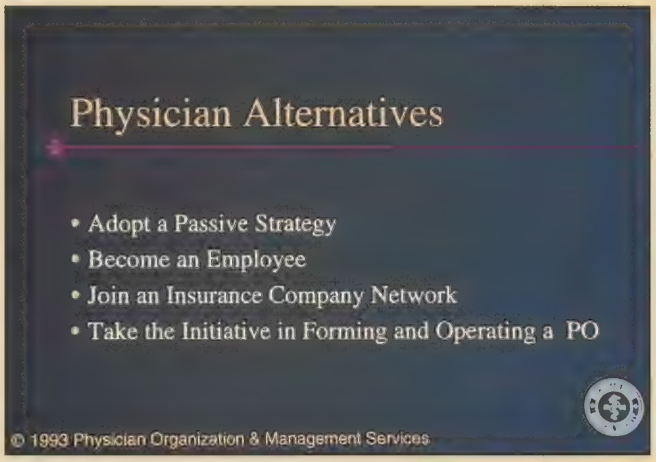

MSMS strongly believes that physician organizations (POs) pose a viable alternative for physicians and should thus be seriously considered.

A PO is defined as "a business entity formed by a group of physicians to pursue managed care contracting opportunities and other cooperative ventures, either independently or in cooperation with a hospital or other entity."

It is important to emphasize that a PO is not a means by which physicians can avoid managed care; instead, it is a vehicle through which physicians can own and operate a managed care organization that is sensitive to the concerns of physicians and patients.

There are many reasons why physicians should establish a PO:

- First, the PO allows physicians to take advantage of managed care contracting opportunities either with a hospital or independently.

- Second, a PO allows physicians to be the owners of a delivery system rather than be owned. Thus, physicians, themselves, are able to decide the key issues of credentialing, quality, and utilization.
- Third, the PO enables physicians to unite behind common goals and thereby defend against the divide and conquer strategies of hospitals and insurance companies.

- Fourth, a PO can result in efficiencies that lower physicians' costs.
- Finally, a PO usually results in more effective physician representation in a physician-hospital organization (PHO) because physicians are united behind common objectives. When physicians create a PHO without first establishing a PO, they often have no organizational structure through which to channel their input into the PHO.

In establishing a PO, several issues will need to be addressed. One common issue is whether a PO should be open to all physicians interested in joining, or whether criteria for membership should be established. Most successful POs find that they need to establish strict criteria in order to ensure that only high-quality, cost-effective physicians are members of the PO. While some POs establish the criteria at the "front-end" to ensure that only high-quality physicians join the PO, most POs allow all interested physicians to join, but with the knowledge that they will have to meet specified criteria at a later date.

Another issue is whether the PO should have a primary care or specialist orientation. Most POs find that t be attractive to payers, they need to be primary care-oriented. This usually means that primary care physicians will have a majority of the seats on the PO Board and that the PO will utilize a primary care gate-keeper approach.

Another issue that arises in establishing a PO is whether a hospital medical staff can function as a PO. It is important to keep in mind that a PO is a business entity, while a hospital medical staff is not. The primary functions of a medcal staff relates to credentialing and quality assurance, while a PO is oriented towards business issues such as managed care contracting and achieving administrative efficiencies. Thus, while a PO may consist of most of the members of a particular hospital staff, the hospital medical staff per se should not be the PO. There also is concern that the hospital medical staff may be too closely allied with the hospital and may be not have adequate primary care representation.

> "Only 10 percent of Michigan's physicians are in multi-specialty groups, which tend to be larger than single-specialty groups. Thus, the trend toward large integrated delivery systems will be a major change for most Michigan physicians."

Two major PO models

There are two major PO models: the independent physician network, or IPA model, and the group practice model.

The independent physician network model has the advantage of allowing physicians to come together for managed care contracting, while at the same time allowing physicians to maintain their separate practices for non-managed care business. This is significant because many physicians are not comfortable in immediately merging their practices. The independent network model allows physicians to establish a physician-owned and operated managed care entity without taking the drastic step of merging their practices. Independent physician network groups can be either single-specialty or multi-specialty. However, given the trend towards the primary care gate-keeper model, a PO network comprised exclusively or predominantly of specialists may not be competitive in the marketplace, unless it has some contractual relationships with primary care-dominated physician groups.

The group practice PO model may be a more efficient way to deliver services, particularly if the physicians are located in one site. There are three PO group practice models: the single-specialty group, the multi-specialty group, or a group practice without walls. Again, because of the changing health care market, a single-specialty group practice comprised of primary care physicians should be a viable PO. However, a group practice comprised only of specialists may still need to have some type of relationship with a group of primary care physicians in order to be economically viable.

The group practice without walls concept has received considerable attention in the literature. However, by having physicians maintain their separate locations, there may be fewer adminstrative efficiencies achieved.

Success depends upon many factors

Many factors contribute to the success of a PO. These factors include:

- First, it is vital that a PO should develop a series of goals it wishes to pursue and one or more strategies for achieving them. This typically requires engaging in a strategic planning process.
- Second, a PO must understand the health care marketplace in which it is operating. This requires a careful assessment of the goals of businesses, HMOs, PPOs and other payers.
- Third, because a PO will likely be competing against other managed care organizations that are primary care-oriented, the PO needs a large network of high quality primary care physicians.
- Fourth, a PO that offers a full continuum of health services including hospital services, nursing home services, home health care services, and hospice services is likely to be even more competitive. Since a PO often assumes some financial risk, either through capitation or withheld payment arrangements, it is essential that it provide services in the least intensive setting medically necessary.
- Fifth, a PO should have a broad geographic distribution of physicians, particularly primary care physicians, throughout its market area.
- Sixth, a PO needs an effective system of utilization management and quality assurance.
- Seventh, a PO needs to develop data to demonstrate to payers that it is providing high quality, cost-effective care.
- Eighth, a PO should be selective concerning which physicians it allows to participate.
- Ninth, a PO needs to have a sophisticated management information system to link physicians together and to provide information concerning quality and utilization.
- Tenth, a PO needs adequate capitalization to pay for consulting and legal costs, as well as a state-of-the-art computer system.
- Eleventh, a PO needs strong physician leadership that will unite its members and work effectively with hospital administrators and other parties.
- Twelfth, a PO needs professional management with particular expertise in marketing the PO to payers.

- Finally, a PO needs to engender a spirit of trust and collegiality among its physicians. This may be challenging because many physicians are not used to working in large organizations.

PHO a natural progression

After physicians establish a PO, they may want to establish a formal PHO relationship with a hospital or hospital system. Whether they do so may depend on their relationship with the hospital. A PHO is defined as "a business entity formed jointly by a PO with a hospital or hospital system to pursue one or more cooperative ventures." These ventures are usually related to managed care.

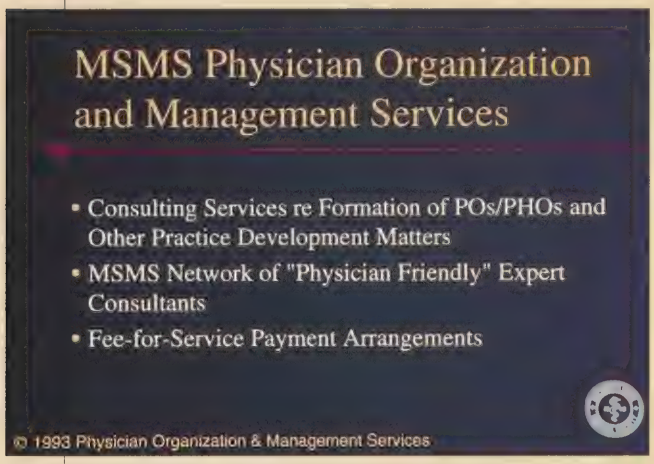

It is important to note that a PHO generally envisions the physicians and hospital as co-equals. Like a PO, a PHO does not require physicians to merge their practices.

Physicians typically form a PO before establishing a PHO. However, some physicians have worked directly with a hospital to establish a PHO without establishing a PO first. Many of these physicians have found that the hospital dominates the organization even if physicians have equal representation on the PHO board. This occurs because the hospital representatives usually have clearly defined goals and strategies, while the physicians have not gone through the process of developing common objectives and strategies. As a result, the physician members of the PHO board tend to represent their own interests, rather than those of the entire physician group.

The key advantage the PHO provides is that it allows a group of physicians and a hospital to become a single, integrated negotiating entity that can often compete more effectively for managed care contracts than either could by negotiating separately with payers. This is the case because businesses and HMOs increasingly want one-stop-shopping for all of their health care services.

The PHO may provide several additional advantages. These advantages include increasing efficiency, promoting the integration of information systems, and safeguarding physician autonomy.

Many of the key success factors for a PHO are identical to those of a PO. However, there are four factors that are unique to PHOs. One factor is equal representation by physicians and hospital representatives on the PHO board and all PHO committees. Equal representation ensures that neither the physicians nor the hospital can take an action without the support of at least one member of the other group. Some PHOs even require that a majority of both the physician members of the PHO and a majority of the hospital members of the PHO Board is required for any major decision.

Another key success factor is the clear delineation of roles of physicians and hospital administrators in the PHO. Specifically, physicians should have control over medical issues such as credentialing, quality assurance, and utilization management.

In addition, physicians and hospitals should both contribute financially to the PHO. While the hospital will usually provide more capital, it is important for physicians to provide some financial support to the PHO in order to have a real commitment to the organization.

Finally, the development of trust and collegiality between the physicians and the hospital administration is an absolutely essential ingredient for a successful PHO.

Health system reform revisited

Discussion of POs and PHOs would not be complete without briefly reviewing five key components of President's Clinton health system reform plan: universal health insurance coverage; health plans; health insurance purchasing alliances; national health board; and global budget.

Under President Clinton's plan, 37 million Americans who are now uninsured would have health insurance coverage. The principal means for providing coverage would be to require all employers to provide health insurance for virtually all of their employees. the Clinton plan would phase in this requirement over several years and would provide financial assistance for small businesses to help them afford coverage for their employees.

Medicaid would be rolled into the private sector, thus eliminating the payment differentials that now restrict Medicaid patients' access to needed health care services.

"The key advantage the PHO provides is that it allows a group of physicians and a hospital to become a single, integrated negotiating entity that can often compete more effectively for managed care contracts"

All Americans would have a health security card that would guarantee them access to a comprehensive, uniform basic benefits package. The benefits package would include coverage for comprehensive medical and hospital services and specified preventive services.

Health plans would provide coverage for the basic benefits package through contracts with state or regional health alliances. Health plans may be operated by an insurance company, a health maintenance organization, or by physicians and hospitals. The efforts of MSMS to encourage the development of physician organizations and physician-hospital organizations will help physicians in this new competitive environment.

The Clinton plan would allow physicians to participate with more than one health plan. This is an important protection that both the AMA and MSMS strongly support.

Health plans would be required to accept all eligible individuals regardless of their health history. In addition, plans would not be able to exclude coverage for pre-existing conditions and coverage would continue for persons when they change jobs.

Health alliances, which would be formed at the state and regional level, are the centerpiece of President Clinton's managed competition reform proposal. Every state would have at least one health alliance, but there may be several regional alliances in each state. Health alliances are essentially purchasing cooperatives that would act as conduits between health plans and individual or group purchasers. The intent of the health alliances is to aggregate the purchasing power of small employers, the currently uninsured and Medicaid beneficiaries. Health alliances would have to contract with a health plan that meets prescribed standards.

Under the Clinton plan, all coverage would be purchased through an alliance, except for employers with more than 5,000 employees. These employers would be permitted to form their own corporate alliance and contract directly with plans.

President Clinton's plan also would create an independent, seven-person National Health Board. The National Health Board would update the basic benefits package, develop "report cards" to help evaluate the quality of health plans, oversee the health plans and alliances, and enforce the national budget for health care. At least one member of the National Health Board would represent the interests of states.

The AMA and MSMS oppose the National Health Board concept because it would result in an unnecessary new federal bureaucracy. We also are concerned that no place has been reserved on the Board for a physician.

President Clinton's plan proposes a national health budget to hold health care inflation to that of the other sectors of the economy. The target increase in premiums for 1996 is the Consumer Price Index (CPI) plus 1.5 percent, CPI plus 1 percent for 1997 and CPI plus 0.5 percent for 1998. In 1999 and beyond, the target increase would be the CPI. The national health budget would be adjusted at the alliance level for risk factors like age and gender.

The AMA and MSMS staunchly oppose establishing a national health care budget. We believe that decision-making in health care based on economics is not in the best interest of patients and will lead to rationing of health care.

MSMS has developed several health care reform "tools" to assist physicians in educating patients and themselves concerning the Clinton plan and the changes in the health care delivery system. (See page 29 for information and order form.)

A review of MSMS initiatives

MSMS has undertaken many initiatives to assist physicians in not simply surviving, but hopefully even thriving, in the rapidly changing health care delivery system. In November, 1992 MSMS established a new committee called the Physician Organizations Committee. The Committee is chaired by MSMS Board Member Fred E. Patterson, MD, a Jackson radiologist. The purpose of the Committee is to educate physicians concerning the changes in the health care delivery system and to assist physicians in establishing POs and PHOs. A major part of the Committee's educational strategy was to conduct ten seminars concerning health system reform and POs and PHOs in the summer of 1993. Nearly 300 physicians attended these seminars.

The Physician Organizations Committee then sponsored the highly successful September 10-11 PO/PHO Conference. Several nationally known experts, including futurist Jeff Goldsmith and consultant Nathan Kaufman provided valuable information concerning POs, PHOs and health system reform.

> "MSMS believes strongly that POs and PHOs present a real opportunity for physicians to be owners of an integrated delivery system and, thus, merit strong consideration."

In addition, MSMS has published many articles in Michigan Medicine concerning POs and PHOs and will continue to do so. Also, MSMS staff has spoken to nearly 100 groups of physicians in Michigan and other states concerning POs and PHOs. Finally, MSMS has created a new division entitled Physician Organization Management Services (POMS) to help physicians in organizing and operating POs and PHOs.

POMS has brought together a group of "physician friendly" experts to provide consulting and legal services to physicians concerning the formation of POs and PHOs. The services of POMS are offered on a fee-for-service basis.

The initial services needed by physicians in establishing a PO include:

- an environmental analysis that examines the market in which the physicians are practicing;
- an organizational analysis that examines how the physicians who are establishing the PO can operate their offices in a more cost-effective manner;
- a strategic planning process to establish objectives for the PO and strategies for achieving the objectives;
- legal services; and
- information systems.

MSMS offers all of these services through its POMS division.

Other MSMS services

Other services also are available through POMS. They include:

- Practice Management
- Accounting
- Risk Management, and
- Organizational Dynamics

MSMS also recently entered an agreement with William M. Mercer to further assist physicians on establishing POs and PHOs. (See article on page 30 for details.)

In evaluating your options, it is important not to panic. There is time to make a thoughtful and deliberate choice that best suits your needs. In making the decision that is best for you, it is important to have adequate information. The MSMS PO/PHO conferences provide physicians with detailed information concerning the changes that are occurring in the health care system and how they can best respond. The next PO/PHO conference is on February 25-26 in Dearborn.

Conclusion

In conclusion, MSMS believes that fundamental changes are occurring in the US health care delivery system. Two key changes that will significantly affect the way physicians practice medicine are the trends towards capitation and towards large, vertically integrated delivery systems. These changes are likely to continue to occur regardless of whether President Clinton's health plan is enacted. MSMS believes strongly that POs and PHOs present a real opportunity for physicians to be owners of an integrated delivery system and, thus, merit strong consideration.

MSMS is actively engaged in helping physicians adapt to the changing environment by educating them concerning the changes and by providing consulting services through our new POMS division.

Editor's note: This article features information provided in a speech and slide show prepared by the MSMS Physician Organization and Management Services (POMS) division. To arrange for a presentation of the speech and slide show, contact Tom Wolff at MSMS.

MSMS/AMA offer tools for educating patients

HEALTH SYSTEM REFORM

MSMS and the AMA are combining forces to give every Michigan physician the tools to inform their patients of the ramifications of proposed health system reform.

You need only complete and mail this order form to obtain the tools to discuss and explain the proposed changes to your patients, your colleagues, your family and your friends. The materials listed below come from the AMA and MSMS. They will be supplemented as the reform debate continues.

Preparing for Change

MSMS joins forces with international consulting firm to assist physicians in preparing for health system reform

By William J. Carbone

What do you get when you ally the country's most effective state medical association and the largest consulting firm in the field of benefits, compensation, and human resource management?

The answer is a one-of-a-kind, synergistic alliance, the best of the best. Forging this alliance are the Michigan State Medical Society and William M. Mercer, Inc., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Marsh McLennan, with total stockholders' equity of $1.1 billion. Mercer has more than 6,500 employees with offices in 24 countries.

To assist MSMS members in the continued development of physician organizations (POs), and physician-hospital organizations (PHOs), practice management and enhancement services, we are pleased and proud to announce this new alliance. The combination will provide the most comprehensive and sophisticated services available to physicians anywhere in the United States.

Mercer has joined MSMS through its Physician Organization and Management Services (POMS) division. Both MSMS and Mercer are focused on the development of integrated health care systems in Michigan. Mercer brings to this alliance actuaries, physician, clinical, human resource and legal consultants, along with extensive experience assisting organizations and employers in implementing health care plans, controlling health care costs, and insuring that quality care is number one.

Mercer has an excellent track record in the health care field and in assisting physicians in preparing for health system reform. Mercer's health care expertise focuses on: market knowledge, actuarial experience, and physician/clinical knowledge. This expertise will channel through the MSMS leadership and POMS to the physician members they serve.

In the development of POs and PHOs, MSMS/POMS and Mercer are dedicated to developing a physician/hospital network that will:

- perform market research;
- initiate quality improvement programs;
- expand physician/hospital networks;
- extend contracts to other networks and self-insured employers;
- manage laboratory services, including capitation rate development;
- perform credentialing and provider relation support;
- share risk for hospital services;
- perform utilization review for inpatient and outpatient services, including specialty referrals; and
- measure outcomes for specific treatment protocols.

> "MSMS/POMS and Mercer have joined together to empower Michigan physicians in leadership roles to act effectively in times of rapid change and to continue to deliver the finest medical care for the benefit of Michigan citizens. This synergistic partnership of MSMS/POMS and Mercer epitomizes the best of the best."

MSMS/POMS and Mercer have joined together to empower Michigan physicians andhospitals in leadership roles to act effectively in times of rapid change and to continue to deliver the finest medical care for the benefit of Michigan citizens.

You will begin to receive and hear more information about this alliance that promises to effectively position physicians in Michigan in proactive leadership roles, leading the way in health system reform.

William Carbone is chief of Physician Organization/ Physician-Hospital Organization Development for MSMS.

"The Masters Series"

Cornerstones to Successful Health System Reform

Session II of V

Conference Purposes

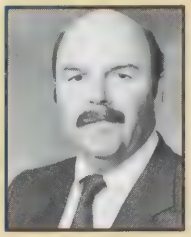

This conference will:

- Discuss the Clinton health system reform plan, its implications and prospects for legislative action
- Explore how physician organizations and physician hospital organizations fit into health system reform
- Explain how POs and PHOs should be organized and operated

These questions will be answered:

- What are the key elements of successful POs/PHOs?
- What types of POs/PHOs do payers want t buy?
- What issues need to be addressed in organizing POs/PHOs?
- How should physician reimbursement be determined in a PO/PHO?
- How are utilization management and quality assurance issues addressed in a PO
- How are management information systems utilized in a PO/PHO?

Registration Information on Reverse

Registration

The registration fee for this one-and-a-half day conference is $225 per person for MSMS, MAOPS or MMGMA members. The non-member rate is $350. Registration fee includes Friday's reception buffet, desserts, Saturday's continental breakfast, refreshments, lunch and all program materials.

Hotel Accommodations

Overnight rooms have been held at the Ritz Carlton Hotel in Dearborn for Friday night, February 25, 1994. Individuals should make their own hotel reservations by calling (313) 441-2000 by January 25, 1994. Please identify yourself with this MSMS conference to receive the reduced rate of $102 single or double occupancy. After January 25, this rate will still apply, but availability will be limited.

Special Accommodations

MSMS is interested in making its programs readily accessible and usable by individuals with disabilities. Please let us know if you have special accommodation needs that would make our programs more accessible or comfortable for you.

Cancellation Policy

You may cancel your registration up to ten business days before the seminar and receive a 100 percent refund. If you need to cancel with less than ten business days notice, you may 1) send a substitute from your medical practice, 2) transfer your registration (minus a $25 handling fee) to another seminar of your choice within the same calendar year.

Preventing HIV infection, particularly in women and infants, an urgent public health priority, MDPH reports

By William N. Hall, MD, MPH

The Michigan Department of Public Health is currently conducting a survey measuring maternal Human Immunodeficiency Virus (HIV) antibody prevalence. The survey was begun in July 1988, as one part of the family of seroprevalence surveys funded by the United States Public Health Service.

The maternal antibody seroprevalence survey is designed to monitor the prevalence of HIV infection among women giving birth. This survey is particularly valuable because it provides a view of the HIV epidemic that cuts across the broad geographical, socioeconomic, ethnic and age spectra of the population of women giving birth in Michigan. It is powerful because it includes virtually all women giving birth in the state. The data collected through this survey over the past 4.5 years provide us with a key indicator of trends in the transmission of HIV infection over that time.

> "The data lead us to two important conclusions about trends in HIV infection in Michigan women giving birth. First, prevalence rates among minority mothers and mothers residing in the Detroit MSA remain well above those of white mothers and mothers residing outside of the Detroit MSA. Second, maternal seroprevalence rates have remained relatively stable within all Michigan regions, for blacks and Hispanics and among different age groups over time. However, we may now be seeing the beginning of a decline in the rate of maternal HIV infection prevalence for white women, although this trend has not reached statistical significance."

Results

Between 69,556 and 75,004 specimens have been included in each half-year study interval since the survey began in July 1988. A total of 654,662 specimens have been included in the survey; 425 or 6.5 per 10,000 have tested positive.

Three hundred thirty-five of the positives occurred among the 308,866 newborns whose mothers were known to reside in the Detroit Metropolitan Statistical Area (MSA). The rate of maternal antibody seropositivity for the Detroit MSA was 10.8 per 10,000 for the 4.5 year period (see table). Ninety of the positives occurred among the 328,011 newborns whose mothers were known to reside in the five regions of the state outside of the Detroit MSA. The rate of maternal antibody seropositivity outside of the Detroit MSA was 2.7 per 10,000. Although seropositivity rates vary among half-year survey periods, no consistent upward or downward trend is apparent within any of the regions.

Over the 4.5 years between April 1989 and December 1992, 249 of 108,883 or 22.9 per 10,000 specimens from blacks tested positive. Fifty-six of 381,716 or 1.5 per 10,000 specimens from whites tested positive. Nine of 11,139 or 8.1 per 10,000 specimens from Hispanics tested positive. The rates of seropositivity in blacks and Hispanics are 15.6 and 5.5 times, respectively, the rate in white mothers. No significant upward or downward trend in seropositivity by race can be discerned over the half-year survey periods, although a downward trend in the rate for white women approaches statistical significance.

The rate of maternal antibody seropositivity is fairly evenly distributed across the full range of mothers' age groupings. There is no statistical significant upward or downward trend within any of the age groups over time.

Discussion

Women continue to represent an increasing proportion of the AIDS cases reported through our country's active AIDS case surveillance system. The AIDS case surveillance data probably underestimate the extent of the HIV epidemic in women relative to men because the epidemic of HIV infection in women began later and has not yet been reflected fully in diagnosed and reported AIDS cases. The maternal antibody seroprevalence data help to reveal the current level of HIV infection in women more effectively because they show rates of HIV infection in largely asymptomatic women, closer to the time of infection. The maternal antibody seroprevalence database also has the advantage of remarkable completeness and comparability with similar surveys done in other parts of the United States.

TABLE

Maternal HIV antibody seropositivity for area of residence and race among Michigan women giving birth in Michigan hospitals between July 1988 and December 1992.

	Number Positive	Rate per 10,000
Place of Residence
Detroit MSA*	335	10.8
Michigan outside Detroit MSA*	90	2.7
Race
White	56	1.5
Black	249	22.9
Hispanic	9	8.1
Total	425	6.5

* Metropolitan Statistical Area. It has included Lapeer, Livingston, Macomb, Monroe, Oakland, St. Clair and Wayne County since January 1990. Monroe County was not included in the Detroit Metropolitan Statistical Area prior to January 1990.

Michigan's rate of 6.5 per 10,000 places us in the middle of the states conducting seroprevalence surveys when ranked by rate. Our state rate, however, is less than half the estimated overall rate for the United States. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention investigators estimated that in 1989 approximately 15 per 10,000 women giving birth nationwide were infected with HIV. Infection rates higher than 40 per 10,000 births were noted in New York State, New Jersey, the District of Columbia and Florida.

The data lead us to two important conclusions about trends in HIV infection in Michigan women giving birth. First, prevalence rates among minority mothers and mothers residing in the Detroit MSA remain well above those of white mothers and mothers residing outside of the Detroit MSA. Second, maternal seroprevalence rates have remained relatively stable within all Michigan regions, for blacks and Hispanics and among different age groups over time. However, we may now be seeing the beginning of a decline in the rate of maternal HIV infection prevalence for white women, although this trend has not reached statistical significance.

The maternal antibody seroprevalence data base provides us with our best indicator of the current status of the HIV epidemic in Michigan women. Social and demographic characteristics of childbearing women differ from those women who are unable or chose not to have children. Because some of these differences may also be associated with risk for HIV, it is not certain whether HIV seroprevalence in childbearing women is lower, higher or the same as in other women of reproductive age. If HIV prevalence rates are similar among all Michigan women in this age group, approximately 1400 Michigan women of reproductive age are HIV-Infected.

Studies of infants born to mothers who are HIV antibody positive show that approximately 30 percent of the infants are infected with the AIDS virus; the remaining 70 percent will lose the maternal HIV antibody that causes the positive test within the first 15 months of life. We would, therefore, expect that approximately 135 HIV-infected infants or about 30 infants per year, have been born in Michigan in the 4.5 years between July 1988 and December 1992.

Preventing HIV infection in urban and minority populations, women and infants, continues to be an urgent public health priority.

Michigan Health Care Education and Research Foundation: Sharing a Vision of the Future with Michigan Physicians

By Nora Maloy

The aim of the Michigan Health Care Education and Research Foundation (MHCERF) is to support the development and analysis of ideas so that the citizens of Michigan may benefit...MHCERF is proud of its efforts to support health and medical care research, as well as service in our state.

In striving to improve medical care and health policy in Michigan, the aims, objectives and activities of the Michigan Health Care Education and Research Foundation (MHCERF) effectively complement the goals of Michigan physicians.

MHCERF attempts to improve health and medical care primarily through the support of research. Moreover, MHCERF's success is in large part attributed to the physicians of Michigan.

Receiving grants through MHCERF, physicians have conducted a substantial amount of high quality research for the Foundation. Since 1985, physicians and medical students in the state of Michigan have received 61 grants from MHCERF totaling approximately $1.8 million dollars, nearly half of all funded grants.

The purpose of this article is two fold: (1) to communicate the purpose and mission of MHCERF to an important audience - Michigan physicians, and (2) to demonstrate the contribution Michigan physicians have made to the goals of MHCERF through the grants they've received, research they've conducted, and consultation they've provided.

The Michigan Health Care Education and Research Foundationis the philanthropic affiliate of Blue Cross Blue Shield of Michigan (BCBSM). With assets of approximately $32 million, MHCERF is the fifth largest corporate foundation within the state of Michigan, and the largest foundation dedicated exclusively to improving health and medical care. MHCERF has more than $1 million per year available for research grants.

There are many foundations that support health care initiatives. Of these, the majority fund projects in health service delivery. MHCERF is unique. MHCERF primarily funds research. The Foundation believes that health care can be improved through the support of high quality health service and clinical research. Well-designed, scientifically-based research projects are likely to assist physicians and others in the formulation of effective policy which will ultimately improve the delivery of health care in our state and nation.

Five grant programs

Currently, MHCERF administers five grant programs: Professional Research program; the Student Awards program; the Proposal Development Award for Physicians program; the Request for Proposal program; and the Matching Initiative program. Medical students and physicians have received funding under each of these programs.

Professional Research Program —The Professional Research Program (PRP) awards grants averaging $50,000 per year for research directed toward the improvement of health and medical care in the state of Michigan. Since its inception, MHCERF has awarded 51 Professional Research Program grants, over half of which have been awarded to physician researchers amounting to more than $1.7 million in research dollars. Physicians have received funding to explore a wide variety of topics comprising clinical research and health services research.

As an example, in 1985, Fred Lee, MD, of Catherine McAuley Health Center, Ann Arbor, received a grant to compare the results of transrectal ultrasound and digital rectal examination as a means of detecting prostate cancer. At the time of the study, a digital rectal exam was the accepted standard for early detection. Doctor Lee found that the digital exam detected approximately 50 percent of the lesions that are correctly diagnosed by transrectal ultrasound. This work helped validate the value of diagnostic ultrasound resulting in an improved method of detecting prostate cancer, at an early stage.

In 1985, MHCERF supported research by Beverly Payne, MD, on medical malpractice in Michigan. Today, as part of its ongoing commitment to dealing with the malpractice crisis, MHCERF is funding a project being conducted by Stephen Spurr, PhD, and Gail Jensen, PhD, at Wayne State University on malpractice reform in the state of Michigan. The research will examine the effects of past reforms and estimate the impact of current legislation on the number and disposition of malpractice claims filed.

Student Awards Program — The Student Awards Program provides $3,000 grants to students enrolled in medical (MD/DO) or doctoral programs at Michigan universities who are interested in improving health and medical care. Medical students have received more than 30 grants amounting to over $90,000. This program supports a wide range of student activities including: research projects, pilot projects, intervention and demonstration projects, feasibility studies, proposal development and critical literature reviews.

Proposal Development Award for Physicians Program — Exclusively for physicians, the Proposal Development Award for Physicians program awards up to $5,000 for assistance in proposal development for clinical research. The intent of this program is to provide funds for proposal development to clinicians who have ideas worthy of research funds but do not have the training or expertise necessary to design a competitive proposal for funding consideration. As an example, a physician from Wayne State University received a grant to develop a proposal to examine the practice patterns of physicians in regards to clinical follow-up of asymptomatic women with early stage invasive breast cancer. Subsequently, the physician investigator applied for and received a $49,262 grant from MHCERF to conduct this project under the Professional Research Program.

Request for Proposal Program — MHCERF's newest grant program is the Request for Proposal program (RFP). This program enables the Foundation to take a proactive role in targeting specific problems and areas of research interest. In 1992, the first RFP grant was awarded to researchers at The University of Michigan -- John Billi, MD, Jack Wheeler, PhD, and John Griffith -- to compare Blue Cross Blue Shield of Michigan's payment to physicians and utilization of services for particular specialties with those of Blue Cross Blue Shield plans in Great Lakes region.

> "In striving to improve medical care and health policy in Michigan, the aims, objectives and activities of the Michigan Health Care Education and Research Foundation (MHCERF) effectively complement the goals of Michigan physicians."

This project was designed and funded in consultation with the Tri-Staff Committee of Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Michigan, which includes representatives of: the Michigan State Medical Society, the Michigan Association of Osteopathic Physicians and Surgeons and Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Michigan. The project compared the average payment and use rates of a large number of physician services in Michigan with the average payment and use rates in several states surrounding Michigan. Copies of the study are available upon request.

Future topics under consideration for RFP funding have been suggested by both MSMS and MAOPS and include malpractice reform, the efficacy of interactive video technology, the cost and treatment of HIV infection, and the cost effectiveness of utilization review.

Matching Initiative Program — An exception to MHCERF's mission of funding research, the Matching Initiative Program supports service delivery projects. The aim of the program is to foster community participation in the improvement of health care delivery. This program encourages collaboration among funding agents and local communities to try and solve important community health problems through creative new programs. MHCERF matches dollars contributed or raised by alternative funding sources. For example, last year, MHCERF awarded a matching initiative grant to Project HOW, a program of the Wayne County Medical Society, and World Medical Relief. Project HOW employs volunteer doctors, nurses and social workers in treating the indigent in community churches in inner-city Detroit. Matching funds were contributed by the Metro Health Foundation. The grant provided funds for the purchase of pharmaceuticals for low income Detroiters.

In 1992, funds were awarded to WTVS-Channel 56 and MSMS under the Matching Initiative Program to develop videos that influence the behavior, attitudes, lifestyles and health of our youth. The videos as well as complementing educational materials have been distributed to middle schools throughout the state.

Other program in the works

Presently, MHCERF staff are in the process of developing a new grant program exclusively for physicians. The program is intended to provide "seed" money to physicians to explore the merits of a particular research idea.

In addition to their philanthropic activities, MHCERF staff have made significant professional contributions to Michigan health care. Staff have conducted research projects exploring topics associated with the administrative aspects of the utilization review process, and with favorable and adverse self-selection into HMOs and traditional fee-for-service coverage. MHCERF is a founding member of the Council of Michigan Foundations' Michigan AIDS Fund. The Michigan AIDS Funds provides philanthropic support for various organizations providing AIDS-related activities in Michigan communities.

Additionally, MHCERF has collaborated with Blue Cross Blue Shield of Michigan and the State of Michigan to develop and implement the Caring Program for Children. This program provides preventative health care at no charge to lower-income uninsured Michigan children through donations from individuals and organizations. MHCERF staff have contributed their time and expertise to many health-related activities including the Wayne State Institute of Gerontology, Greater Detroit Area Health Council and the Veterans' Administration Research Committee.

Michigan physicians have provided many innovative ideas that have improved the delivery of medical care.

Questions and comments are welcome. To inquire about grant applications, to receive our annual report, copies of funded studies or to discuss a possible project, please feel free to contact Nora Maloy, Program Officer at (313) 225-8205, 600 Lafayette East, B243, Detroit, Michigan 48226.

Henry Ford Health System Senior Services division is seeking physicians for innovative geriatric programs. Internist or Family practitioner must be board certified or eligible. Added qualifications in geriatric medicine desirable. Experience with multidisciplinary team practice preferred.

The two programs seeking physicians include a medical center based in a life-care community and a Detroit PACE on Lok program.

Henry Ford Village Medical Center is a newly-constructed life-care community in suburban Detroit. Successful candidate will direct primary care, coordinate all subspecialty care, supervise and collaborate with nurse practitioner, and share call. Opportunities exist for teaching, administration and research.

The Detroit-based Program of All-Inclusive Care for the Elderly (PACE) is part of a national demonstration program providing acute and long-term care for the frail elderly. Unique opportunity for the physician who would like to do hands-on comprehensive care. Willingness to participate in multidisciplinary team approach is essential.

As part of the prestigious Henry Ford Health System (HFHS), we offer an excellent salary and benefit package including complete malpractice coverage and a lease car program.

YOCON®
YOHIMBINE HCl

Description: Yohimbine is a 3a-15a-20B-17a-hydroxy Yohimbine-16a-carboxylic acid methyl ester. The alkaloid is found in Rubaceae and related trees. Also in Rauwolfia Serpentina (L) Benth. Yohimbine is an indolalkylamine alkaloid with chemical similarity to reserpine. It is a crystalline powder, odorless. Each compressed tablet contains (1/12 gr.) 5.4 mg of Yohimbine Hydrochloride.

Action: Yohimbine blocks presynaptic alpha-2 adrenergic receptors. Its action on peripheral blood vessels resembles that of reserpine, though it is weaker and of short duration. Yohimbine's peripheral autonomic nervous system effect is to increase parasympathetic (cholinergic) and decrease sympathetic (adrenergic) activity. It is to be noted that in male sexual performance, erection is linked to cholinergic activity and to alpha-2 adrenergic blockade which may theoretically result in increased penile inflow, decreased penile outflow or both.

Yohimbine exerts a stimulating action on the mood and may increase anxiety. Such actions have not been adequately studied or related to dosage although they appear to require high doses of the drug. Yohimbine has a mild anti-diuretic action, probably via stimulation of hypothalmic centers and release of posterior pituitary hormone.

Reportedly, Yohimbine exerts no significant influence on cardiac stimulation and other effects mediated by B-adrenergic receptors, its effect on blood pressure, if any, would be to lower it; however no adequate studies are at hand to quantitate this effect in terms of Yohimbine dosage.

Indications: Yocon® is indicated as a sympathicolytic and mydriatric. It may have activity as an aphrodisiac.

Contraindications: Renal diseases, and patient's sensitive to the drug. In view of the limited and inadequate information at hand, no precise tabulation can be offered of additional contraindications.

Warning: Generally, this drug is not proposed for use in females and certainly must not be used during pregnancy. Neither is this drug proposed for use in pediatric, geriatric or cardio-renal patients with gastric or duodenal ulcer history. Nor should it be used in conjunction with mood-modifying drugs such as antidepressants, or in psychiatric patients in general.

Adverse Reactions: Yohimbine readily penetrates the (CNS) and produces a complex pattern of responses in lower doses than required to produce peripheral a-adrenergic blockade. These include, anti-diuresis, a general picture of central excitation including elevation of blood pressure and heart rate, increased motor activity, irritability and tremor. Sweating, nausea and vomiting are common after parenteral administration of the drug.[1,2] Also dizziness, headache, skin flushing reported when used orally.[1,3]

Dosage and Administration: Experimental dosage reported in treatment of erectile impotence.[1,3,4] 1 tablet (5.4 mg) 3 times a day, to adult males taken orally. Occasional side effects reported with this dosage are nausea, dizziness or nervousness. In the event of side effects dosage to be reduced to ½ tablet 3 times a day, followed by gradual increases to 1 tablet 3 times a day. Reported therapy not more than 10 weeks.[3]

How Supplied: Oral tablets of Yocon® 1/12 gr. 5.4 mg in bottles of 100's NDC 53159-001-01 and 1000's NDC 53159-001-10.

Access to Food Constitutes a Human Right

World hunger is an ever-present scourge that claims 35,000 lives each day.

Access to food constitutes a human right. In 1976, the United States Congress passed a Right to Food Resolution which declared the sense of the congress to be "that all people have a right to a nutritionally adequate diet".

Physicians Against World Hunger (PAWH), a non-profit, tax-exempt organization was founded so that physicians could collectively defend this human right by raising funds to support well-recognized, reputable organizations that are directly engaged in working with the poor primarily for the purpose of ending death by starvation.

Please join us — together physicians must help bring an end to world hunger.

Clinton's Health Security Act: Promote and Criticize

By Gilbert B. Bluhm, MD

The AMA, after its 1993 House of Delegates Interim Meeting in early December, was strongly criticized for modifying its policy on employer mandate for universal health coverage. Who complained? None other than three "primary care" national medical societies who purported that the AMA was not serious about health system reform!

There were two major reasons given by the spokesperson. The first was that the AMA "mailed packets critical of reform to all of its members." The second was the passage by the AMA House of an expanded option to achieve complete universal access by an "individual mandated" coverage.

Who would want to gripe about information which compares the AMA's "Health Access America" and the Clinton Administration's Health Security Act of 1993? Three "primary care" subspecialty medical societies! (I belong to one of them and it grieves me now!)

Let's review some important background facts. Long before serious consideration of health system reform became a national political issue in 1992, the AMA had already taken important initiatives. It developed early in the 1980s the "Health Agenda for America." Next, the AMA developed Health Access America and presented it to the American public in March, 1990. This was after the AMA House of Delegates reviewed and approved it in 1989. Certainly, it included the concept of employer mandated coverage! There were 11 resolutions from the AMA 1992 House of Delegates meeting that were referred to the AMA Board of Trustees about individually purchased insurance and medical IRAs. Later, the Board of Trustees developed a report which was modified and passed by the AMA House. AMA policy recognizes the importance of individual responsibility for health insurance coverage and the use of medical savings accounts as an alternative to employer mandate to achieve access and coverage in health system reform.

There must have been a lapse of memory by those "primary care" medical society spokespersons. The Health Security Act of 1993, proposed by President Clinton, contains a section which requires an individual who reports for medical care with health insurance to be "immediately assigned to a health alliance and an accountable health plan!"

Furthermore, the new addition to the AMA Health Access America individual mandate encourages the thrust of the Health Security Act of 1993 -- "persons participating responsibly in choosing their health care." Health Access America continues to promote an equal "before tax" dollars plan for use by individuals and small businesses such as the Health Security Act of 1993. And current law now permits business mega-corporations.

So why wait? We haven't in Michigan! The Michigan House and Senate have passed three laws since October 1993, that permit individuals and business employers to provide a pre-tax Medical Savings Account per year of $3,000 plus another $1,500 to be used for health insurance to cover health costs that exceed $3,000 annually. These laws allow the employee/individually "owned" Medical Savings Account and "required" coverage to move with the person (owner) from one employer to another or whenever a person changes location.

The AMA will continue to promote Health Access America for health system reform and present critiques to Congress when and where necessary regardless of the carpers complaints!

COVER STORY

There are a variety of steps physicians can and should take to avoid being sued. MSMS, through its Office on Risk Management, is dedicated to developing, locating and providing the tools and services physicians need to effectively manage their risks. This month's cover story explores, in depth, the many aspects of risk management and the steps physicians can take to prevent unneccessary lawsuits. Included are a report on the importance of educating your office staff on risk management procedures; the benefits of patient evaluation forms; an indepth report on why patients sue for malpractice; practical advice from experienced defense attorneys on deposition preparedness; a rundown of MSMS seminars on risk management and practice parameters; a look at the pros and cons of practice parameters; and a detailed report on the growing numbers and use of practice parameters by several physician groups.

Annual returns shown for Doctors Capital Management represent the performance of a model investment portfolio of securities selected by DCM or its predecessor investment manager. Annual returns shown for DCM reflect the deduction of annual management fees paid by DCM clients and transaction costs. DCM returns include dividend income, reinvestment of dividend income, interest income and capital appreciation. S&P 500 returns reflect the growth of the S&P 500 index which is comprised of 500 widely held common stocks as designated by Standard & Poors Corporation; it is not a managed investment portfolio therefore there is no deduction of management costs or related expenses. Returns shown for the S&P 500 include dividend income. DCM returns shown reflect actual trading for that portion of DCM accounts which are managed according to the model but may not reflect the effect of material economic and market factors. That is, the returns of DCM actual accounts may be greater than or less than the returns shown for the model portfolio due to individual account objectives, timing of implementation of investment decisions and transactions, timing of account inceptions, and existing securities position of new accounts. Returns shown for 1983 through 1989 represent the model portfolio managed by David J. Master, the predecessor investment manager. For 1990 and beyond he has been responsible for investment management at DCM. The investment philosophy, objectives and style were consistent throughout the period shown. Management fees may be billed separately from managed accounts and would increase returns of these accounts. Fee schedule is contained in form ADV. Performance figures represent past results and are no guarantee of future performance. Portfolio values will fluctuate as market conditions change.

MSMS ON THE MOVE

Preparing physicians for change

Videoconferencing can aid doctors

This month MSMS demonstrated a technology that can bring doctors face-to-face in meetings without having to leave their region of the state. Videoconferencing is an economical technology that can help doctors carry on the business of organized medicine and even examine patients. On March 14-15 MSMS previewed a videoconferencing system at its East Lansing headquarters. MSMS Board members, hospital administrators, executive officers of HMOs and PPOs and association executives from around the state were invited to take part in this special demonstration, which was co-sponsored by the Michigan Society of Association Executives. The goal is to increase awareness of the technology's potential and find groups to cooperate in establishing to five sites around the state for use in such teleconferencing.

MSMS to co-sponsor Ann Arbor forum on health system reform

Doctors will hear about the local impact of health system reform at a March 24 conference being co-sponsored by MSMS, the Washtenaw County Medical Society and the University of Michigan Medical Center. "Physician Participation in Health Care Reform: Drive or Be Driven" will outline national and state developments, how physicians can organize to shape them, and what's coming in managed care. MSMS Board Chair W. Peter McCabe, MD, will moderate a panel session during the forum. The forum is set for 5:45 to 8:30 p.m. in the Towsley Center at the University of Michigan Medical Center. Doctors will talk about health system reform and also hear from a panel of experts. Call (313) 764-2103 if you'd like to attend.

MSMS/MSMS Alliance Capitol Checkup Day is April 20

MSMS and the MSMS Alliance have set April 20 for their annual Capitol Checkup day. Doctors and Alliance members will meet with lawmakers in Lansing. First they'll hear from lawmakers about what's happening in Lansing on issues critical to organized medicine. Then participants will have a chance to tour the Capitol Building and meet with their legislators one-on-one to talk in more depth. Physician input is critical to helping shape the outcome of those issues—call the MSMS Department of Government Relations at (517) 336-5741 to attend.

Doctors—speak out on need for antitrust relief!

The AMA and MSMS have launched P.O.W.E.R., Physicians Organized to Work for Effective Reform. It's a national campaign to ensure that antitrust relief is included in any health system reform legislation. If doctors aren't permitted to pool their market strength so they can effectively negotiate on several issues, health care delivery will become dominated by giant networks which threaten both patient choice and doctors' ability to make medical decisions. Join P.O.W.E.R. and be sure that lawmakers hear your voice on the importance of antitrust relief. For more information, call Kevin A. Kelly at MSMS at (517) 336-5743.

For details on these and other issues call William E. Madigan, Executive Director, MSMS 517/337-1351.

"We Have Met the Enemy and He is Us" —Pogo

By Robert P. Lorenz, MD

MSMS would never criticize a physician based on race. MSMS would never criticize a physician based on gender. MSMS would never criticize a physician based on schooling. MSMS would never criticize a physician based on religion.

MSMS criticizes physicians based on their paychecks???

The MSMS 1993 House of Delegates resolution on the corporate practice of medicine reads:

"Resolved: That MSMS oppose the corporate practice of medicine either in the profit or nonprofit setting whereby the corporation employs physicians to practice medicine and bills for the services of the physicians..."

MSMS then petitioned the Attorney General to rule against such "corporate practice of medicine" by nonprofit corporations. He ruled for the nonprofit corporations. Nevertheless the above remains the official policy of MSMS. Recently the "MSMS Corporate Practice of Medicine Task Force" recommended that MSMS "...determine which nonprofit entities should be allowed to employ physicians..."

What is the basis for such a resolution? Physician employees of nonprofit corporations share with physician employees of professional corporations leadership roles in this state in undergraduate, graduate, and continuing medical education; medical research; and provision of high-quality medical care. Where are the data that a physician employee of a nonprofit corporation (PENPC) practices a lower quality of medicine than a physician employee of a professional corporation (PEPC)? That PEPC are less influenced by the financial implications of their clinical decisions? That PEPC practice more ethically than PENPC? I have had the privilege of working for MSMS with many PENPCs and PEPCs; many PENPCs have spent countless hours on behalf of MSMS doing committee work, testifying on behalf of all physicians on such critical issues as scope of practice and liability.

Is the goal to reorganize MSMS as MSPEPCS? Groucho Marx said that he would never want to be a member of a club that would have him as a member. Presumably Groucho Marx would like to join MSMS given this policy; many physicians may differ with Groucho.

Health care is being reshaped before our eyes; physicians should be working together in large responsible organizations to protect the quality of medicine and fight for a leadership role for physicians in health care reform. To alienate colleagues will only reduce the membership, divide physicians, lessen our influence, and help all the outside interest groups who seek to control medicine.

Ladies and gentlemen, we are in this boat of health care reform together. Whether we sink or swim is only up to our collective efforts. This type of activity is punching a hole in our hull to get the other guy's feet wet.

Some of the MSMS leadership are clearly uncomfortable with this policy, and are working to modify it. The task force report is pending at this writing. However, until the House of Delegates reverses this policy at the Annual Meeting, the above resolution is official policy. I believe that a majority of thoughtful MSMS members had no input into this policy, would disagree with it, and would consider it an embarrassment. Individuals make mistakes, medical societies make mistakes. MSMS has accomplished a great deal of good, such as the recent improvement in the liability climate in Michigan, and has a great deal of important work still to do. It is time MSMS reverses this silly and insulting policy, brings the membership together again, and gets on with the real business of leadership and change. Let's prove Pogo wrong.

OAKLAND COUNTY

Promoting healthy living aim of Health Day on Campus program

By Tracy A. Baker

Oakland County Medical Society is working to improve the health of its community through Health Day On Campus, a one-day program to educate people on improving and maintaining their health.

"Health Day On Campus provides the forum for physicians to discuss preventive health measures and healthy lifestyle choices with the community," says Murray B. Levin, MD, Oakland County Medical Society (OCMS) president.

Health Day on Campus will be held Saturday, April 16, 1994, on the campus of Oakland University. The keynote speaker is State Representative John Jamian (R-Bloomfield Hills), chair of the House Republican Task Force on Health Care Reform. He will open the discussion about the importance of health care and potential changes to our current health system.

Throughout the day, 17 classes will be offered to the public, free-of-charge and packed with information on improving and maintaining personal health. Class topics range from "Ask the Pediatrician" to "Common Household Emergencies." OCMS physicians will conduct the classes in a lecture/discussion format to enable the audience to ask specific questions.

Q & A sessions key

A unique aspect of the Health Day On Campus is the large amount of time devoted to question and answer sessions. For each topic on the agenda, a short presentation will be given by a physician followed by an open discussion. The primary focus of the day is to allow the participants to ask questions about issues important to them.

"This program is an opportunity for members of the community to have a dialogue with a physician," says Susan S. Thoms, MD, chair of the OCMS Public Information Committee. "Physicians will be accessible and people will have the opportunity to ask questions about their health."

Newman. "It allows local physicians to have a dialogue with the community about health concerns."

The Oakland County Medical Society worked with many community businesses to make this event a success. Oakland Printing, Oakland University and The Oakland Press are co-sponsors and have donated services, facilities and time to the project. Also involved are members of the OCMS Alliance and the Oakland Chapter of Medical Assistants who have volunteered to introduce and open the class sessions.

Presenting accurate and timely health information to the public through Health Day On Campus is a service the OCMS hopes to continue on annual basis. The physicians planning Health Day on Campus express a strong sense of civic responsibility and community service.

"I feel that physicians should be proactive and working toward a community good," says Doctor Levin.

"Health Day On Campus is meant to be a public service," agrees Doctor Thoms.

If you would like more information about Health Day on Campus, please contact the Oakland County Medical Society at 313-646-4700.

Help Your Patients Decide In Advance About Health Care

Durable Power of Attorney for Health Care Order Form

MSMS urges individual physician offices to order the new Durable Power of Attorney for Health Care Designation Forms to distribute to patients as a public relations activity. The forms were developed and approved by MSMS, the State Bar of Michigan, the Michigan Hospital Association and the Michigan Association of Osteopathic Physicians and Surgeons.

The forms provide patients with the means to appoint a patient advocate to make health care decisions for them if they become incapacitated. Distribution of the document serves as a goodwill gesture that can demonstrate to patients how physicians are working to help them.

Designation Forms and accompanying brochures can be ordered through MSMS. Price is 40 cents for the pair when ordering 100 or more. Under 100, the price is 45 cents. Minimum order is 50.

The Designation Form is an eight page 8 1/2 by 11 booklet. The document is designed to be a "user friendly" form, particularly for older patients. The short patient brochure accompanying each form covers more detailed information about the new durable power of attorney law.

To order, please complete this form and return to:

Because of changes in technology, it is now possible to process data into usable information regarding outcomes and costs. With the increased need to do more with fewer resources, it becomes even more imperative. This conference will provide information on provider-purchaser partnerships, practical applications of telecommunications and computers in integrated regional networks, and how electronic data interchange will affect physicians in their daily practices.

POs and PHOs:
Here Today, More Tomorow

By William J. Carbone

In the United States, we are witnessing the beginning of a massive creation of new health care entities, including physician organization (POs) and physician-hospital organizations (PHOs). According to Hospital-Physician Integration, Results of a National Survey, "more than half of the hospital-physician arrangements today were created within the past 18 months." That report was published in June 1993, by Report on Physicians Trends, Ernst and Young, and the Academy for Health Services Marketing. Since that time, health care mergers and reform activities have become even more frequent and rapid. In October, Columbia HealthCare Corporation and Hospital Corporation of America announced a $5.7 billion merger of the nation's two largest for-profit hospital chains into one health care giant. The decision for this merger occurred after a mere three weeks of discussion and consideration.

It is my opinion that POs and PHOs will continue to develop in 1994 at exponential rates as proactive physicians of all specialties unify to direct their establishment.

Moreover, I think we will experience increased development of physician organizations as the harbingers of physician-hospital organizations. POs offer physicians an excellent opportunity to establish a viable structure to effectuate the development of physician-hospital organizations.

I think we will see more physician organizations approaching hospitals to establish physician-hospital organizations. We also will see the creation of hospital-physician organizations (HPOs), especially in areas where physicians and hospitals have yet to understand that effective managed care and the survival of physicians, hospitals and their communities depend on each working together under equal risk arrangements to develop and provide seamless health care services.

> "There is no question that you will need very high speed film to capture PO and PHO development in 1994, as integrated health care takes hold in this country. This will occur regardless of the passage of any of Clinton's proposals."

There is no question that you will need a very high speed film to capture PO and PHO development in 1994, as integrated health care takes hold in this country. This will occur regardless of the passage of any of Clinton's proposals.

Unfortunately, there will be winners and losers in this development. Those who do nothing and those who move too quickly may lose. Winners will be those who are prudent, and understand that they need to collaborate in a methodical, well-organized plan to bring physicians and hospitals together in seamless and strategic directives to provide quality care at a reasonable cost under capitation.

There is no question that POs and PHOs are here today, but there will be a lot more here tomorrow. Get ready.

Millions Victimized by Family Members Every Year!

Are you concerned about the effects of family violence and victimization within your community?

Become an advocate within your community for the prevention of family violence.

Violence among family members has reached staggering proportions. Every year more than 2 million cases of child abuse and neglect are reported, between 2 and 4 million women are battered by their spouses, and between 700,000 and 1.1 million of the elderly population are abused.

The American Medical Association has formed a National Coalition of Physicians Against Family Violence. Through the Coalition the American Medical Association hopes to involve you in activities that address issues of child abuse, sexual assualt, domestic violence and elder abuse because you have the unique ability to identify the symptoms, first-hand. By joining the National Coalition you will be showing your concern about the effects of family violence and victimization, and will become a committed advocate within your community for the prevention of family violence.

Through the Coalition you will:

- be informed about local contacts and referrals
- become aware of local and regional resources
- be provided with information regarding model educational programs
- become aware of treatment guidelines and protocols.
- have access to newsletters, public education materials and other publications
- receive an official membership card and frameable poster alerting your patients of your interest in and concern for this problem.

The only cost to you is your commitment to help curb this problem. Simply complete the membership application form below and mail to the Department of Mental Health, American Medical Association, 515 N. State Street, Chicago, IL 60610.

MSMS Hosts Anti-Violence Reception for Doctors, Lawmakers

MSMS called together doctors, lawmakers, law enforcement officials and others March 3 to share information on Michigan projects and programs to lessen domestic and street violence.

In a reception at MSMS headquarters, attendees talked about common ground on which they can work to decrease violence.

"Violence is not just a city problem," Rep. Alma Stallworth (D-Detroit) told the group. In describing her legislative plan aimed at gun control (HB 5231) and video games (HB 5229), Rep. Stallworth said, "I need your support." She said 14 kids, 19 years and under, are killed every day in the United States. "We must all work together to support our children and to protect our families."

Sen. Lana Pollack (D-Ann Arbor) also asked for support of Resolution 371, which designates the third week of April as Gun Awareness Week. The MSMS Alliance developed that idea, and has supported Sen. Pollack in her efforts to get the resolution passed.

"It will take a heavy-duty statewide push to get this resolution through," she said. "I not only invite your participation, I plead for your participation." Sen. Pollack said the resolution was sent to committee in late February because it's considered controversial. Pollack urged doctors to call, write or fax Sen. Richard Posthumus (R-Alto) who chairs the Government Operations Committee where the resolution was sent for discussion.

MSMS President Gilbert B. Bluhm, MD, briefly described "City for Youth," a program launched by Channel 56 (Detroit) to help curb adolescent violence, substance abuse and other problems. Doctor Bluhm has been closely involved with the project and is working to take it statewide.

MSMS Immediate Past-President, Thomas C. Payne, MD, provided an overview of the many activities undertaken by the MSMS Domestic Violence Forum. A key project of the Forum was production of the recently published Michigan reference guide to domestic abuse, "Reach Out: Intervening in Partner Abuse."

The MSMS Alliance is currently working on three anti-violence projects, Velva Clark, MSMS Alliance chair, told the group. The three projects are: the production of an anti-violence patient education video; a poster contest on the dangers of weapons; and the designation of the third week of April as Gun Awareness Week.

Rep. Stallworth asked for support of two legislative bills aimed gun control and video games.

Sen. Lana Pollack asked for support of Resolution 371, which designates the third week of April as Gun Awareness Week.

Managing Your Risks MSMS offers the tools you need

There are a variety of steps physicians can and should take to avoid being sued. MSMS, through its Office on Risk Management, is dedicated to developing, locating and providing the tools and services physicians need to effectively manage their risks. This month's cover story explores, in depth, the many aspects of risk management and the practical steps physicians can take to prevent unneccessary lawsuits. Included are: a report on the importance of educating your office staff on risk management procedures; the benefits of patient evaluation forms; an indepth report on why patients sue for malpractice; practical advice from experienced defense attorneys on deposition preparedness; a rundown of MSMS seminars on risk management and practice parameters; a look at the pros and cons of practice parameters; and a detailed report on the growing numbers and use of practice parameters by several physician groups. The first article in this information-packed cover story begins on the following page. ☞

Risk Management Education for the Office Staff

An important ingredient to successful malpractice prevention

Every member of the health care team has an equally important role to play in providing successful medical care to patients and their families. Likewise, every member of the health care team, from the physician to the medical office file clerk, holds a crucial position in the effort to minimize the occurrence of incidents that create patient injuries and/or patient dissatisfaction which can lead to medical malpractice claims. Actions of non-physician members of the health care team can both directly and indirectly cause a patient's injury or a patient's decision to initiate a lawsuit.

Involvement of staff in malpractice actions

The potential for direct responsibility for a patient injury by a medical office employee generally correlates to the degree of physical contact the employee has with the patient. The more responsibility the employee has for providing physical care to the patient, the greater the chance that an employee-induced treatment error can occur. In reality, the numbers of medical professional liability claims in which a patient injury has been directly caused by a medical office employee are very few. Under the legal doctrine of respondeat superior, the physician retains responsibility for the negligent actions of his or her employees. Because of this, and the fact that few medical office employees carry professional liability insurance and have relatively limited personal assets, the physician remains the target of the vast majority of any associated medical malpractice claims.

Much more likely is the situation in which an employee is indirectly responsible for an adverse health care outcome. There are a multitude of actions undertaken by staff which can create a significant potential for a lawsuit, such as the inadvertent filing of a positive biopsy result before appropriate action has been taken. In this situation, the responsibility of filing, commonly viewed by physicians and staff as a simple and unimportant task in the entire realm of medicine, may likely have claimed the life of a patient and ultimately resulted in a costly malpractice settlement. In addition, the employee can contribute to the patient's dissatisfaction with the medical practice or physician, encouraging the patient to seek the opinion of a plaintiff attorney should the treatment outcome fall short of the patient's expectations.

To effectively reduce risk exposure in a medical office setting, the office staff must be considered an integral component of the efforts to prevent malpractice suits and to provide an optimal defense. However, until they have a thorough understanding of pertinent medical malpractice issues and risk management principles, it is likely that they may not be aiding in the prevention of lawsuits, and in fact may be contributing.

> To effectively reduce risk exposure in a medical office setting, the office staff must be considered an integral component of the efforts to prevent malpractice suits and to provide an optimal defense.

First and foremost, the specific responsibilities for each staff member's position must be clearly defined and outlined in writing. Staff-created malpractice actions commonly occur when employees act outside of the scope of their knowledge and expertise, or do not adhere to developed practice management systems. Inappropriate medical advice from non-professional staff, filing of test results before appropriate action has been taken, breach of confidentiality, and failure to communicate with physicians or other staff are practices which commonly occur when employees are not clear as to the responsibilities of their employment.

Few individuals would dispute that the vast majority of risk management education has been afforded to the physician. In their careers, most physicians will attend at least one risk management seminar or presentation. Some states, such as Florida, mandate that a specified number of required continuing medical education credits be obtained through risk management courses. Even the physician who has not attended a risk management seminar or presentation has had "informal" risk management education through related conversation in the hospital physician lounge. However, risk management education is equally important for the office staff. This education can be provided through a number of ways:

- A variety of pertinent literature should be available within the medical office to aid in the orientation of new employees and for the review of veteran employees. Helpful articles can be obtained through the MSMS Office of Risk Management.
- A number of organizations and hospitals provide periodic risk management seminars and presentations. Efforts should be made to ensure that employees attend programs whenever possible.
- Experts in risk management can be engaged for in-office presentations. This allows all staff members to take part in the educational opportunity, without travel expenses or the absence of a key staff member.

MSMS/MPMLC/PICOM Working Together To Save You Money on Your Professional Liability Insurance

The Michigan State Medical Society is pleased to announce that Michigan Physicians Mutual Liability Company (MPMLC) and Physicians Insurance Company of Michigan (PICOM) insureds may be eligible for merit rating credits, earning reductions in their professional medical liability insurance rates, for attending or sending staff to the following MSMS educational programs:

Orientation to the Medical Office

A 1 1/2 day program designed to provide an overall understanding of the medical office to ensure patient satisfaction, improve office efficiency and reduce medical liability. Ideal for all new employees.

Emerging Trends and Future Directions in Health Care Information Systems

This program will feature various experts to provide the latest information on progress in electronic data interchange, automated medical review systems, computerized patient records, and more.

Fundamentals of Risk Management

These sessions will cover patient follow-up, provide ideas for implementing practical, efficient and effective follow-up systems, and help to understand the common causes or factors involved in medication error claims, as well as reducing risks associated with prescribing medications.

Closed Claim Review Sessions

These early-morning round-table discussions will explore actual closed Michigan medical liability cases, addressing issues surrounding the cases and possible preventive measures.

Risk Management Clinical Conferences

These half-day conferences will address clinical issues from which medical liability lawsuits commonly arise.

Risk Management Mock Trial

This full-day seminar will provide valuable education and insight on medical liability litigation and trial experience for physicians, nurse practitioners, physician assistants and any health care practitioners vulnerable to medical liability lawsuits.

Use of this product or service may qualify you for a premium credit under PICOM'S Merit Rating Program. We recommend you contact PICOM, prior to purchasing this product or service, to verify any available credit.

For further information or to verify eligibility for these merit rating credits, contact your insurance carrier or call MPMLC at (800) 968-2421 or PICOM at (800) 292-1036. For additional information or dates of these educational programs, contact the MSMS Office of Risk Management at (517) 336-5769.

- Risk management updates can be provided at scheduled staff meetings. The responsibility for leading the discussion can be rotated among the office staff.

Many of the risk management systems within a medical office are the responsibility of the medical office staff. Often, many employees view the actions inherent in these systems as tedious and time consuming. For example, documenting cancellations and no-shows, part of a "risk management system" for defending yourself in lawsuits involving non-compliant patients, may require retrieving a medical record in another room of the office. For the busy receptionist, it is tempting to forego this process. Understanding the theory behind, and the importance of, these systems increases staff motivation to comply with their risk management responsibilities.

Staff input key

Input from staff into developing risk management strategies should be solicited. Input from the individuals who will be performing these functions generally creates a more reliable, efficient, consistently performed system.

To encourage physician participation in risk management education, many professional liability insurance carriers offer incentives to physicians, such as premium reductions for attendance at approved seminars. Many of these companies, such as Michigan Physicians Mutual Liability Company, recognize the importance of educating the office staff as well, and now provide premium reduction credits to physicians whose office staff attend approved risk management programs.

MSMS Chief of Risk Management, Julie Smith, is available to conduct in-office risk management presentations. These sessions can be scheduled to accommodate your office schedule. For more information, contact Julie Smith at (517) 336-5757.

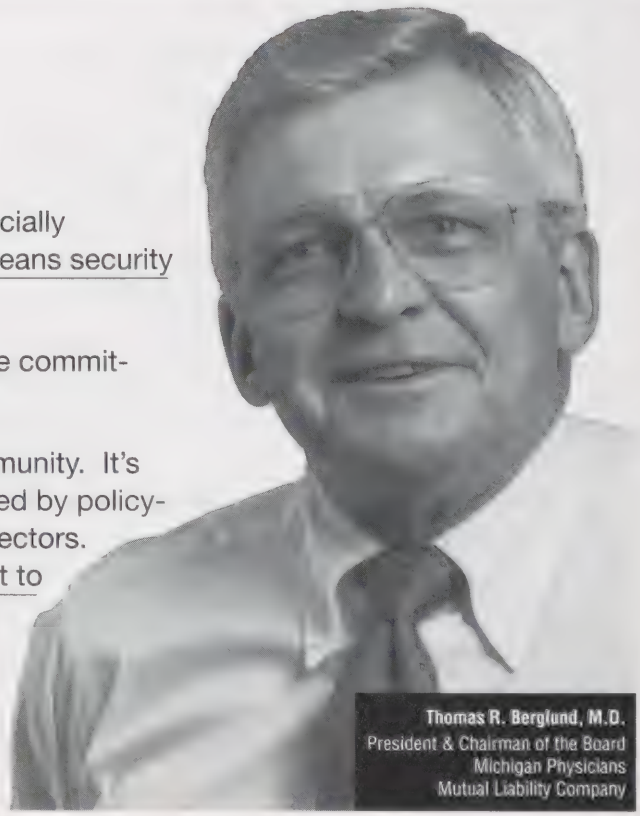

When you think about professional liability insurance...

. . . THINK SECURITY AND RELIABILITY.

Michigan Physicians Mutual Liability Company is financially stronger today than at any other time. For you, that means security and protection.

The reliability of your insurer depends on its long-range commitment to you.

Michigan Physicians was created by the medical community. It's endorsed by the Michigan State Medical Society, owned by policyholders, and governed by an all-physician board of directors. That means a strong partnership with and commitment to you today – and in the future.

Are You Giving Your Patients What They Need... and Want?

There is a theory that patients who "like their physicians" tend to be less likely to initiate a claim of medical malpractice in the face of a medical injury or less than perfect health care result. It is also said that patients who are satisfied with their care will tell three individuals about their experience, while dissatisfied patients will tell between 10 and 20.

In general, patients would rather tell the office staff about a problem or a complaint than the physician. It is possible that by the time this "information" is received by the physician or other appropriate individual, it is distorted and less credibly accepted, and appropriate action may therefore, not be taken. Most patients will experience a significant degree of dissatisfaction before they will finally voice their complaint. However, the point of anger is not the time you need to know that a change to your practice is necessary.

Patient surveys are excellent tools for efficiently and effectively gathering information regarding your patients' opinions and perceptions. Surveys will provide you information as to the successful aspects of your practice and indications as to where improvement is needed.

Unfortunately, time constraints placed on busy medical office staff rarely permit the opportunity for conducting this very valuable function. The Michigan State Medical Society can assist you to conduct patient surveys to solicit the information you need to insure patient satisfaction by offering a variety of available surveys. Specific areas of your practice can be examined, such as SCHEDULING PRACTICES, OFFICE STAFF ATTITUDE, PHYSICIAN COMMUNICATION, AND FEES AND BILLING PRACTICES, or a more lengthy survey addressing a variety of issues can be conducted.

MSMS will provide your practice with printed surveys for distribution to a segment of your patient population. These surveys will be returned to the Michigan State Medical Society, postage-paid, where the response will be computed and a written report generated for your review.

The cost for this service is as follows:

- General office survey (200 surveys) $175
- Individual physician surveys (100 surveys/physician) $105/physician

If additional surveys greater than 200 are desired, the cost is $50 for 100.

Keeping your patients satisfied means knowing what they're satisfied about, what they like, and what they dislike.

What Do Patients Think of Your Practice?

By David Karp

Editor's Note: The following article is printed verbatim from the March, 1993 issue of Loss Minimizer, Winnetka, IL. Loss Minimizer is a supplement to the monthly newsletter, Medical Liability Monitor, Glenview, IL.

A time-honored marketing maxim holds that satisfied customers usually tell three friends about their experience, while dissatisfied customers tell between 10 and 20 people. Unhappy customers express their displeasure by shopping elsewhere. Patients who are not pleased with a physician or the physician's office practices may change doctors if they can, but they or their families also are likely to consider suing the doctor or hospital for malpractice if, in addition to an unsatisfactory result from treatment, they are angry about the manner in which the doctor or staff treated them as people or addressed their problems and complaints.

Patient satisfaction surveys during the past 15 years indicate little change in the non-medical complaints most likely to cause people to change doctors or consider suing after a medical complication occurs. They include; (a) having to wait too long to get an appointment, or being kept waiting too long beyond a scheduled appointment time to see the doctor; (b) encountering rude or insensitive staff who have poor telephone etiquette, unpleasant demeanor, or who can't or won't answer questions or don't make patients feel welcome; (c) not getting a timely response to questions, or not having phone calls returned within a reasonable time; (d) not having enough time with the physician, or sensing from his or her demeanor or body language that the doctor is anxious to get to the next patient; patients who feel they have had too little time with their doctor are especially angered when the physician interrupts their short visit time to take non-urgent phone calls; (e) a perception that the doctor or the staff are indifferent to the patient's problems, don't appear to be listening, don't respect patients' privacy, or are inattentive to medical complaints; (f) misunderstandings about fees and billing policies; and (g) displeasure with on-call physician(s) or with the office's answering service.

How to find out what your patients think of your practice

The most effective "marketing" physicians can do is to find out what their current patients think. Advertisements, flyers, newsletters, discounts and other marketing approaches some physicians employ might be successful ways to increase patient volume. But unless the marketing effort also is directed inward, physicians may miss seeing some of the problems that ultimately drive patients away or encourage them to use litigation as a way to express their displeasure.

> "A focus group discussion costs a fraction of what physicians pay to bring in a consultant to speculate about what is wrong or right with a medical practice."

Effective ways to find out what patients think of your practice include:

Survey Questionnaires: A form similar to the illustration in the July, 1991 Loss Minimizer can be used to ask patients open-ended questions like these about your practice: "What three things do you like best about our practice?" "What three things do you like least about our practice?" "In which areas of our practice do you think we need improvement?" "What suggestions do you have for ways we can make our practice more efficient and friendly?"

These questions permit patients to use their own words, rather than check off rating terms that may not tell you what they really think. Hand patients the questionnaire and a postage-paid envelope, or mail the form to all or selected current patients. Don't insist on having patients identify themselves; anonymity encourages candid, constructive criticism. Respond to reported complaints, questions or misconceptions, and let patients know if you have corrected a problem they called to your attention. A thank-you note signed by the doctor makes patients glad they took the time to respond. Share the responses with your staff. Reward employees whose performance is highly-regarded by patients; lunch or theater tickets and personal expressions of appreciation from the doctor(s) encourage employees to continue to promote your practice.

Ask Your Staff: Loss prevention specialists who survey medical office have found that patients would rather tell the staff about a problem or a complaint than tell the doctor. Even when patients say, "don't tell the doctor I told you," they expect the staff will tactfully pass on the message. However, office staff who are told or learn by unhappy experience that their employer does not greet kindly the messengers of bad news are likely to withhold complaints that might be resolved had the doctor known of them. Ask your staff what they hear. Doctors who have used this simple approach learned that patients were upset the doctor didn't apologize for keeping them waiting, or that the doctor permitted too many interruptions during an examination, kept unclothed patients waiting too long in a barren exam room, didn't return phone calls despite the staff's assurances, were too brusque during an examination, or spoke unclearly. Some physicians learn from these inquiries if patients don't understand explanations about drugs or surgery, or feel belittled when they ask questions. Others find that their patient's silence does not always mean they have no complaints. Some learn that while patients like them, they don't have positive feelings about the doctor's partners who treat them on occasion. Encourage your staff to speak freely to report patient concerns. Don't argue with employees if you think the criticism is unfair; the criticism comes from patients, not the employees.

"Loss Prevention specialists who survey medical offices have found that patients would rather tell the staff about a problem or a complaint than tell the doctor."

Focus Group Discussions: Large medical practices, or those that find they are losing patients should consider investing in an evening discussion with a select group of 15 or 20 patients. Commercial businesses of all types use focus groups to get candid, constructive advice from people who have used or are likely to use their service or product. Malpractice attorneys use focus groups to try out their malpractice prosecution or defense and learn from a group's reactions where the strengths and weaknesses are in their case. Ideally, the focus group discussion should be led by an independent "facilitator," rather than by the physicians in the practice. Some facilitators prefer that physicians not be present; others think it is beneficial for doctors to hear directly what participants like and don't like about the practice.

Hold the focus group discussion in a neutral location, such as a hotel or hospital meeting room. A light buffet lunch or dinner, beverages and comfortable seating are conducive to a relaxing exchange. The costs are a fraction of what physicians pay to bring in a consultant for one afternoon to speculate about what is wrong or right with a practice. Among the questions focus group facilitators can ask:

- How difficult is it to get an appointment to see the doctor? Does the receptionist consider your schedule when offering appointment dates and times? Do you feel comfortable telling the receptionist if you are not pleased with the arrangements? Are the office hours convenient? Would you prefer earlier or later office hours?
- Is the office staff courteous? Are you made to feel welcome on the phone and in person? Are you addressed by name in a courteous manner?
- If you've had occasion to talk with our answering service, were the operators knowledgeable? Pleasant? Helpful? Did they address you respectfully? Were your questions answered, or were you referred to the appropriate person or facility for your problem?
- Does the doctor spend enough time with you? Does he or she answer your questions? Does the doctor encourage you to ask questions? Is your doctor a good listener? Are you reluctant to speak to the doctor? If so, why? Does the doctor return your phone calls within a reasonable time?
- When you get a prescription, do you understand what the medication is for and how to use it properly?

- Do you receive all the information you want about your medical problems and the doctor's care? Are oral explanations enough, or would you like written information or instructions?
- Do you feel fees are reasonable? If not, which charges seem too high? Does the staff handle your insurance billing satisfactorily? Are you comfortable asking the doctor or staff about charges on your statement, or about fees for special services? Is the accounts manager helpful when you have questions about your statement?
- Are the office premises, including the reception area and treatment rooms, clean, comfortable and inviting? Is the reading material provided in the reception area current and of interest to you? If not, what publications would you like to find in the reception area?
- Has the staff adequately explained our policies on medication refills [limits on nights, weekends, holidays], missed appointments, extra charges [late fees, interest on unpaid accounts], protection of the confidentiality of your medical records and information?
- Did you know this practice offers services such as counseling for drug, alcohol and other substance abuse? cholesterol, cancer, blood pressure screening? weight reduction? electro-cardiograms and treadmill testing? hearing and vision testing? nursing home care? family planning?
- What suggestions can you offer for ways we can improve our services to patients?

Responding to suggestions is an essential feature of marketing

An alternative to a focus group discussion is to select a larger number of patients to whom a written questionnaire can be sent posing the above queries. As a reward to those who respond, offer a free screening exam, a pair of tickets to a first-run movie, lunch for two at a good restaurant, a book or other useful gift.

Whatever method you use to find out what your patients think, be sure to follow-up with a letter, phone call, or second meeting to thank them for their ideas and to explain changes that have been made in response to their input. You probably won't have to ask them to "tell a friend."

American Diabetes Association.
Michigan Affiliate, Inc.

The Michigan Affiliate of the American Diabetes Association is currently in the process of creating a new Physician Referral Directory. Many individuals with diabetes contact the affiliate to seek advise in choosing a physician with interest and expertise in diabetes. The directory will be mailed to potential patients and they will be able to make their own decision accordingly.

The qualifications that we require of a physician to be listed in our directory are:

(1) Must be a member of the professional section of the American Diabetes Association, and

(2) Must attend either a Michigan or a nationally-sponsored CME course regarding diabetes of four or more hours each year.

If you wish to be included in our Physician Referral Directory, please call the Affiliate office at (810) 433-3830 or 1-800-525-9292 and ask for a "Referral Directory" application.

Should you have any questions, please feel free to contact Mary Lorenz, Director of Programs, at the Michigan Affiliate office in Southfield, Michigan.

Deposition Preparedness is Essential to Malpractice Defense

Experienced defense attorneys offer advice for physicians

By David Karp

Editor's Note: The following article is printed verbatim from the March, 1993 issue of Loss Minimizer, Winnetka, IL. Loss Minimizer is a supplement to the monthly newsletter, Medical Liability Monitor, Glenview, IL.

The deposition in a malpractice case is a basic element of pretrial "discovery." It is oral testimony given by a witness (deponent) under oath in the presence of a court reporter, and transcribed for possible use at trial. Parties to a lawsuit are entitled to take the deposition of (depose) other parties, and may also depose witnesses to the events at issue, and the opponents' announced experts.

Three attorneys who specialize in defending physicians, nurses and hospitals in malpractice litigation offer advice for physicians, nurses and other health professionals called upon to give a deposition. The attorneys, each a senior partner in their respective law firms are: Robert L. Anderson, JD, Anderson, Galloway and Lucchese, Walnut Creek, CA; Marrs A. Craddick, JD, Craddick, Candland and Conti, Walnut Creek, CA; and James N. Penrod, JD, Hassard, Bonnington, Rogers, and Huber, San Francisco, CA.

When your deposition is requested

Malpractice litigation defendants usually learn from their own defense counsel that their deposition has been requested. Physicians who are not defendants may be contacted informally by phone or are served with a subpoena for their deposition. Many physicians who are not parties to the litigation unwisely have given depositions without considering their potential involvement as defendants, which later occurred. Liability carriers report that some plaintiff attorneys delay naming certain physicians as defendants in the hope that they will voluntarily consent to giving a deposition unrepresented by legal counsel and unaware of the potential for self-incriminating testimony.

Physicians and other health professionals are advised to decline informal deposition requests in a malpractice case, if there is any chance they could be named as a defendant later. Instead, physicians should notify their liability carrier of any request or subpoena for a deposition. When appropriate, the insurer can provide, usually at no expense to the physician, advice and/or representation by an experienced defense attorney, whose primary role is to protect the deponent's interests. Even if there is little likelihood the physician could become a party to the litigation, asking for predeposition advice from a defense attorney is recommended.

Robert L. Anderson says that some doctors who receive a notice of their deposition want to talk to colleagues and friends about their case. These conversations are not privileged, which means the other side can ask about them and might be able to depose people with whom the deponent discussed the facts. An experienced plaintiff's attorney might ask, "After you received the deposition notice, who was the first person you spoke with about it?"

Significance of the deposition

Marrs A. Craddick notes that the defendant's deposition "ordinarily is the most important event that occurs before trial. If the defendant gets through the deposition in good shape, everything else in the litigation is easier. If the defendant comes out of the deposition not helping the plaintiff's cause, he or she has done the most that can be expected." Anderson agrees: "Your deposition is the first chance the plaintiff's attorney has to size you up. The opposing attorney is looking to see if you sound and act like a professional and if you appear to know what you are doing."

James Penrod says that plaintiffs' attorneys use depositions "to develop facts to help their case, by asking questions about information that is not in the medical record, such as conversations and observations. Opposing counsel also hopes to impeach the witness with prior statements, and size up the defendant."

A deposition, like the litigation itself, is an adversarial proceeding. The plaintiff's attorney will use a deposition to attack the deponent's credibility. "Nothing physicians do in medical school or in post-graduate training prepares them for a deposition," Anderson notes. "Doctors are used to asking questions and getting answers," he says, "but in a deposition, it is the accuracy of their answers that becomes the focal point. No matter how accurate the medical record is, it never tells the whole story and needs to be interpreted." Despite the adversarial nature of depositions, Craddick advises physicians not to take offense at the proceeding. "It's not a personality thing," he says. "The opposing attorney's job is to get as much information as possible. As the doctor's defense attorney, I'll keep opposing counsel from being overly hostile or offensive."

Preparation is key to success

The three defense attorneys regard preparation as the key to a successful deposition. A physicians' preparation includes reviewing and being familiar with his or her medical records. Penrod warns that if a physician is unfamiliar with the records, "testimony may be elicited at deposition which is different from that stated in the chart and which can be used at trial to impeach the physician." Proper preparation, Craddick says, "means no question the plaintiff attorney asks at the deposition will come as a surprise."

The attorneys advise physicians they represent not to review outside literature or medical records other than their own until their defense counsel advises them to do so. "Reading medical literature after a poor result and during litigation looks bad," Penrod contends. "It will appear as if the doctor is trying harder now than when he or she was caring for the patient."

An early pre-deposition conference with the defense attorney is essential. In complex cases, several meetings may be needed. James Penrod describes his customary practice: "My client and I use the pre-deposition conference to review the medical facts of the case and what is likely to happen during the proceeding. I stress that the deposition is essentially a rehearsal for the trial. Testimony is given under oath and under penalty of perjury. We'll review every entry in the doctor's medical record and the strengths and weaknesses of the case. I discuss the plaintiff attorney's goals, and emphasize that the defendant must listen carefully to the questions. We also discuss appropriate attitude and demeanor at the deposition."

The deponent's physical appearance and attitude are important, the others agree, but not as significant as the testimony elicited in the deposition. Marrs Craddick is more concerned about the way the printed deposition reads, than about the way a deponent looks or sounds at a deposition. But, he adds, "...a witness who has a poor attitude can be careless when responding to questions. Hostility and anger can provoke arguments or lead to ill-considered statements that might benefit the plaintiff's case." Penrod reminds clients to be humble and polite. "It never helps if deponents behave self-righteously or overly-defensive," he says. Anderson thinks physicians ought to be civil, but on guard. "It's okay to shake the plaintiff counsel's extended hand," he says, "but don't be lulled by an opposing attorney who has a reputation as a charmer."

Practical advice for deponents

Anderson, Craddick and Penrod emphasize that physicians and others whose deposition is noticed should consult their own defense counsel for specific advice. They offer these general recommendations:

- Promptly contact your liability carrier or hospital risk manager upon receipt of a notice or request for your deposition.
- The deposition is an adversary proceeding. Be cordial, but remember that opposing counsel is an advocate for the plaintiff, just as the defense attorney is your advocate.
- Listen to the complete question. Be sure you understand it before responding. Is the question asking about your actual recollection of a specific event or about your custom and habit? Ask the interrogator to repeat any question you don't understand. "Don't try to figure out where the plaintiff's attorney is heading with a line of questions, or why a specific question is being asked," counsels Robert Anderson. Don't offer to re-phrase the question. And don't accept the attorney's summary of the facts without considering how accurate the summary is. James Penrod warns physicians to be wary of plaintiffs' attorneys who deliberately misstate the facts or prior testimony in an effort to get the witness to volunteer additional or unrelated information. Anderson adds that an experienced plaintiffs' attorney may mispronounce medical terms to entice the witness to provide more information or to sound condescending when correcting the mistake.
- Answer to the point. Volunteer nothing. "Even if you think it is good for your case, don't do it! It helps the plaintiff, and may focus attention on something he hadn't considered," Anderson advises. "There's no need to elaborate on 'yes' or 'no' answers," says Marrs Craddick, "or to make any effort to interpret what the other attorney means. Make the opponent ask clear, understandable questions."

- Don't speculate, and especially do not attempt to speculate about what others were thinking or meant when they wrote in the medical record.
- Pause before you answer. Give your attorney an opportunity to object. If your attorney interrupts, stop talking. "Don't try to figure out why your attorney objected," Anderson says. "It may be a legal or technical point, or it may have to do with the nature of the question. You'll lose your focus if you worry about such things." Disputes between opposing counsel may have to be resolved in court. Until then, follow your attorney's advice on whether to answer a disputed question.
- Take enough time to answer. If you need time to think, look through the medical records at hand. Don't let the plaintiff's attorney rush you. "Some attorneys ask questions in rapid fire succession, starting one as soon as you've answered the previous one," Anderson says. "It's a ploy that unnerves some witnesses."
- Avoid absolute statements, such as "I never..." or "I always..." Refrain from using phrases such as "To be perfectly honest with you..." or "Let me be candid with you." Such phrases imply previous comments were not honest or candid. Carefully consider questions that ask for your specific recollections. "A physician who testifies that he recalls a routine 10 minute visit five years ago may compromise his credibility at trial," says James Penrod.
- Don't spar with opposing counsel. It's a no-win situation for the doctor, the defense attorneys say. Some lawyers attempt to rile the witness with hostile remarks. Resist the urge to respond in kind. Rely on your attorney to force opposing counsel to act professionally.
- Decline to answer questions that are outside your area of medical expertise.
- Don't bring notes or texts to the deposition. The plaintiff's attorney may be able to cross-examine you about them. Don't bring correspondence or copies of reports you wrote to your insurance company or defense attorney. In the pre-deposition conference, ask your attorney what materials you may bring to the deposition.
- Don't surprise your attorney by bringing up matters not discussed in pre-deposition conferences. Among the surprises the defense attorneys reported: the physician who contradicted his own medical record at the deposition and indicated that the record was a "mistake;" the witness who changed an opinion of his care between the pre-deposition conference and the deposition; a witness who altered the medical record after she became a defendant; physicians or nurses who were unfamiliar with the area of anatomy under discussion; witnesses who came to the deposition with a stack of notes or texts, contrary to advice from their defense counsel; physicians or nurses who concealed relevant personal or professional problems from defense counsel, such as restriction on hospital privileges or professional license, substance abuse or criminal actions.
- Be prepared for surprises from the plaintiff. The plaintiff may attend the defendants' depositions, which some witnesses find unnerving, if they aren't prepared for the face-to-face confrontation. Some questions might surprise the witness, says James Penrod, "such as asking the defendant if he feels his care by co-defendants was substandard."
- Depositions can last from a few hours to several days, depending on the complexity of the case. Defense attorneys caution clients to be on guard for fatigue that in turn leads to carelessness or complacency. Ask for a break when you need one. Don't object if your lawyer requests a break before you're ready. The attorney may want to confer with you.

After the deposition

In some cases, plaintiffs have dismissed a malpractice case based on the deposition testimony of defendants or other witnesses. But, even in a case which seems to lack merit, a defendant's poor deposition performance may encourage the plaintiff's attorney to pursue the litigation. One gauge of how well a deponent did at his or her deposition is how often the plaintiff quotes from the transcript at trial, say Marrs Craddick. "If the deponent has done well, it is unlikely that the deposition transcript will get mentioned at trial."

A transcript of testimony will be provided for review. Notify defense counsel promptly about errors or misstatements. Craddick cautions clients, however, that while some changes or corrections can be made in the transcript, "...you can't hide the fact that changes were made; if they are substantive, the plaintiff can use them to challenge your credibility. Significant changes may give the plaintiff sufficient grounds to demand that the deposition be re-opened."

MSMS seminars provide the tools you need

March 24-25	MSMS, East Lansing
May 12-13	MPMLC, Bloomfield Hills
July 12-13	Grand Rapids
September 22-23	East Lansing
November 17 - 18	Detroit

Hours: 1:00 p.m. - 5:00 p.m. Day One
9:00 a.m. - 4:00 p.m. Day Two
Tuition: $95 Members, $125 Non-Members
Includes $50 discount coupon toward another MSMS program

This small-group workshop has been specifically designed to provide an overall understanding of the medical office to ensure patient satisfaction, improve office efficiency and reduce medical liability. All new medical office staff and office managers should attend, as well as physicians or spouses wanting to learn more about the business side of medicine. Participants will hear the most current information regarding the changing practice of medicine, billing, coding and collection procedures, and regulations regarding infection control, CLIA and the Americans With Disabilities Act. This course also will address the importance of good patient relations, teamwork and communications in providing outstanding patient care and reducing medical liability. The workshop manual serves as an on-the-job reference guide, including a glossary of medical terminology and a list of valuable resources. Participants will earn a certificate of completion and a $50 discount coupon toward a future MSMS practice management program. Physicians insured by Michigan Physicians Mutual Liability Company may be eligible for up to 2% malpractice insurance premium reduction for sending one or more medical office staff. Faculty Includes: Julie Smith, MSMS Chief, Risk Management; Joyce Nurenberg, MSMS Reimbursement Ombudsman; Tom Wolff, MSMS Chief, PO/PHO Development and Legal Affairs; and other experts.

When You're On the Line:

Telephone, Reception and Scheduling Techniques for Today's Front-Office Staff

April 5	Kellogg Center, East Lansing
April 28	Dearborn Inn, Dearborn
June 21	WMU Regional Center, Grand Rapids
June 22	Ann Arbor

Hours: 1:00 p.m. - 5:00 p.m.
Tuition: $95 MSMS Members, $115 Non-Members

Send two at the regular price and additional registrations from the same medical practice are only $55 Members, $75 Non-members

This program is an absolute must for front office personnel! Participants will discover successful telephone etiquette and reception skills to manage in today's medical practice, clinic or managed care setting. They will learn the art of scheduling appointments to maximize physician time and their own, tips for improving the office's billing and collections success rates, and important communication techniques for developing positive patient interactions. Through lecture, group discussion and with a comprehensive workshop manual, participants will return to the office with a greater understanding of how they're "on the line" in the medical practice, and specific methods to improve their efficiency and energy level on a day-to-day basis. Programs are scheduled in various locations throughout the year to give your entire staff a chance to attend.

Closed Claim Review Sessions for Office Staff

November 17	Muskegon
November 22	Grand Rapids
November 28	East Lansing
November 29	Novi
November 30	Mt. Clemens
December 1	Petoskey

Hours: 8:30 a.m. - 10:00 a.m.
Tuition: $40 Members, $60 Non-Members

These early-morning round-table discussions explore actual closed Michigan medical liability cases. Although similar to the sessions for physicians, these programs have been specifically designed for office staff members. They will cover all medical specialties, focusing on claims involving system failures or claims in which an office staff member contributed to the adverse situation. For further information, please call the MSMS Office of Risk Management at (517) 336-5769.

Fundamentals of Risk Management

October 27	Kalamazoo
November 10	Detroit

Hours: 1:00 p.m. - 4:30.m.
Tuition: $65 Members, $80 Non-Members

These afternoon sessions will explain the physician's responsibilities in patient follow-up, providing ideas for implementing practical, efficient and effective follow-up systems. They also will help physicians and staff understand the common causes or factors involved in medication error claims, as well as providing methods for reducing the risks associated with prescribing medications. Each program will end with a discussion of medical liability cases involving follow-up or medication issues, and other pertinent information, systems and techniques to help reduce these types of risk. For further information contact the MSMS Office of Risk Management at (517) 336-5769.

Practice Parameters Update

May 10 Wayne County Medical Society, Detroit
May 11 MSMS Headquarters, East Lansing

Hours: 6:00 p.m. - 9:00 p.m.
Tuition: $95 Members, $120 Non-Members

Impending changes to health care delivery as a result of national health care reform include the increased development and use of clinical practice parameters. This seminar will provide participants with an update on activities related to the development of practice parameters, the status of mandated use of practice parameters in certain health care delivery systems, proactive physician involvement in practice parameter projects and continuing ideas for effectively incorporating parameters into health care quality improvement systems. Physicians attending this program may be eligible for medical liability premium reduction credits. For more information, call the MSMS Office of Risk Management at (517) 336-5769.

PRACTICE PARAMETERS:
A Silk Purse or a Sow's Ear?

By John W. Hall, MD

In general, the medical profession is bound together by similar education and training. However, from time to time, a topic comes up which reveals our differences. The development and use of practice parameters or guidelines is such an issue.

The use of practice parameters by anesthesiologists has resulted in a greater uniformity of practice, a statistical decrease in malpractice claims and a lowering of malpractice insurance premiums by tens of thousands of dollars. A SILK PURSE. I recently heard a respected Michigan general surgeon state that any attempt to develop practice guidelines in his specialty was ridiculous and predicted that the entire topic would be relegated to the trash bin within five years. A SOW'S EAR. The Maine experiment to use practice guidelines as an affirmative defense against a malpractice claim has the potential to give the medical profession more malpractice relief than all the tort reform efforts combined. A SILK PURSE. The headlines glare out at us: "Blue Cross/Blue Shield of Illinois has announced that it will unilaterally impose guidelines on physicians. The Illinois State Medical Society was not consulted and had no knowledge of how these standards of care for Managed Care Network Preferred patients were developed." A SOW'S EAR? Guidelines on VBAC have cut the cesarean section rate in every hospital that has adopted them. A SILK PURSE. A recent Ontario survey on VBAC shows no decrease in the C-section rate in practices that are sustained by non-scientific beliefs and where no educational efforts are undertaken. A SOW'S EAR.

> "If physicians are indeed interested in knowing which therapy provides the best outcome at the least cost, then practice parameters provide a method to standardize the delivery system."

Why all the concern?

Why all of this concern over practice guidelines? It was several decades ago that small area analysis revealed wide disparities in practice patterns in otherwise similar communities. Two towns 50 miles apart might have similar demographics, yet they would have two to three times variation in hysterectomy rates without apparent variance in long term health outcomes. Why? The only apparent variable was a difference in practice style. But, as long as the bills were paid, who cared?

Enter the growth of managed care. If you could obtain the same long term health care results at decreased cost, the standardization of the process of care delivery assumed major importance.

Enter the increased propensity of physicians to form groups. These differences in practice style became more apparent and harder to explain. A few years ago a friend of mine called into a pediatric group to inquire about the immunization schedule for her children. The receptionist asked her, "Which physician will be seeing the children?" "You mean it makes a difference?" she asked. "Yes, they all have differing immunization schedules," was the answer. If four pediatricians cannot agree on something as basic as childhood immunizations, the problems in the development of nationally recognized practice guidelines soon become monumental in size.

Enter the era of medical outcomes analysis. Be they the publication of Medicare outcomes of coronary bypass procedures or an analysis of the appropriate management of benign prostatic hypertrophy or a study of the outcomes of cataract extractions in nursing home patients, many people began to look at medical outcomes and the process by which the treatment was rendered. The payors are interested in getting the biggest bang for their buck. Specialty societies have the academic interest of verifying longstanding therapies to act as a baseline for comparing newly developed technologies. Legislators and the public they represent are prioritizing medical therapies in the face of dwindling public funds available for health care. If there is no clear "best way" to treat a particular medical problem, then guidelines don't make sense.

But, if physicians are indeed interested in knowing which therapy provides the best outcome at the least cost, then practice parameters provide a method to standardize the delivery system.

Who should take the lead?

Who is to lead in the development of practice parameters? There seems to be no lack of volunteers with the poorly veiled threat that if physicians are not involved, others will do the job for us. The government, through the Agency for Health Care Policy and Research, an agency of the U.S. Public Health Service, is deeply involved in Clinical Practice Guidelines Development. Although academic physicians are represented on most of the panels, nursing, other health care practitioners, as well as consumers, are prominently represented. These guidelines will serve as the bible against which the care delivered will be judged by those agencies that are paying for the health care. Even if you don't like the concept, a wise physician would make him/herself aware of these guidelines. Organized medicine is providing leadership through the AMA Practice Parameter Forum and Partnership. The 1,600 guidelines that have been developed by specialty societies, managed care systems, hospital staffs, medical schools and even individuals are catalogued in the AMA's Directory of Practice Parameters.

To maintain some order to this process, panels have been formed to develop consistency in the language used in the development of guidelines. Panels such as the AMA Advisory Panel for the Evaluation of Practice Parameters have established the attributes of high quality guidelines. These are characterized by: validity, reliability/reproducibility, clinical applicability, clinical flexibility, clarity, multidisciplinary process, scheduled review and documentation. The AMA Board of Trustees wants to see practice parameters developed by physician organizations with expertise in the specific area in question. The parameters should be based on reliable research and clinical expertise, be as comprehensive and specific as possible, be revised at regular intervals and be widely disseminated.

Obstacles remain

Obstacles to the effective implementation of guidelines remain. "Practice parameters are cookbook medicine." "It will not work here." "There is no proof of their efficacy." "Our physicians are resistant." Practice parameters are not magic. They are only a means to the end of better results at lower cost. They are not a cookbook or rigid standards of care. But variance from a parameter will require a recognition of the parameter and a documentation of why variance from the parameter made sense in the specific instance in question. They will require modification before implementation at the local level. National parameters will require a major physician educational effort. They will require an environment of CQI/TQM to foster a cycle of continuing improvement rather than a system of punishment for non-compliance.

It is yet unclear what we are getting with practice parameters. Do the potential benefits come at too great a cost to the individual physician and patient? Will the proposed malpractice relief turn up unsuspected legal loopholes? Will innovation in the delivery of health care be stifled? Will cost savings occur at the expense of quality? Do guidelines cut cost or control doctors? Only time will tell us whether we have bought a silk purse or a sow's ear.

THE JAMES...THE NEXT GENERATION OF HOPE

OUR AREA OF EXPERTISE COVERS A LOT OF GROUND.

Cancer crosses all cultures and all nationalities without exception. So it stands to reason that the treatment and eventual cure of a condition experienced worldwide would require talent and intellect from around the globe.

That's why the planners of The Arthur G. James Cancer Hospital and Research Institute, a National Cancer Institute designated Comprehensive Cancer Center, set out to staff this promising medical center with the top researchers in their field, wherever they might be found. Their search resulted in a respected team of renowned specialists from all around the world.

However, this search would never have been successful without a highly attractive institution. Designed to provide the optimum environment for the development and application of effective cancer treatments, The James houses remarkable research facilities within the same building as an equally excellent treatment center. Because the organization's approach to research is so integrated, the lag time between laboratory breakthroughs and practical application is dramatically decreased. Collaboration between research teams and clinical specialists of the Comprehensive Cancer Center, which are composed of University graduate programs in chemistry, biological sciences, pharmacy and veterinary medicine, has enabled research efforts to advance efficiently while benefiting from the resources of one of the nation's leading University medical programs.

Beginning with the very first blueprints, The James was designed to provide researchers with the facilities, technology and opportunity to conduct their best work. Today, it is a reality that is dedicated to offering hope to the current generation of cancer patients as well as the promise of eradication to those in the future.

PRACTICE PARAMETERS:

More than 1,500 have been developed since 1989 and more are in the works

By John T. Kelly, MD, PhD and Margaret C. Toepp, PhD

The medical profession has a long history of leadership in a wide array of activities to ensure quality, appropriate, and necessary medical care. With strong empirical evidence indicating that use of practice parameters can improve the quality of medical care and facilitate appropriate utilization of health care services, the American Medical Association (AMA) in conjunction with numerous medical specialty and state medical societies, the federal government, and other groups, is actively involved in the development, evaluation, dissemination, and implementation of practice parameters. Increasingly, physician and nonphysician organizations are working cooperatively in the rapidly evolving practice parameters arena.

Overview of Activities

Consistent with its broad commitment to promote quality medical care, in 1989 the AMA established two working groups of national medical specialty and state medical societies—the Practice Parameters Partnership and the Practice Parameters Forum—to address the development of practice parameters by physician organizations. The Practice Parameters Partnership is a cooperative activity created to guide and coordinate the activities of the medical profession in the development, evaluation, dissemination, and implementation of practice parameters. Originally comprising the AMA and 14 of the largest national medical specialty societies, the Practice Parameters Partnership has been expanded to include three nonphysician organizations that are influential in the development, evaluation, dissemination, and/or implementation of practice parameters: the Agency for Health Care Policy and Research (AHCPR), the American Hospital Association, and the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations.

Since its establishment, the Practice Parameters Partnership has been responsible for the adoption and implementation of numerous resolutions that have advanced the development, evaluation, dissemination, and appropriate implementation of scientifically sound, clinically relevant practice parameters. The Practice Parameters Partnership has also participated in a coordinating and advisory capacity in a variety of practice parameters projects spear-headed by the federal government, the research community, and other groups, including

- the selection of clinical topics that warrant guidelines development under the auspices of AHCPR;
- the review and refinement of the Health Care Financing Administration's Uniform Clinical Data Set clinical algorithms; and
- the development of practice parameters based on appropriateness criteria for the Clinical Appropriateness Initiative, a cooperative project of the AMA, the Academic Medical Center Consortium (Rochester, NY), and RAND (Santa Monica, CA).

The second working group established by the AMA was the Practice Parameters Forum. With active participation of more than 80 medical specialty and state medical societies and other interested organizations, the Practice Parameters Forum provides the scientific expertise and broad-based clinical representation nec-

Development Issues

The AMA, together with the Practice Parameters Partnership and the Practice Parameters Forum, has established principles for the development of practice parameters. Practice parameters are strategies for patient management, developed to assist physicians in clinical decision making. A generic term, practice parameters is often used synonymously with a variety of terms used by other organizations and individuals, including

- practice guidelines: recommendations issued for the purpose of influencing decisions about health interventions; and
- standards: practice policies in which the health and economic consequences of an intervention are sufficiently well known to permit decisions, and if there is virtual unanimity among patients about the desirability (or undesirability) of the intervention, and about the proper use (or nonuse) of the intervention.

Since 1989, when the AMA first published its Directory of Practice Parameters, which identified more than 700 parameters, almost 1,500 practice parameters developed by more than 45 physician organizations and other groups have been identified. In addition, there are more than 200 practice parameters currently under development by physician organizations and other groups.

To ensure the development of scientifically sound, clinically relevant practice parameters that are applicable in the day-to-day practice of medicine, the AMA, in conjunction with the Practice Parameters Partnership and the Practice Parameters Forum, developed Attributes to Guide the Development of Practice Parameters. Practice parameters should be developed by or in conjunction with physician organizations having scientific and clinical expertise in the content area of the practice parameter. Practice parameters should be based on reliable methodologies that integrate relevant research findings and appropriate clinical judgement/review process on which practice parameters are based should be described, and the qualifications of the reviewers/clinical experts should be provided. Practice parameters should be comprehensive and specific, and specific clinical management strategies should be noted. Practice parameters should be based on current information and written, reviewed, or revised within the past three years. Practice parameters should be

- Principles will be developed to facilitate "joint efforts" by physician organizations to develop, review, evaluate, or endorse practice parameters.
- Properly designed outcomes studies will be promoted as a basis for the development of practice parameters.
- Organizations developing practice parameters will be encouraged to address the cost implications of management strategies, and the costs of alternate management strategies, when appropriate, when cost information is available, reliable, and relevant.
- Strategies to identify and disseminate practice parameters that conform with the Attributes to Guide the Development of Practice Parameters will be implemented.
- The impact of the various implementation strategies for practice parameters on physician practice patterns, quality assurance programs, utilization review systems, coverage policies, and liability reform will be evaluated.
- Mechanisms will be identified to facilitate the use of practice parameters conforming to the Attributes to Guide the Development of Practice Parameters as a foundation for clinical indicators used by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations and used by hospitals as part of their quality improvement efforts.
- Practice parameters conforming to the Attributes to Guide the Development of Practice Parameters should provide a basis for the development of review criteria used in quality assurance programs, utilization review systems, and coverage policies.
- Mechanisms will be developed to obtain and evaluate review criteria and assess their conformance to relevant practice parameters developed by or in conjunction with physician organizations.
- Strategies to facilitate the appropriate use of practice parameters in health system reform will be developed.
- The federal government and the states, when considering whether to enact any legislation that would grant statutory recognition to the use of practice parameters in professional liability actions, will be encouraged to evaluate carefully all available evidence on whether such an approach would assure quality of care and alleviate some of the negative effects of the professional liability environment.
- The relationship between practice parameters and the Health Care Financing Administration's Uniform Clinical Data Set should be identified.

widely disseminated, and plans to publish practice parameters in peer-reviewed/other widely circulated publications should be noted. A preliminary review of the processes by which most recently completed practice parameters were developed indicate that they conform to the principles identified in the Attributes.

There is currently no single method for developing practice parameters. In fact, many different methods, of which some emphasize evaluation of the scientific literature and others emphasize the value of consensus among recognized clinical experts, have been used to develop reliable and effective practice parameters. In 1992 the AMA established an advisory panel to develop recommendations on methods for reviewing and evaluating practice parameters that would facilitate their scientific soundness and clinical credibility. The panel evaluates practice parameters on the basis of their process of development, using an instrument that was designed to determine the conformance of practice parameters to the principles outlined in the Attributes.

Implementation of Practice Parameters

Practice parameters are an integral component of quality advancement programs. By providing recommendations on the optimal management of specific clinical conditions, practice specific clinical conditions, practice parameters enable physicians and other health care professionals to enhance their professional performance and thereby improve patient care.

The AMA has identified eight major steps to facilitate the implementation of practice parameters in quality assessment, quality assurance (QA), and quality improvement programs.

The recommendations contained in practice parameters may be suitable for use as written, or they may need to be modified by physicians and other health care professionals who will be using the recommendations. Practice parameters are more likely to be accepted by physicians when they have reviewed, adapted as necessary, and endorsed the recommendations. Modifications to the practice parameters may be necessary to form a consensus on appropriate medical practice.

Factors that appear to enhance compliance with specific practice parameters have been identified. Several studies have demonstrated that development or adaptation of practice parameters by physicians at the local level, accompanied by effective physician education, can significantly alter practice patterns and improve the quality of care. Physician feedback and use of physician educators, especially local opinion leaders, also appear to enhance compliance rates.

Benefits of Practice Parameters

As illustrated by the following examples, both physicians and patients have benefitted from the development and implementation of practice parameters:

- Practice parameters for performance of cesarean section (C-section) have resulted in a decrease in C-section rates with no increase in fetal or maternal morbidity or mortality;
- Practice parameters on proper timing of prophylactic antibiotic administration has been correlated with a 50% decline in incidence of deep postoperative wound infections;
- Practice parameters for monitoring patients during general anesthesia have resulted in a marked reduction in the incidence of hypoxic injuries;
- Practice parameters for cardiac pacemakers have resulted in a significant decline in pacemaker utilization rates; and
- Practice parameters for transfer of cardiac patients from coronary care units (CCUs) have improved the utilization of CCUs.

Legal Implications of Practice Parameters

Physicians, legislators, payers, and other groups have become increasingly concerned about the legal implications of practice parameters. The development and implementation of practice parameters do not appear to raise significant liability exposures for physicians, physician organizations, hospitals, payers, or other groups. For physicians, practice parameters do not create any new liabilities and may actually help to control existing liability risks. Practice parameters will, in all likelihood, be used as learned treatises, research reports, articles, and expert testimony are currently used; they will become another source of evidence for what the standard of care should be, and the litigation process will entitle the physician to explain any variations from the practice parameter.

Liability issues.

For the physician organizations, development of practice parameters may create new, although minimal, antitrust and tort liabilities. Practice parameters will violate antitrust principles if they are developed for the purpose of protecting the economic interests of specific groups of physicians. Tort liability may be increased if "defective" practice parameters that are alleged to cause bad patient outcomes are developed. Risk of antitrust and tort liability can be minimized by instituting proper procedures in the development and implementation of practice parameters.

Parameters as the standard of care. Under current law the introduction of practice parameters as evidence of the standard of care does not obligate the court to apply them. In fact, there are several outstanding issues that would require resolution before practice parameters could become prescriptive standards of care; they include the following:

- Lack of agreed-on processes and vocabularies: In their absence, courts would have to inquire about the processes used for development of a practice parameter, the meaning of the practice parameters's format, and the meaning of its terminology;
- Diversity of medicine: Practice parameters that address more complex clinical issues and present numerous options or alternative recommendations may be more difficult to apply as a judicial standard.
- Varying purposes and goals: Practice parameters that address the same clinical issue but for different reasons (for example, patient management, QA, utilization review, or claims payment) will present a problem for courts in deciding which practice parameters might apply and should serve as the governing standard of care; and

- Lack of scientific information: Practice parameters that cover areas of uncertainty will be difficult to apply as standards of care: The courts would have to decide which to apply if practice parameters developed by different organizations gave conflicting recommendations.

Legislative Efforts

The use of practice parameters in health care reform proposals is occurring on both the state and the federal levels to address issues related to quality, utilization, access, cost, and professional liability. Although it supports the use of practice parameters conforming to established principles as a basis for review criteria used in QA programs, utilization review systems, coverage policies, and liability reform, the AMA has urged the federal government and the states to forestall enactment of any new legislation that would grant statutory recognition to the use of practice parameters in professional liability actions until there exists adequate evidence that such an approach would ensure quality of care.

Conclusion

In response to rapidly accelerating environmental concerns regarding the quality, appropriateness, and cost of medical care, the AMA, other physician organizations, the federal government, and other groups have established a cohesive effort to facilitate the development, evaluation, dissemination, and implementation of practice parameters. There is growing recognition that practice parameters provide a promising mechanism to rationalize clinical practice; at both the federal and the state level, practice parameters and related QA mechanisms are key elements of legislative proposals to reform the health care system. Practice parameters are perceived as an effective mechanism to improve quality and enhance the value of health care services.

"Excellent overview of the process of Practice Guidelines and Practice Parameters development! We need to know the process so that we can be supportive!"

Sherra A. Mosher, RN
Muskegon

Impending changes to health care delivery as a result of national health care reform include the increased development and use of clinical practice parameters. This seminar will provide participants with an update on activities related to the development of practice parameters. It also will cover the status of mandated use of practice parameters in certain health care delivery systems, proactive physician involvement in practice parameter projects and continuing ideas for effectively incorporating parameters into health care quality improvement systems. Physicians attending this program may be eligible for medical liability premium reduction credits.

More on Medical Records

What you should know

By Julie Smith

Q Is it true that a separate consent form must be completed if a patient wants information released pertaining to HIV/AIDS treatment?

A The information contained within the patient's medical record is confidential and cannot be disclosed without proper authorization by the patient or the patient's legal representative. This authorization should be a written, signed authorization. AIDs-related legislation in Michigan has imposed requirements for release of HIV/AIDs related patient information. The law states that the individual's medical record may be released if the individual gives consent, but only if the written authorization is specific to the communicable disease or serious communicable disease or infection. Similar laws affect the release of information pertaining to drug and alcohol dependency, abuse and treatment; as well as mental health treatment. While a separate consent form is not necessary, the general consent form must contain language which allows the patient to give consent specifically to these issues. Unfortunately, if the patient denies consent to release information in any of these areas, the medical record must be reviewed carefully to remove the unauthorized information. See page 45 for an example of a medical record consent form.

Q Is it legal to fax information from patients' medical records even though confidentiality cannot be guaranteed?

A Fax transmission of information allows for expedient, accurate communication of patient information, and in many ways, can be very valuable from a practice management and risk management standpoint. Unfortunately, confidentiality of the information cannot be guaranteed, and caution must be taken when faxing confidential materials. The following guidelines* will promote protection of the patient's right of confidentiality, as well as the associated liability problems.

- Transmit patient data via fax only when the original document or mail-delivered copies will not serve.
- Fax patient data only when the information is to be used for a patient care encounter, not in routine release of data to insurance companies, attorneys, or other entities that can be served just as effectively by mail or messenger.
- Do not fax patient information relating to HIV/AIDS, mental health, or chemical dependency, except in patient care emergency situations with proper confidentiality safeguards.
- Require an authorization before releasing any information. If information on patients is required in an emergency situation, a policy should be developed that will address what constitutes proper emergency authorization.
- Instruct fax users on the proper procedures for handling confidential patient information.
- Locate fax machines in medical records departments or in patient care areas. It is recommended that you do not transmit patient care data to fax machines located in common areas, such as mailrooms, for example.
- Ensure that fax transmissions on thermal paper are photocopied onto regular paper before being included in the permanent medical record, to prevent deterioration.
- Confirm the fax number and dial carefully.

- A face sheet should accompany every fax transmission, and should identify the intended recipient, the sender, the sender's fax and telephone number, and that the faxed information is confidential and intended for that individual only. Direct the recipient of a misdirected fax to contact the sender immediately and to destroy the received materials.
- If a fax transmission containing patient data is not received by the intended recipient due to misdialing, check the internal logging system of the fax machine to obtain the misdialed fax number, and refax a request to destroy misdirected information. Misdirected-fax incidents should be promptly reported to the physician (in an office setting) or the risk management department (in the hospital setting).

HEALTH SYSTEM REFORM

Employer mandates will not be part of the final package, says Rep. Dave Camp 1994 promises to be the year for health system reform, but the issue is proving a contentious one, with broad national debate on the various federal plans being considered. Michigan Medicine recently spoke with Michigan's pipeline into the process, U.S. Representative Dave Camp [R-Midland], who serves on the House Ways & Means Committee, to handicap the current health care options, find out how reform will affect Michigan, and gauge what state health care practitioners are saying on the topic.

MM: The federal plans for reforming health care seem to be constantly shifting. As of now, what are the major plans under consideration?

Camp: You're right, there have been many plans. There are really four main ones, though, as of now. The first is the President's plan. This calls for, among other things, a national health board of seven unelected people. They'll set the [national] health care budget, which will then be divided per capita to the health care alliances, of which there will be at least one per state. Another aspect of the Clinton plan is the employer mandate for employee coverage. We're finding out now what the President's plan doesn't cover, such as child birth defects and chronic childhood illnesses. With the President in the White House, however, his plan is pretty much the benchmark. There would be a great deal more involvement by government. We're hearing concerns from back home about the mandates, and the possible loss of confidentiality.

MM: And the other plans?

Camp: There's a plan for a National Health System. This is probably the most liberal system, and would involve a complete takeover of the U.S. health care system. This has about 100 sponsors in the House, largely among liberal Democrats, but it doesn't have the support of President Clinton.

The Republican plan has some similarities to the President's bill. There's freedom to change jobs without losing health care benefits, it expands access, and it includes health care IRA's, the only plan that does. The Republican plan offers real reform, but without the mandates.

MM: What about the Cooper/Grandy plan?

Camp: Cooper/Grandy [titled for sponsoring representatives Jim Cooper (D-Tennessee) and Fred Grandy (R-Iowa)] is a fairly recent plan. It's bi-partisan, with pretty even support. It has no employer mandates either, and it represents an important middle ground.

MM: It sounds like you back the Republican plan.

Camp: Well, the Republican plan was the first one introduced, and it has the most co-sponsors at this stage. The Republican plan has some similarities to the President's bill, like the freedom to change jobs without losing benefits and expanding access. It does a better job of targeting limited resources to those who are working, but can't afford health care. Unfortunately, we don't have the microphone of the White House, so it's hard to get our alternatives across.

MM: But why, after 12 years of Republicans in the White House, are we only hearing about health care reform now?

Camp: I think a lot of these ideas have been around for some time, such as that there's room for reform to cover those not insured, but we don't need a government takeover.

MM: What are you hearing from health care people back in Michigan on reform?

Camp: I'm hearing a lot from physicians, and I've made it a point to meet with hospital boards and administrators. There's a lot of concern about the President's plan. I haven't been able to answer all the questions; we don't know how much it will cost, and the estimates vary dramatically. The President's plan was only introduced the day before we adjourned, so it's just starting to get scrutiny now. But health care people all agree on the need for administrative reforms. I hear a lot from them about what the reforms will mean to doctors and their patients. They want to know if it will mean a lowering in the quality of service. They want to know how to increase the number of people covered.

MM: It sounds like Michigan physicians are asking the right questions about reform.

Camp: Yes, I'm being asked the right questions. I think providers are focusing as they should. For instance, they're also asking if there will be significant malpractice reform in the President's plan. I tell them no.

MM: Will this dialogue with local health care providers continue?

Camp: We plan to set up a network to stay in touch with providers, because they feel they haven't been involved in drafting of the Clinton plan. We made sure to have help from physicians and hospital administrators in drafting the Republican plan. We've also been in touch with the business community.

MM: How will health system reform specifically affect Michigan?

Camp: The biggest effect would be in the auto industry. Auto retirees between their actual retirement and the age of 65 would be pulled into the government system. So management in the auto industry is very supportive of the Clinton plan. It would pull all those retirees off their balance sheets. I have some concern with that, however.

MM: We realize the plans are always shifting, but do you have any predictions about what the final reforms will look like?

Camp: I think the employer mandate will not be part of the final package. That will probably be the biggest issue. The Cooper/Grandy package, or something like it, will probably be the final compromise plan. Both the President's plan and the Republican plan will both offer areas for negotiation. Also, in the final plan the self-employed will be able to deduct the full cost of their health care coverage. We'll also see coverage portability, and pre-existing condition coverage. It may be that there will be no single bill to reform health care in one fell swoop. More likely, reform will happen over a series of steps.

HEALTH SYSTEM REFORM

What 's the best plan for Michigan?

Point/*Counter*point

By Ralph D. Ward

Plans for reforming health care in Michigan, like most major political issues, break down to two versions: Republican and Democratic. The current two-party numerical deadlock in the State House means that the views of both sides are equally relevant, and will be in close competition. To hear from both sides of the aisle on the issue of health reform, Michigan Medicine interviewed the two individuals who rotate as chair of the House Public Health Committee, Rep. John Jamian (R-40th District) and Rep. Michael Bennane (D-14th District).

Rep. John Jamian
(R-40th District)
"The Bennane proposal has some good components, such as standardized forms and alliances, but I'm fundamentally opposed to global budgets, and I'm also opposed to a state health care board."

MM: Rep. Jamian, what initiatives have you taken on health system reform?

Jamian: Well, we got together with the Governor's office to form a Republican Health Care Reform Advisory Committee. The purpose was to explore health system reform directly in Michigan. We didn't want to have a bunch of politicians and bureaucrats reform the greatest system in the world, but instead go to the medical community, the professionals and the insurance companies and ask them to tell us what reforms they think could be enacted to make the system better without throwing the baby out with the bathwater. With this we can build a foundation based on incremental changes. We've found that, out of 9.48 million citizens [in Michigan], less than 10 percent are without coverage. These people, the working poor, will be our focus. We'd offer a basic Medicaid-like policy, probably handled by the Medic-

Rep. Michael Bennane
(D-14th District)
"I'm not aware of any reform plans from the (Republican) side. And this is not a way of dealing with the truth."

MM: Rep. Bennane, what initiatives have you taken on health system reform?

Bennane: The Democratic plan is very much like the Clinton plan, except we have a modified single-payer concept. The state would collect and disburse funds. Unlike other state plans the state would not run the program. Basically, the health care system would be run by the people who now run it. As to how we would fund it, we don't have an exact outline yet. We have to wait on what they do in Washington. Probably the fairest, easiest method would be a form of payroll tax. We would also separate the state into geographic regions for reimbursement purposes to deal with the current problems of inequality in care. There might be seven or nine regions, the number is open for negotiation.

MM: What is your reaction to President Clinton's health system reform proposals?

aid system, but not with the Cadillac-level of insurance Medicaid now offers. This is probably the way to deal with this minority, to bring them into the Medicaid system, while simultaneously asking them and other citizens to be more involved in paying for their own care. Our progress on this has been great, but education and tax issues have taken up more time. We plan more meetings early this year.

MM: What is your reaction to President Clinton's health system reform proposals?

Jamian: I think he could throw the American economy and health care system totally out of kilter, because of his lack of understanding on the complex issues that built the current system. Ten years from now it could be too late if he puts through these changes without conclusive evidence of their effectiveness. A particular problem is the global budgets. These tell us that the government is trying to control the health care segment of the economy totally. Once we reach these ceilings, there will be nowhere else to go, and someone, somewhere will be denied service. That's troubling. Another problem is those health security cards. This is a government tracking system, and an invasion of our personal lives. Why is my health care or my family's the government's business?

MM: What are your goals for health care in Michigan?

Jamian: For Michigan, the goal is for all employers to be able to offer a health insurance policy, but without a [business] mandate to pay. Also, we need credit for those under an income line when they purchase their own insurance. I'd also like insurance reforms, providing a climate in the state that allows all health providers to participate.

MM: What do you think of the House Democrats' approach to health system reform?

Jamian: The Bennane proposal has some good components, such as standardized forms and alliances, but I'm fundamentally opposed to global budgets, and I'm also opposed to a state health care board. This means the state will have another bureaucracy to govern health care. Just try calling them at 4 p.m. on a Friday afternoon!

Bennane: I only have one concern with the Clinton plan. I'm not sure it deals enough with administrative costs. I'm afraid it wouldn't do what we hope to do [in Michigan], deliver quality care to all for less than we do now. We'd have a lot less administrative cost with a single payer system. There are other plans being discussed at the federal level, of course. The problem is that only a couple, including the President's plan, have universal coverage.

MM: What are your goals for health care in Michigan?

Bennane: We want to reduce cost and cover everybody. You can cut our current administrative costs by 20 to 40 percent. We should also start dealing with primary care. Last year in this state 70 percent of the doctors who graduated from our universities went into specialty medicine; only 30 percent entered primary care. This is heading in the wrong direction. I would start paying primary care physicians more than now, and perhaps specialists proportionately less. We've heard from parts of the health care community on reform. From some we've gotten very good feedback, but from others, let's say their efforts concentrate on maintaining the status quo, or less delicately, sticking their heads in the sand.

MM: What do you think of the House Republicans' approach to health system reform?

Bennane: I'm not aware of any reform plans from the other side. And this is not a way of dealing with the truth. Everyone in this country believes we have a wonderful health care system, but when you delve into this belief, people eventually confront reality and admit the system is not all it's thought to be. For example, most people don't understand the fact that we're paying four times what every other nation in the world is paying for health care, yet our people are no healthier, and in fact many are less healthy. Such questions are really hard to answer. But, regardless of whether the President's plan succeeds, this country will have begun to deal with the health care problem.

Update on Occupational Disease Reporting in Michigan

By Nella Davis-Ray

Small companies and physicians in private practice may not be aware of their responsibility to report occupational diseases, according to the Michigan Department of Public Health.

Part 56 of Michigan's Public Health Code (Act 368 of 1978) requires employers and the medical community in the state to report known or suspected cases of occupational disease (OD). Cases must be reported to the Michigan Department of Public Health within 10 days after discovery of the disease or condition on a report form furnished by the Department. Although the response to the law and the Department's appeal for reports was initially encouraging, the number of reports received steadily declined through most of the 1980s.

In 1988, the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH) began funding an occupational disease surveillance project in Michigan called SENSOR (Sentinel Event Notification System for Occupational Risks.) Through the efforts of Doctor Kenneth Rosenman and Project SENSOR, the number of OD reports received by the Department increased from 87 in 1987 to 8,980 in 1991. Despite this dramatic improvement, the Department believes that compliance with the Part 56 requirement can be enhanced even further.

Why MDPH wants OD reports

Why does MDPH want OD reports? Act 154 of 1974, Michigan's Occupational Safety and Health Act, empowered the Department's Division of Occupational Health to administer and enforce Michigan's occupational health standards. Examples of commonly cited occupational health standards are occupational noise and respiratory protection. Currently the division has an enforcement staff of 27 industrial hygienists. They are responsible for responding to the occupational health concerns of employees at 193,981 Michigan workplaces. Ideally, every hazardous workplace should be inspected on a regular basis to identify, evaluate and correct health-threatening exposures among employees. However, budgetary and other constraints limit the agency's ability to identify all workplaces where potential problems exist. Therefore, the role played by physicians in pinpointing occupational illness is vital in directing the division's intervention efforts.

Table

In 1991, the five most frequently reported conditions were as follows:

Disease Type	Percent of total reports
1. Disease of the musculoskeletal system and connective tissue (e.g., carpal tunnel syndrome)	31.9
2. Diseases of the nervous system and sensory organs (e.g., noise-induced hearing loss)	15.6
3. Diseases of the respiratory system (e.g., pneumoconioses and pneumonitis)	11.5
4. Diseases of the skin and subcutaneous tissue (e.g., contact dermatitis and chemical burns)	7.6
5. Burns confined to the eye	5.2

OD reports revealing

What has the department learned from OD reports? The code mandates that the report identify the affected employees, the employer, the nature of the disease and other information required by the department. In 1991, most of the OD reports to the Department were submitted by large companies' medical departments or medical directors. A small percentage were submitted by small companies and physicians in private practice, which is surprising given that more than half of Michigan's workplaces employ fewer than five workers. This reporting pattern does not necessarily mean that large companies are more hazardous. Instead, it suggests that small companies and physicians in private practice may not be aware of their responsibility to report occupational diseases.

> "Small companies and physicians in private practice may not be aware of their responsibility to report occupational diseases."

Repetitive motion disorders were the most frequently reported occupational disease (see table), consistent with worker's disability compensation data for 1989. The largest category of claims received by the Michigan Department of Labor, Bureau of Worker's Disability Compensation, was for repetitive trauma, 40.9 percent. Ergonomics became the occupational health buzzword of the 1980s. These data indicate that occupational disease prevention efforts in the 1990s should continue to focus on ergonomics.

Requests for OD reporting forms and further information on occupational disease reporting or ergonomics should be directed to the Michigan Department of Public Health, Division of Occupational Health, 3423 N. Logan Street, Lansing, Michigan 48909 (telephone: 517-335-8250)

YOCON®
YOHIMBINE HCl

Description: Yohimbine is a 3a-15a-20B-17a-hydroxy Yohimbine-16a-carboxylic acid methyl ester. The alkaloid is found in Rubaceae and related trees. Also in Rauwolfia Serpentina (L) Benth. Yohimbine is an indolalkylamine alkaloid with chemical similarity to reserpine. It is a crystalline powder, odorless. Each compressed tablet contains (1/12 gr.) 5.4 mg of Yohimbine Hydrochloride.

Action: Yohimbine blocks presynaptic alpha-2 adrenergic receptors. Its action on peripheral blood vessels resembles that of reserpine, though it is weaker and of short duration. Yohimbine's peripheral autonomic nervous system effect is to increase parasympathetic (cholinergic) and decrease sympathetic (adrenergic) activity. It is to be noted that in male sexual performance, erection is linked to cholinergic activity and to alpha-2 adrenergic blockade which may theoretically result in increased penile inflow, decreased penile outflow or both.

Yohimbine exerts a stimulating action on the mood and may increase anxiety. Such actions have not been adequately studied or related to dosage although they appear to require high doses of the drug. Yohimbine has a mild anti-diuretic action, probably via stimulation of hypothalmic centers and release of posterior pituitary hormone.

Reportedly, Yohimbine exerts no significant influence on cardiac stimulation and other effects mediated by B-adrenergic receptors, its effect on blood pressure, if any, would be to lower it; however no adequate studies are at hand to quantitate this effect in terms of Yohimbine dosage.

Indications: Yocon® is indicated as a sympathicolytic and mydriatic. It may have activity as an aphrodisiac.

Contraindications: Renal diseases, and patient's sensitive to the drug. In view of the limited and inadequate information at hand, no precise tabulation can be offered of additional contraindications.

Warning: Generally, this drug is not proposed for use in females and certainly must not be used during pregnancy. Neither is this drug proposed for use in pediatric, geriatric or cardio-renal patients with gastric or duodenal ulcer history. Nor should it be used in conjunction with mood-modifying drugs such as antidepressants, or in psychiatric patients in general.

Adverse Reactions: Yohimbine readily penetrates the (CNS) and produces a complex pattern of responses in lower doses than required to produce peripheral a-adrenergic blockade. These include, anti-diuresis, a general picture of central excitation including elevation of blood pressure and heart rate, increased motor activity, irritability and tremor. Sweating, nausea and vomiting are common after parenteral administration of the drug.[1,2] Also dizziness, headache, skin flushing reported when used orally.[1,3]

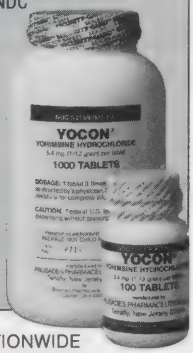

Dosage and Administration: Experimental dosage reported in treatment of erectile impotence.[1,3,4] 1 tablet (5.4 mg) 3 times a day, to adult males taken orally. Occasional side effects reported with this dosage are nausea, dizziness or nervousness. In the event of side effects dosage to be reduced to ½ tablet 3 times a day, followed by gradual increases to 1 tablet 3 times a day. Reported therapy not more than 10 weeks.[3]

How Supplied: Oral tablets of Yocon® 1/12 gr. 5.4 mg in bottles of 100's NDC 53159-001-01 and 1000's NDC 53159-001-10.

HEALTHY RELATIONSHIPS

"With the Specialist Referral Network, we make one phone call and St. Luke's handles the rest."

Dr. William Starbird
Family Practice, North Branch

"Since I don't do obstetrics, I'm often in need of a good OB/GYN for referrals. St. Luke's Specialist Referral Network introduced me to Dr. Paschall and I've been referring patients to him ever since. He's always treated my patients very well and he does a good job of keeping me informed of their progress."

Dr. David Paschall, Obstetrics/Gynecology
St. Luke's Specialist Referral Network

"I enjoy working with Dr. Starbird and his patients. I make sure he's kept up to date on any significant occurrences during pregnancy. Then, after delivery, mother and baby are sent back to him along with complete documentation on the pregnancy. There's no doubt that Dr. Starbird and I, and a lot of expectant mothers, have benefitted from our relationship through the Network."

SPECIALIST REFERRAL NETWORK

What are rural physicians saying about St. Luke's Specialist Referral Network? They're saying it's quick. It's efficient. It gives them immediate access to the expertise of dozens of area specialists. It works. And the specialists of the Network couldn't agree more.

When a healthy relationship with one of our specialists can help you and your patient, call the Specialist Referral Network at 1-800-541-3939.

MSMS Reimbursement Roundup

By Joyce Nurenberg
MSMS REIMBURSEMENT OMBUDSMAN

Following are answers to questions about reimbursement issues MSMS received from member physicians and their staffs over the last month.

Q Am I entitled to interest on money that Medicare took back through incoming vouchers after a fair hearing judgment was found in my favor?

A Yes. Medicare does charge interest whenever money is recovered, therefore, a judgment found in your favor would result in reimbursement to you for the associated interest. You are entitled to additional interest if the refund, as explained in your fair hearing notification letter, is not returned to you in 30 days from the date of the letter. Interest begins to accrue on the 31st day.

Q Medicare rejected a claim. The claim was statused and Medicare eventually paid, but it was four months after it was initially submitted. Am I entitled to interest?

A No. Per Section 5240 of the Medicare Carriers Manual, interest payments are not payable on clean claims initially denied and on which payment is subsequently made as a result of an appeal request.

Suggestion: allow a maximum of four days for the mail plus another 45 days to complete the review. After this time, contact Medicare provider inquiry. If the answer you receive is not satisfactory, contact your professional relations representative or me.

Q How do I recognize a Railroad Medicare Beneficiary?

A These beneficiary cards have a prefix in front of the Health Insurance Claim number instead of a suffix after it. The Health Insurance Claim number will be either six digits or the regular nine.

The mailing address for Railroad Medicare claims is: Travelers RRB Medicare Claim Office, P.O. Box 669, Augusta, Georgia 30999.

Q I am a BCBSM PPO provider and have referred a patient to a physician outside of the PPO network. The office is now asking for a referral form. We have never been required to fill out a referral form before. It this correct? If so, how do we locate the necessary form?

A It is necessary when you refer a patient to a non-network PPO provider to fill out a referral form #7985. Services are only payable to non-network providers when services are referred.

To get these forms, write to BCBSM, Material Management - L800, 53200 Grand River, New Hudson, MI 48165.

Q What is the definition of prolonged attention?

A According to the CPT Assistant, prolonged attention is defined as a service that is time based, does not require a medical emergency or the constant attention of the physician. This year procedure codes 99150 and 99151, prolonged physician attendance requiring physician detention beyond usual service, have been deleted. In their place, effective in CPT 1994 procedure codes 99354-99359, prolonged service with or without direct (face-to-face) patient contact beyond the usual service, are available. See the CPT for a complete description and application of these codes.

Q Which modifier is correct for reporting Technical Surgical Assistant services to BCBSM, Y1-Y7 or 80-82?

A Either are acceptable. The modifier is informational only. Payment is driven first by the eligibility to pay a TSA fee and second by the type of service which should be reported with an "8." Notation of eligibility is contained in the Michigan Uniform Procedure coding manual next to the procedure. A "T" next to the procedure code means TSA payment is eligible under all programs, "RB" denotes coverage for

Have Reimbursement Questions?
MSMS Can Help You

MSMS Reimbursement Ombudsman Joyce Nurenberg stands ready to assist you with your reimbursement questions. Just call (517) 336-5722.

Practice Tips:

- Always submit letters to BCBSM with the proper mail code. Refer to the directory mailed December 1992 or call BCBSM at 313-225-9000.
- To non-participating physicians with Medicare, use the appropriate limiting charge for services subject to the site of service differential (reduction of practice expense RVU by 50 percent when performed in the outpatient or inpatient setting). These are marked by an asterisk in your fee schedule.
- Review modifiers and communicate to staff when patient situations arise so that the proper modifier will be submitted with the claim. Use of modifiers can reduce the number of rejections or number of claims held for medical review. Refer to Appendix A of the CPT manual for the list of major modifiers.
- Review the May 1993 and December 1993 issues of the Medicare Part B Bulletin for the office surgeries that will pay separately for the surgical tray plus many other changes for 1994.
- Especially for those offices that already hold office hours weekday evenings or on Saturday, instruct billing staff to make phone calls to patients with outstanding balances. Many articles have been published noting that this practice is more successful than calling between the hours of 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. weekdays or by simply mailing monthly statements.

Regular Business and the Federal Employee Program (FEP) only, "MC" for Medicare and "MDSS" denotes Medicaid coverage.

Q Medicaid recently rejected a new code with a January date of service with an edit code of 092, "procedure code not valid for date of service billed." When does Medicaid begin accepting the 1994 codes?

A Medicaid is required to give 30 days written notice before the current year changes are implemented. Notice begins when the Michigan Uniform Procedure Coding manual (MUPC) is released. It is expected that the MUPC will be released February 1. Therefore, the new codes will be accepted by Medicaid for dates of service March 1 and after.

Q What is the code to use for a percutaneous placement of a jejunostomy tube?

A If the jejunostomy tube was percutaneously placed separate from another intraoperative procedure, CPT code 44300 should be reported. This code indicates enterostomy or cecostomy, tube (eg, for decompression or feeding) (separate procedure.) When the tube is placed during an operative procedure, use code 44015, tube jejunostomy for enteral alimentation intraoperative, any method. (List separately in addition to primary procedure.)

"Mercy allowed me to maintain my independence while becoming part of the team here. They did everything. They moved me, put ads in the newspaper, and printed up cards, stationery and announcements. They introduced me to the physicians in the area, and because they were actively recruiting someone in my position, I felt needed and wanted from the word 'go.' "

Mercy Health Services North is actively recruiting physicians in Internal Medicine, Family Practice, Pediatrics and OB/GYN. We helped Dr. Bizzigotti find professional satisfaction and we'd like to do the same for you. For further information, call or send C.V. to: Physician Recruitment, Mercy Health Services North, Dept. A Car Accident Can Change Your Mind

One third of those injured in significant motor vehicle accidents experience emotional or cognitive problems caused by mild traumatic brain injury, or MTBI. Once viewed as minor, there is now strong medical evidence that MTBI can have a dramatic impact on one's family and professional life.

MTBI is often caused by a blow to the head or whiplash typical of car accidents. Symptoms include depression, headache, irritability, difficulty in thinking clearly, loss of memory and sleep disturbance. Experience shows that MTBI patients recover more quickly and completely when treatment includes psychological as well as physical care.

Michigan Trauma Center specializes in the treatment of mild traumatic brain injuries, post traumatic stress disorder and other psychological effects of injury. For a detailed report on MTBI, call Armin I. Feldman, M.D. at (810) 356-8000.

Practice Parameters
Physician Input is Key

By Gilbert B. Bluhm, MD

The American Academy of Pediatrics pioneered the concept of practice guidelines back in the early 1930s. The Institute of Medicine defines practice guidelines as "systematically developed statements (of recommendations for patient management) to assist practitioner and patient decisions about appropriate health care for specific clinical circumstances." Other terms such as "standards of care," "professional standards," and "appropriate guidelines," have clouded the acceptance by physicians. Consequently, the skepticism by physicians and their expressed fear of misuse by "third party payors," "professional review organizations," "health insurance carriers," and the legal profession delayed the development and application of practice parameters until the last decade. With caustic aplomb some physicians still denounce the concept as "cookbook" medicine!

There are advantages

During the 1980s a few specialty societies used medical guidelines to good advantage. Anesthesiologists were especially at risk for malpractice claims. This high risk specialty developed practice guidelines, applied them in the operating and recovery rooms and noted improved patient safety. Another result was a significantly diminished number of malpractice claims and a decrease in medical liability insurance premiums.

The AMA was initially founded in 1849 to assure quality medical care and to promote the art and science of medicine. These tenets continue to direct its policy. In 1989, the AMA assigned two work groups consisting of national medical specialty and state medical societies to practice parameters. These are the Practice Parameters Partnership and the Practice Parameters Forum. They are widely represented and have made numerous resolutions for policy consideration through the AMA councils and by action of the AMA House of Delegates. Since 1989, the AMA has published a "Directory to Practice Parameters." In the 1993 Edition, it indexed 1,500 practice parameters, guidelines and standards which have been developed by more than 45 physician organizations and other groups such as the AHA, JCAHO and AHCPR. MSMS has copies of the directory on hand for physician reference. Personal copies can be ordered from the AMA.

The US Congress got into the act officially in November 1989, too. It mandated a new agency to develop, evaluate and disseminate practice guidelines. It was named the Agency for Health Care Policy and Research (AHCPR). By the autumn of 1993, it had produced and published guidelines by the Forum for Quality and Effectiveness in Health Care for cataracts, pain management, BPH, urinary incontinence, prevention and treatment of pressure sores, and diagnosis and early treatment of depressed patients in the primary care setting.

It becomes important not to reduplicate effort or "re-invent the wheel." It's not just the cost, but if states act too independently there is concern for greater variation for the same practice parameter.

One expects these efforts to raise the quality, improve the efficiency and decrease the cost of health care by the proper application of the latest science and knowledge. No doubt these continued efforts will require "actively practicing physician" input and scrutiny. We owe it to the public, for it has always been the destiny of our profession to do the best.

Quality programs and exceptional service! Working as a Team, Trustees and staff of the Michigan State Medical Society's Group Insurance Trust (GIT) continually strive to improve existing services and initiate new programs to meet the ever changing needs of physicians. Placing physicians first is a day-to-day reality for the Group Insurance Trust.

Responding to the needs of physicians, the GIT has expanded its health and dental programs to include Preferred Provider Organization (PPO) options. These comprehensive, cost effective options were designed to provide physicians with additional choices.

The GIT is committed to service. Our Team of experienced personnel is able to provide individualized attention to all GIT subscribers. The GIT staff is available by telephone or in person to answer benefit questions and conduct benefit meetings. Subscribers can depend on the Trust's quality service assistance.

Call the GIT before renewing your health, dental, disability, life or accident policy. Our Team is ready to serve you. Remember, the MSMS Group Insurance Trust is the physicians Trust, providing quality insurance coverage for MSMS physicians, their families and their employees.

Our Team is working today for your better tomorrow!

MICHIGAN MEDICINE

APRIL 1994 VOLUME 93, NO. 4

Award-Winning Journal of the Michigan State Medical Society

COVER STORY

It's no secret that running a medical practice today is a more difficult, more complex task than ever before. As the complexities of reimbursement, government regulations, advancing technology and managed care contracts grow at a significant rate, the responsibilities of managing a practice intensify. This month's Michigan Medicine cover story explores, in depth, why physicians should hire professional office managers and how. It also includes information on a host of MSMS educational seminars for physicians and their staffs. Also included is a feature on the Michigan Medical Group Managers Association, one of the most prominent organizations of its kind in the state. Other highlights include an article on effective interviewing techniques, and a review of telephone etiquette for office staff. Rounding out this expanded cover story is a rundown of the many programs and services offered through Physician Service Group, Inc., an MSMS subsidiary operation.

MSMS ON THE MOVE

Preparing physicians for change

New laws change Michigan licensure and discipline system

New laws take effect April 1 that will change how licensing and discipline of health care professionals is handled in Michigan.

MSMS Committee on Physician Licensure and Discipline Chair Donald H. Kuiper, MD, notes that, while the new legislation is not perfect, it represents the best physician/lawmaker compromise possible when the bills were signed in 1993.

Following are some highlights of the new laws effective this month:

- Processing of complaints and disciplinary sanctions must take no longer than one year. Under the old laws, there was no time limit. The process could go on indefinitely, usually an average of 24 months.
- A health care professional must report another health care professional if there's reason to believe a chemical dependency exists. This doesn't apply to professionals in a doctor-patient relationship, or to professionals who learn of problems through peer review activities.
- Under the new laws, chemically dependent or mentally ill individuals are encouraged to seek confidential treatment rather than being licensed. The old laws provided licensing board disciplinary sanctions for health care professionals found guilty of substance abuse.

If you have questions on these or other facets of the new laws, call Sandra Bitonti at (517) 336-5737 or Greg Aronin at (517) 336-5739 in the MSMS Department of Government Relations.

MSMS House of Delegates set for May 6-8 in Grand Rapids

The 129th annual session of the MSMS House of Delegates will take place May 6-8 at the Amway Grand Plaza in Grand Rapids. Highlights will include an exaugural address by President Gilbert B. Bluhm, MD, installment of Jack L. Barry, MD, as the society's new president, and an address by AMA House of Delegates Speaker Daniel H. Johnson, Jr., MD.

Also, a physician issues forum on health system reform will be held on Saturday, May 7 from 11:45 a.m. to 1:45 p.m. A silent auction to raise funds for the MSMS Health Education Foundation will be held during the meeting. Call Donna Farougi at (517) 336-5735 for more details on business of the 1994 MSMS House of Delegates.

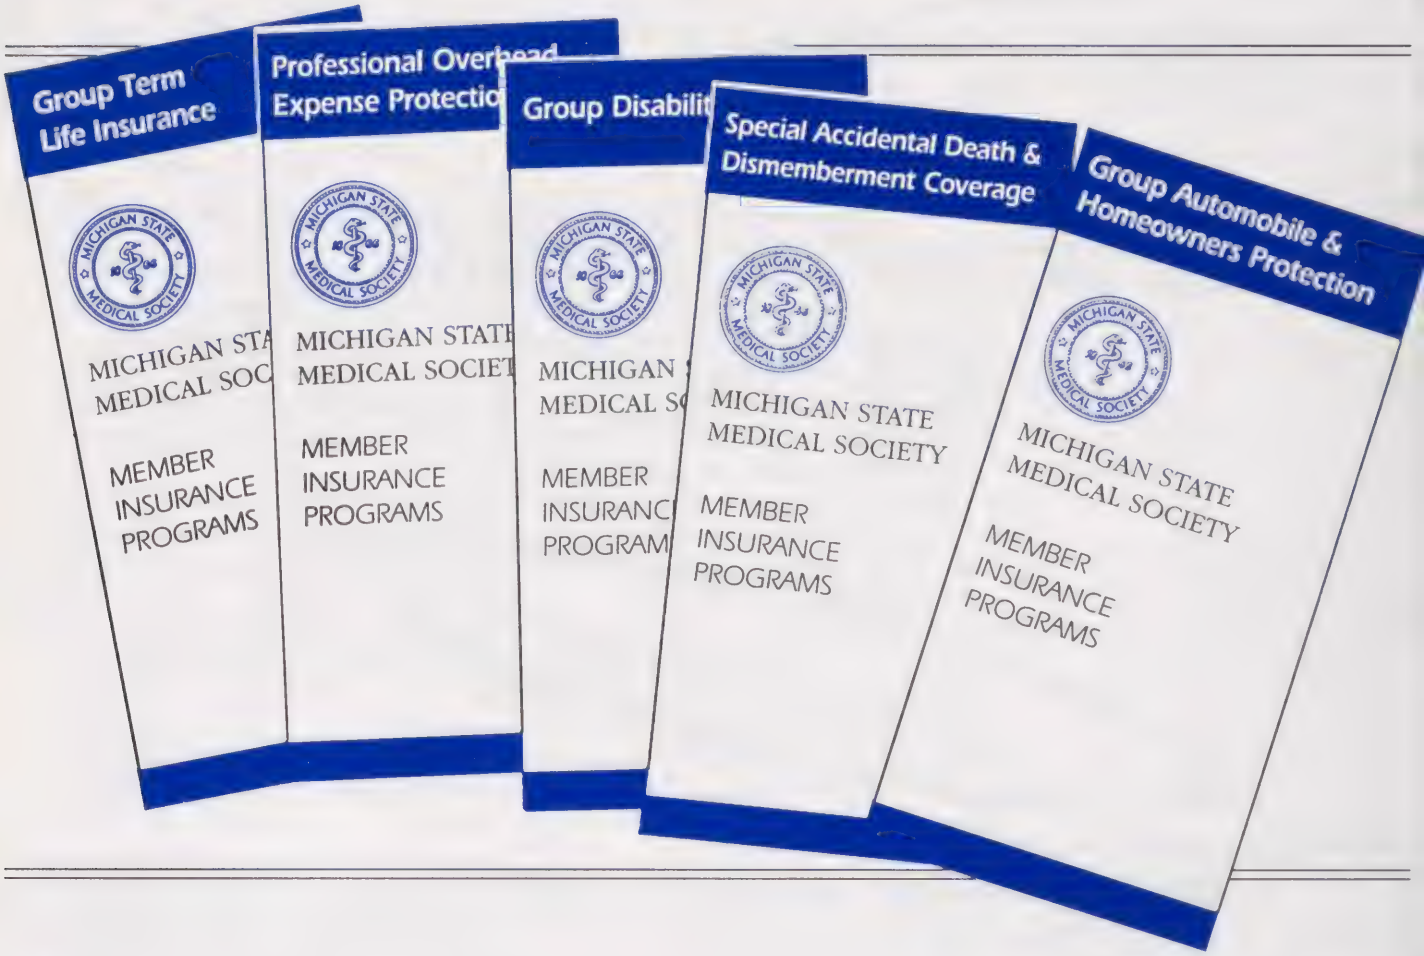

Join P.O.W.E.R.— get involved in health system reform

MSMS continues its work to spur development of the grassroots network, P.O.W.E.R. (Physicians Organized to Work for Effective Reform). This MSMS/AMA group is being organized to help physicians lobby federal lawmakers. Call Kevin A. Kelly at MSMS at (517) 336-5743 for details.

MSMS and the AMA also are urging doctors to get their patients involved in health system reform. Call the AMA at 1-800-348-3047, Dept. DPAP, for 25 free copies of the brochure, "A Message to My Patients." It describes the AMA position on reform and tells patients how they can get involved.

For details on these and other issues call William E. Madigan, Executive Director, MSMS 517/337-1351.

The Benefits of Membership

The availability of comprehensive insurance coverage is just one of the many benefits of Michigan State Medical Society membership. Over the years, MSMS, through its affiliated insurance agency, Stratton, Cheeseman & Walsh has been able to offer many cost-effective insurance programs. With Stratton, Cheeseman & Walsh's three decades of experience, MSMS members can deal with them in confidence.

Designed especially to meet the diverse needs of today's physicians, MSMS members have access to quality, group life, disability, business overhead protection and accidental death coverage. Employee group life and disability plans are also available.

Striving to meet the needs of physicians, the Michigan State Medical Society is pleased to announce its newest member benefit, group automobile and homeowners insurance. Auto Owners Insurance Company, a financially strong, Michigan-based property and casualty company was chosen because of their committment to service.

Why not join the several thousand MSMS members who currently enjoy the benefits of membership and call Stratton, Cheeseman & Walsh at 1-800-968-4929 and put your membership to work for you.

More on Medical Records

Forwarding patient information and documenting cancellations and no-shows

By Julie Smith

Q When asked by a patient's attorney to forward copies of the medical record, is it advisable to also send a summary to make sure he has total understanding of the care provided?

A No, in the vast majority of cases it is better to simply send the information which has been requested. While a dictated summary may provide information not contained within the medical record, it may also appear self-serving and may even prove to be incriminating. Many medical record requests from attorneys do not pertain to medical malpractice cases, but if they do, why assist the plaintiff attorney in his discovery process by offering "testimony without the benefit of defense council"?

Q Why should I document appointment cancellations and no-shows?

A Patients who continually cancel or do not show for appointments are at a higher risk for a poor health care outcome. Should a poor outcome occur as a direct or indirect result of the patient's failure to return for care and should a malpractice claim be initiated, the physician may be held responsible. That is because the physician is at an advantage to better understand the importance of the patient's need for care, and therefore, to educate the patient accordingly.

Recording information in the patient's medical record related to missed, canceled or rescheduled appointments can reduce risk exposure in two ways. First, it allows staff to be conscious of patients who frequently miss appointments. They can alert the physician so that appropriate action may be taken. Secondly, this documentation provides additional evidence regarding the patient's non-compliance with treatment, which will aid in the defense of related medical malpractice cases.

Many offices document no-shows and cancellations occurring on the same day of the appointment, but not those canceled in advance of the appointment or those which are rescheduled. These are equally important and should not be overlooked.

The task of documenting this information is often viewed as time-consuming and inconvenient, especially if medical records are not readily available to the receptionist. However, there are several methods of accomplishing this without taking significant time and effort out of an employee's already busy day. For example, MSMS has developed "cancellation stickers" - small adhesive-backed forms which can be used to document this information, then placed into the appropriate medical record at a more convenient time. These stickers are available at $120 for 100 sheets or $280 for 500 sheets, and can be obtained by calling (517) 336-5723.

Julie Smith is chief of risk management for MSMS.

Kent County physicians are concerned about the public health dangers of tobacco use—and they're doing something about it.

With the leadership of Tom Peterson, MD, a Grand Rapids pediatrician, the Kent County Medical Society formed Physicians Against Tobacco in 1993. Comprised mostly of Kent County physicians and residents, the focus of the committee is to target tobacco prevention programs at elementary students in an attempt to encourage healthy habits.

"Physicians, and more specifically pediatricians, need to help prevent children from starting to use tobacco, rather than trying to get them to stop later," says Doctor Peterson.

Members of Physicians Against Tobacco believe that physicians can play a vital role in influencing the choices children make. Committee members have given over 20 voluntary talks to fifth and sixth graders about the health risks associated with tobacco use in its various forms.

"This is a great age to get to children with health-related information," says William G. McClimans, Jr., executive director of the Kent County Medical Society. "They are willing to listen and most have not yet developed behaviors that are difficult to change later in life."

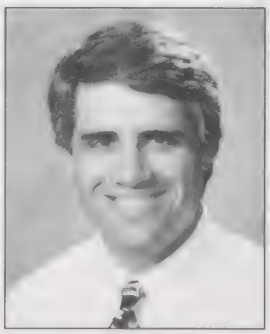

Parents need education, too

Physicians also can work to educate parents about the dangers of tobacco use. Doctor Peterson encourages physicians to be diligent in determining the health habits of family members. "If a parent knows their smoking may be harmful to their children, they are much more likely to get help to stop."

With its local success for momentum, Physicians Against Tobacco is taking its message statewide. The recently-formed Tobacco Free Michigan

Tom Peterson, MD

Donald Lawrenchuk, MD

Active Doctors (TFMAD) has called together a statewide advisory committee to oversee and coordinate tobacco education efforts throughout Michigan.

Donald Lawrenchuk, MD, medical director for the Wayne County Department of Public Health and member of the TFMAD Advisory Committee, is enthusiastic about the impact TFMAD can have in tobacco prevention efforts.

"As a public health physician, I have a long-standing interest and concern regarding tobacco control issues," he says. "However, this interest has grown to an outrage. Therefore, I want to play an active role in helping TFMAD achieve its prevention and education goals."

Future plans for Physicians Against Tobacco and TFMAD include a statewide conference aimed at physicians to discuss tobacco prevention techniques. The groups are working with the Michigan Academy of Family Physicians to gain support and funding for the conference.

Anticipating changes in our health system, Doctor Peterson believes the increasing reliance on primary care physicians will be a great help in tobacco prevention efforts.

"Everything is heading toward primary care," says Doctor Peterson. "Physicians need to be equipped with prevention tools to meet the challenges of a reformed health system."

Physicians Against Tobacco and TFMAD welcome any interested physicians who would like to become involved in their tobacco prevention activities. For more information, contact the Kent County Medical Society at 616-458-4157.

Many Happy Returns.

Over the past decade, Delta Dental's renewal rate has averaged an amazing 97%. How did we do it? Part of the answer is our pioneering work in cost management.

Last year alone, our contracting agreements with nine out of ten Michigan dentists, combined with a unique and comprehensive claims management system, saved our groups and our subscribers over $63 million.

But saving money doesn't mean skimping on service. According to a recent study, 99% of our customers gave Delta Dental high marks for overall satisfaction.

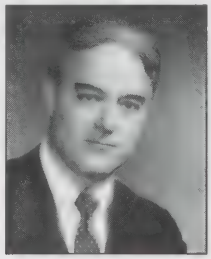

Service and savings have made us Michigan's number one group dental plan. No wonder our customers keep coming back. Delta Dental. Right where you belong.

Confidentiality of Medical Information: Exceptions and Reporting Requirements

By Richard D. Weber
MSMS Legal Counsel

Concern and confusion surrounds the law of medical records confidentiality. This is due primarily to the proliferating legislative exceptions and mandatory reporting requirements. The following should add some clarification:

> The confidentiality of medical information is protected by the physician-patient privilege, which is codified by statute. MCLA § 600.2157 provides, in part, as follows:
> > No person duly authorized to practice medicine or surgery shall be allowed to disclose any information which he may have acquired in attending any patient in his professional character, and which information was necessary to enable him to prescribe for such patient as a physician, or do any act for him as a surgeon...

As a general rule, a physician should not release medical information covered by the physician-patient privilege without a consent signed by the patient or a court order. Any consent relating to the release of mental health records or HIV/AIDS must be carefully scrutinized. A physician must determine that the release of mental health information would not be detrimental to the recipient or others. MCLA § 330.1748. A consent to release HIV/AIDS records requires specific reference to that information in the release. MCLA § 333.5131(5)(d).

There are a number of exceptions and variances to the general rule of confidentiality:

1. Malpractice Litigation: The physician-patient privilege is waived upon providing the 182-day notice, which is a condition precedent to filing a malpractice lawsuit under the malpractice reform legislation effective April 1, 1994 (MCLA § 600.2912f.).
2. Child Abuse: Any health care worker who has reasonable cause to suspect child abuse or neglect is required to make an oral and written report to the county department of social services, which should include medical information of the child or others that is needed to prepare a full report (MCLA § 722.623).
3. Adult Abuse: A health care worker who suspects that an adult has been abused, neglected, exploited or is endangered is required to make a report to the county department of social services (MCLA § 400.11a.).
4. Nursing Home Abuse: A physician or other licensed health professional must report suspected physical, mental or emotional abuse, mistreatment or neglect of a nursing home patient (MCLA § 333.21771).
5. Mental Health Patient Abuse: Any suspected abuse or neglect of a mental health care patient must be reported immediately to the law enforcement authorities (MCLA § 330.1723).
6. HIV/AIDS - Report to Health Department or Other Health Care Provider: Information pertaining to an individual who is HIV-infected or has been diagnosed as having AIDS may be disclosed without the patient's consent if the information is disclosed to the state or local health department or other health care provider for one or more of the following purposes: (i) to protect the health of the individual; (ii) to prevent further transmission of HIV; (iii) to diagnose and care for a patient (MCLA § 333.5131 (5)(a)).

7. HIV/AIDS - Disclosure to Contact Person: Information pertaining to an individual who is HIV-infected or diagnosed as having AIDS may be disclosed without the patient's consent if the information is disclosed by a physician or local health officer to an individual who is known to be a contact of the patient, if it is determined that the disclosure is necessary to prevent a reasonably foreseeable risk of further transmission of HIV (MCLA § 333.5131(5)(b)).
8. Emergency Patient/Infectious Agent: If an emergency patient is assisted and/or transported to a health facility by emergency personnel, and the patient is tested for an infectious agent as part of the treatment, the health facility can notify the emergency personnel of the results of this test in certain circumstances (MCLA § 333.20191).
9. Deceased Patient/Infectious Agent: If a physician knows of the presence in a deceased patient of an infectious agent, including HIV, the physician is required to notify the funeral director of the proper infection control precautions to be taken (MCLA § 333.2843b).
10. HIV Infection: Positive HIV test results must be reported to the department of public health (MCLA § 333.5114).
11. Wounds Caused by Violence: Physicians and hospitals have a duty to report to the police any person who seeks treatment of a wound or other injury inflicted by means of a gun, knife, other deadly weapon, or other means of violence (MCLA § 750.411).
12. Report of Asphyxia: Any physician who cares for a person who suffers from asphyxia or dies due to submergement in water must report this fact to the police (MCLA § 750.411.c.).
13. Mental Health Patient Violence: A psychiatrist, psychologist or psychiatric social worker has a duty to warn a third party if the patient makes threats of violence against that third party under specified circumstances (MCLA § 330.1946).
14. Minor/Prenatal Care: A minor may consent to prenatal or pregnancy-related health care, as well as to health care for the minor's child, and the health care information can be released to the putative father of the child or husband of the minor, or to the minor's parent or guardian without the minor's consent if the treating physician determines that the release is justified for "medical reasons" (MCLA § 333.9132).
15. Minor/Venereal Disease/HIV: A minor may consent to medical treatment for venereal disease or HIV, and the treating physician may release the medical information to the minor's parent, guardian or spouse without the minor's consent if it is determined that such release is justified for "medical reasons" (MCLA § 333.5127).
16. Minor/Substance Abuse Treatment: A minor may consent to substance abuse treatment and the treatment information may be released without the minor's consent to the minor's parent, guardian or spouse under specified circumstances (MCLA § 333.6121).
17. Minor/Mental Health Treatment: A minor 14 years of age or older may receive outpatient mental health services without the consent or knowledge of the minor's parent or guardian. The health care professional may inform the parent of the treatment only if he/she determines that there is a compelling need for disclosure based on a substantial probability of harm to the minor or other persons (MCLA § 330.1707).
18. Peer Review Information: Physicians and hospitals may provide health care information to a review entity for specified purposes (MCLA § 331.531).
19. Licensing Board: Confidential patient information may be disclosed to a licensing board without the patient's consent in an investigation or proceeding by the board (MCLA § 333.16244).
20. Autopsies: Information obtained in an autopsy is not protected by the physician-patient privilege. Swickard v Wayne County Medical Examiner, 438 Mich 536 (1991).
21. Abortions: A physician who performs an abortion must file a report with the Department of Public Health within seven days, but the report may not identify the woman (MCLA § 333.2835(2)).
22. Birth Defects: All diagnosed incidences of birth defects must be reported (MCLA § 333.5721).
23. Occupational Disease: Physicians, hospitals and clinics knowing of an individual having an occupational disease or a health condition aggravated by workplace exposures must report the case to the department of public health (MCLA § 333.5611).

This list covers most of the areas that are likely to be encountered by physicians and should provide a better understanding of this critically important but complex subject.

We Agree.

Every state medical society, 64 medical specialty societies, and the American Medical Association agree that any health system reform legislation must contain the principles outlined in the letter below:

March 29, 1994

Dear Senator/Representative;

As physician organizations, we agree on the need for health system reform legislation that gives every American universal coverage for health care and effectively controls rising health costs, while ensuring quality patient care. These principles have been articulated by numerous medical organizations in their various health system reform policies and proposals. They remain the foundation of our legislative agenda, which is to enact laws that assure universal coverage for a standard set of health benefits, regardless of employment or economic status.

We believe that any measure adopted by the Congress should:

- Achieve universal coverage through a program where responsibility is shared by employers, individuals and government in paying for health care coverage.
- Assure that every American has his/her choice of health plans, physicians, and other providers.
- Establish competition in the marketplace as a method of slowing the rate of growth in health spending.
- Give patients price and quality information to permit them to make informed decisions.
- Eliminate needless bureaucracy to create an efficient, streamlined, and coordinated system that minimizes red tape for patients, physicians, and other providers. Furthermore, health system reform must leave medical decision-making in the hands of physicians and their patients.

We believe that to enable physicians to best serve the interests of their patients, meaningful health system reform also must contain these elements:

- Significant antitrust relief that enables physicians to have a strong voice to balance the growing corporate and government domination of health care.
- Allow for physician-directed health care networks.
- Enhanced self-regulatory powers that would enable the profession to effectively police itself and its members without the threat of unwarranted litigation.

We also believe that major reforms in the professional liability system must be enacted, including a $250,000 cap on non-economic damages, limits on plaintiff attorneys' fees, and other measures that would minimize defensive medicine.

Every American will be affected by this legislation. The focus of policy-makers should be on how their decisions will affect patient care. Any system that raises significant barriers between patients and physicians will not provide the quality care our nation expects and deserves. We believe the above principles outline a framework for establishing constructive, effective, and needed health system reform.

As seen in the The Wall Street Journal, The New York Times, The Washington Post, and USA Today.

Physician-founded ARMX Links Health Care Problem-Solvers in U.S. and Russia

MSMS Members Invited to Upcoming Russian Forum

By Sheri Greenhoe

There's a saying in Russia—"Your roof's been moved!"—that means you're just a little bit crazy. Lansing-area physicians Dawn E. Springer, MD, and Larry W. Fitzsimmons, MD, aren't offended in the least to admit their roofs have shifted somewhat, and so has their attention—to the needs and opportunities now facing their Russian counterparts.

What may have seemed a little bit crazy in the beginning has grown into ARMX, the American Russian Medical Xchange, a non-profit corporation designed to foster the exchange of health care services, knowledge and information among Russia, the newly independent states, and the United States.

Long-term relationship

ARMX was born when the two physicians visited Russia and saw the need for a long-term relationship between the two nations with regard to health care issues.

"A lot of well-meaning people have gone over to Russia to bring supplies and teach medical techniques," says Doctor Springer, a family physician. "That has been appreciated. What's really needed, though, is an ongoing, interactive relationship that will enhance both our health care delivery systems."

With both nations facing new challenges in health care, the timing seemed right to Doctors Springer and Fitzsimmons in 1992 to create this working network of physicians, administrators, educators, and policy makers around the globe. The ARMX Board of Directors has now grown to 17 in number, including representatives from many American partner organizations that support its programs and goals.

ARMX emphases are medical education, practice and service, patient/physician rights, advocacy, medical ethics, emerging technology and research. They hope the results of their linkages will directly impact the day-to-day health care needs of both Russian and American communities.

St. Lawrence Hospital President and ARMX Board member Arthur Kneuppel, Lansing, envisions tangible shared results. "Our mutual benefit and learning will be to increase our understanding of how primary care can be delivered in social settings burdened by limited resources," he says. "The use of physician extenders and other alternatives will be enlightening to our system, while I am sure the Russians will benefit from understanding applications of our technology in their turbulent society."

Sparrow Health System President Joseph Damore,

Lansing, also an ARMX Board member, agrees that the exchange of ideas and information holds promise for all involved. "It offers us opportunities to learn from each other about the positive aspects of health care that exist in both countries. We can gain a better understanding of Russia's particular strengths—community health services, for instance."

New challenges

Prior to the dissolution of the USSR, the Soviets managed to deliver health care across 13 time zones. Today they face new challenges.

"Russian physicians are well educated and well trained," says Doctor Fitzsimmons, an orthopedic surgeon. "But, they are stymied by the lack of supplies, pharmaceuticals and a coordinated delivery system."

Despite these obstacles, the Russians are "warm, caring, dedicated and intelligent, and they are not rushing to leave their country," says Doctor Springer. "They want to stay and do a good job."

"ARMX itself doesn't have the answers," says Doctor Fitzsimmons, "but we've brought together institutions and people to help find the answers." Acknowledging the political turbulence in Russia, he adds," If the doors remain open that we may be able to travel, we will be there."

"ARMX has the right people, asking the right questions, to find creative answers for Russian and American health care needs," adds James Robinson, part-time director of the non-profit's operations, and international relations graduate of MSU's James Madison College.

Broad-based support

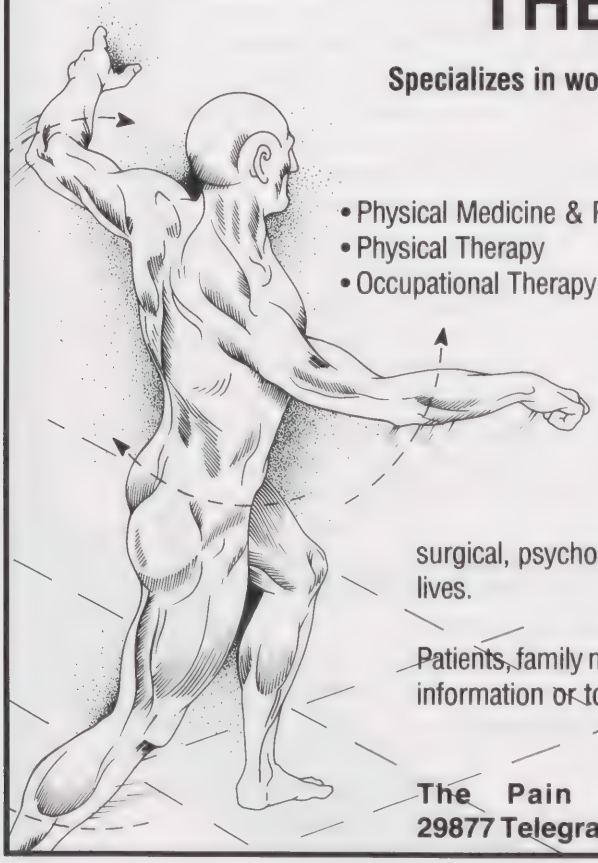

Around the globe, Russian institutions that have linked with ARMX in its endeavors include the All Russia Federation of Sports Medicine, Gaya Women's Center; Informed, Inc., Moscow Medical Academy, and the Institute of U.S. and Canada Studies.

Doctors Springer and Fitzsimmons are extremely pleased to have the interest and support of the World Bank, and have plans to meet with its representatives to discuss their initiatives and mutual interests.

Other organizations that make up ARMX's broad base of support include Michigan State Medical Society; Michigan State University; Blue Care Network/ Health Central; Electronic Data Systems; Lansing Public Schools; Michigan Capital Medical Center; Michigan Hospital Association; Physicians Health Plan; St. Lawrence Hospital; Sparrow Health System; The Upjohn Company, and TransLink, Inc. being discussed with a number of other corporations and agencies who are "waiting in the wings" and watching ARMX with great interest, says Doctor Fitzsimmons.

"The Michigan State Medical Society is proud to support this enormously worthwhile initiative, conceived and developed by two Michigan physicians," says MSMS Executive Director William E. Madigan. "ARMX is a global, working expression of both the science and art of medicine."

Educational exchange

Through its partnership with Michigan State University, ARMX forged an historic five-year linkage agreement last summer between MSU's Colleges of Human and Osteopathic Medicine, Schools of Nursing and International Studies, and the I.M. Sechenov Moscow Medical Academy, Russia's largest and most highly-respected medical school.

> "The Michigan State Medical Society is proud to support this enormously worthwhile initiative, conceived and developed by two Michigan physicians...ARMX is a global, working expression of both the science and art of medicine."

The agreement brings the two institutions together not only in research and information-sharing, but in exchanges of faculty and students. It presents unique opportunities for MSU students and educators to study both diverse and common approaches to health care, and to witness history as Russia restructures and revitalizes its health care system. Discussions are now underway to identify and make arrangements for the first medical exchange student from MSU to study in Moscow.

Further tangible evidence of the exchanges fostered by ARMX and its partners so far are the face-to-face opportunities for information-sharing. Its initial success was the first-ever international symposia on the practice of sports medicine, "Humanization of Sport," which brought Russian and American physicians, educators and policy makers to East Lansing to exchange information on clinical and ethical issues.

One-on-one interaction

ARMX Board member and MSMS Immediate Past President, Thomas C. Payne, MD, hosted Doctor Valerie Bolshagen in his home when the Russian physician presented at the sports medicine conference.

"We talked into the wee hours through an interpreter about socialized medicine and other issues," Doctor Payne remembers. "He was very interested in how we do things, and how some techniques and ideas could be adapted to their practices and their lives."

Other health care professionals were inspired, as well. "How can we not be interested?" asks physical therapist Katie Stephens of Michigan Capital Medical Center. She attended the ARMX sports medicine conference and "found it to be a fascinating exchange."

Upcoming forum in Russia

ARMX is most excited about its upcoming forum, to be held in Moscow and St. Petersburg July 15-24, 1994, entitled, "Health Care Problems in Contemporary Developed Societies." Participants will examine Russian and American health care delivery and financing issues; primary care; mother and child care; geriatrics and other issues in roundtable and workshop settings, visit Russian hospitals and clinics, and have the opportunity to meet with prominent Russian sports medicine physicians at the International Goodwill Games.

"The forum will truly be ground breaking in terms of information-sharing," says Doctor Fitzsimmons. And, he adds, it will be a unique travel experience.

You're invited

Doctors Fitzsimmons and Springer invite health care and related professionals and their families to join them as they travel, learn and establish personal contacts with key Russian decision-makers.

Attendees will examine pertinent issues in roundtable discussions and workshops with Russian and American participants, says Doctor Fitzsimmons, and have the unique opportunity to tour Russian clinics and hospitals.

The trip will include time to experience the culture and beauty of Moscow and St. Petersburg as the group visits cultural landmarks and treasures, enjoys theatre performances, and witnesses the pageantry and competition of the International Goodwill Games. (See page 20 for registration information.)

Both Doctors Springer and Fitzsimmons look forward to returning to Russia, for which they 've developed great affection. "The people there welcome us," says Doctor Springer. "Their lifestyle is different, but it feels comfortable."

"They say 'thank you,'" adds Doctor Fitzsimmons.

You'd have to be more than a little bit crazy not to appreciate that.

Ms. Greenhoe is former managing editor of Michigan Medicine.

Don't miss this incredible opportunity to travel, learn and establish personal contacts with key Russian health care professionals.

MSMS Health Education Foundation provides funding for many worthy community-based projects

Some Michigan physicians have found a way to extend their practices out of the office and into the community. During 1993-94, these doctors will go beyond exams and operating tables to monitor the health of their patients.

They'll help children to learn more about vegetables good for their health. They'll help middle school children learn about healthy lifestyles. They'll give a boost to volunteer respite services in Michigan communities. They'll provide tutoring to children and adults to overcome learning disabilities. How is that possible today, when physicians already spend long hours between office and hospital to care for their patients? The answer is the MSMS Health Education Foundation (HEF).

Begun in 1946, primarily as a student loan fund, the Health Education Foundation now provides funding for community-based projects. The Foundation each year pools money contributed by MSMS members, then provides grants to selected applicants to help educate people about good health.

"HEF helps doctors review community needs and find out how they can help," says MSMS Immediate Past President Thomas C. Payne, MD, East Lansing.

For instance, through HEF, Michigan doctors are sponsoring an educational 4-H Children's Garden on the campus of Michigan State University in East Lansing, the first of its kind on any US college campus. The garden contains a variety of themes to aid children in learning about plants and their uses. HEF provided a grant for a section known as "Health to Better Living." In this section, children learn about vegetables cited by the US Department of Agriculture as most nutritious.

Altruistic causes a primary focus

Endeavors such as this are a primary focus of HEF, according to HEF President Robert E. Paxton, MD, of Fremont. "MSMS has a mandate in its constitution and bylaws requiring a concern for altruistic causes."

In fact, as MSMS activities have become more socioeconomic, HEF was developed as a separate arm so that MSMS could continue to fulfill this mandate and maintain its altruistic activity, says Doctor Paxton.

That activity includes HEF financial aid to other community projects. The Respite Volunteer Association, an umbrella organization for local respite care groups around Michigan, will use an HEF grant to provide money to Genesee and Jackson County respite care efforts. These groups provide a volunteer in the home to help care for a dependent adult, allowing the primary caregiver a temporary break or respite from the care.

"Physicians are key to helping," says Ellen McKay, coordinator of Aging Ministry at the Catholic Diocese of Lansing. "Physicians can provide information on local respite care if they think a patient's family caregiver would benefit from this."

City for Youth a key project

Introducing middle school-age children to healthy concepts and behaviors regarding substance abuse, dealing with stress and depression, AIDS, and peaceful conflict resolution is now a reality, thanks to a grant from HEF. CLUB CONNECT City for Youth video courses were developed to address such issues in a manner in which pre-teen and teenage youth can identify.

Mission Statement

The Health Education Foundation is a non-profit charitable organization sponsored by the Michigan State Medical Society. Its purpose is to advance the field of health for the public good. The mission of the Foundation is to achieve the following:

- Stimulate, support and/or initiate lay or professional education, research programs, and projects in the field of health.
- Encourage the advancement of healthy lifestyles, the prevention, diagnosis or cure of disease, and the care of the sick and the dying.
- Provide a vehicle for the Michigan State Medical Society to foster humanitarian public service in health education and research, and to provide support for physicians who suffer impairment.
- Develop and administer funds for the support of health education and research.
- Provide a resource for the management and distribution of signature funds or bequests designated for special health education and research purposes.

A grant from HEF enabled City for Youth and WTVS Channel 56 to reproduce and distribute these videos to every middle school in the State of Michigan. MSMS President Gilbert Bluhm, MD, initiated the grant request to the Foundation.

Promotion of good health habits may provide long-term cost savings, but it is more important for quality of life, says Doctor Bluhm. "These programs are important resources for schools and youth groups throughout Michigan."

Dyslexia another target project

An estimated 25 million Americans have dyslexia. HEF, through a grant to Specific Language Disability (SLD) Center, is assisting with the training and furnishing of tutors to work one-on-one with dyslexic children and adults in the Kalamazoo area. This center was created 20 years ago by an interested group of parents and physicians to provide a service that was being neglected in the educational community.

David Milko, MD, an ENT specialist from Kalamazoo and MSMS member, currently serves on the SLD Board of Directors. Doctor Milko, in a letter of support for the project, states, "The program has been extremely successful in its ability to assist individuals with learning disabilities and to provide support for the families of individuals with this disorder."

Other projects

Another HEF grant provides training of nursing assistants in long term care settings. Project Compassion, located in Detroit and Saginaw, trains primarily African-American women to become certified nursing assistants.

Another aspect of the Health Education Foundation is the Impaired Physician Loan Fund. The MSMS Physician Recovery Network (PRN) Medical Director, Douglas Macdonald, MD, assists the Foundation Loan Committee in making loans to physicians currently in recovery programs. These loans assist recovering physicians in paying for their treatment. The loans are repaid over a period of time at a nominal rate of interest to the Foundation.

HEF currently administers the Bruce Fund, which provides monies to the University of Michigan Pediatric Department and to the United Way of Saginaw. After a request by the Michigan Chapter, American College of Surgeons, (MCACS), HEF also administers the Danto Fund. This fund was established by the Robert Danto family and provides monetary awards to residents presenting cancer related papers at the annual MCACS Coller Day competition.

Physician contributions urged

Physicians can help fund projects like these through contributions to HEF. Each MSMS member is sent a letter and a contribution envelope annually outlining how they can make HEF contributions.

Once again this year, HEF will host a silent auction at the MSMS House of Delegates in Grand Rapids, May 6-8. Auction items include, gems, wine, hotel packages, and cellular telephones. Last year's event raised over $1,700 for the Foundation.

Traditional contributions, including bequests, like the $5,000 bequest the Foundation recently received, cash, stocks, bonds, life insurance and property also are accepted by the Foundation.

"HEF needs the involvement of the MSMS leadership and membership to make it successful," says Doctor Paxton. Over the past three years, the Foundation has awarded over $43,000 in community-based grants, but without the continued support of the MSMS membership, HEF will have to decrease its funding efforts.

For more information on the Foundation or how to make a contribution, contact HEF Executive Secretary Dawn M. Reha at (517) 336-7589.

"Excellent overview of the process of Practice Guidelines and Practice Parameters development! We need to know the process so that we can be supportive!"

Sherra A. Mosher, RN
Muskegon

Impending changes to health care delivery as a result of national health care reform include the increased development and use of clinical practice parameters. This seminar will provide participants with an update on activities related to the development of practice parameters. It also will cover the status of mandated use of practice parameters in certain health care delivery systems, proactive physician involvement in practice parameter projects and continuing ideas for effectively incorporating parameters into health care quality improvement systems. Physicians attending this program may be eligible for medical liability premium reduction credits.

CLARITIN®

TABLETS
Long-Acting Antihistamine

BRIEF SUMMARY
(For full Prescribing Information, see package insert.)

INDICATIONS AND USAGE
CLARITIN Tablets are indicated for the relief of nasal and non-nasal symptoms of seasonal allergic rhinitis

CONTRAINDICATIONS
CLARITIN Tablets are contraindicated in patients who are hypersensitive to this medication or to any of its ingredients.

PRECAUTIONS
General: Patients with liver impairment should be given a lower initial dose (10 mg every other day) because they have reduced clearance of CLARITIN Tablets.

Drug Interactions: The coadministration of a single 20 mg dose of CLARITIN Tablets (double the recommended daily dose) and a 200 mg dose of ketoconazole twice daily to 12 subjects resulted in increased plasma concentrations of loratadine (180% increase in AUC) and its active metabolite, descarboethoxyloratadine (56% increase in AUC). However, no related changes were noted in the QTc on ECGs taken at 2, 6, and 24 hours after the coadministration of loratadine and ketoconazole. Also, there were no significant differences in clinical adverse events between CLARITIN Tablet groups with or without ketoconazole.

Other drugs known to inhibit hepatic metabolism should be coadministered with caution until definitive interaction studies can be completed. The number of subjects who concomitantly received macrolide antibiotics, cimetidine, ranitidine, or theophylline along with CLARITIN Tablets in controlled clinical trials is too small to rule out possible drug-drug interactions. There does not appear to be an increase in adverse events in subjects who received oral contraceptives and CLARITIN Tablets compared to placebo

Carcinogenesis, Mutagenesis, and Impairment of Fertility: In an 18-month oncogenicity study in mice and a 2-year study in rats, loratadine was administered in the diet at doses up to 40 mg/kg (mice) and 25 mg/kg (rats). In the carcinogenicity studies, pharmacokinetic assessments were carried out to determine animal exposure to the drug. AUC data demonstrated that the exposure of mice given 40 mg/kg of loratadine was 3.6 (loratadine) and 18 (active metabolite) times higher than a human given 10 mg/day. Exposure of rats given 25 mg/kg of loratadine was 28 (loratadine) and 67 (active metabolite) times higher than a human given 10 mg/day. Male mice given 40 mg/kg had a significantly higher incidence of hepatocellular tumors (combined adenomas and carcinomas) than concurrent controls. In rats, a significantly higher incidence of hepatocellular tumors (combined adenomas and carcinomas) was observed in males given 10 mg/kg and males and females given 25 mg/kg. The clinical significance of these findings during long-term use of CLARITIN Tablets is not known.

In mutagenicity studies, there was no evidence of mutagenic potential in reverse (AMES) or forward point mutation (CHO-HGPRT) assays, or in the assay for DNA damage (Rat Primary Hepatocyte Unscheduled DNA Assay) or in two assays for chromosomal aberrations (Human Peripheral Blood Lymphocyte Clastogenesis Assay and the Mouse Bone Marrow Erythrocyte Micronucleus Assay). In the Mouse Lymphoma Assay, a positive finding occurred in the nonactivated but not the activated phase of the study.

Loratadine administration produced hepatic microsomal enzyme induction in the mouse at 40 mg/kg and rat at 25 mg/kg, but not at lower doses

Decreased fertility in male rats, shown by lower female conception rates, occurred at approximately 64 mg/kg and was reversible with cessation of dosing. Loratadine had no effect on male or female fertility or reproduction in the rat at doses of approximately 24 mg/kg

Pregnancy Category B: There was no evidence of animal teratogenicity in studies performed in rats and rabbits. There are, however, no adequate and well-controlled studies in pregnant women. Because animal reproduction studies are not always predictive of human response, CLARITIN Tablets should be used during pregnancy only if clearly needed.

Nursing Mothers: Loratadine and its metabolite, descarboethoxyloratadine, pass easily into breast milk and achieve concentrations that are equivalent to plasma levels with an AUC_{milk}/AUC_{plasma} ratio of 1.17 and 0.85 for the parent and active metabolite, respectively. Following a single oral dose of 40 mg, a small amount of loratadine and metabolite was excreted into the breast milk (approximately 0.03% of 40 mg over 48 hours). A decision should be made whether to discontinue nursing or to discontinue the drug, taking into account the importance of the drug to the mother. Caution should be exercised when CLARITIN Tablets are administered to a nursing woman.

Pediatric Use: Safety and effectiveness in children below the age of 12 years have not been established.

ADVERSE REACTIONS
Approximately 90,000 patients received CLARITIN Tablets 10 mg once daily in controlled and uncontrolled studies. Placebo-controlled clinical trials at the recommended dose of 10 mg once a day varied from 2 weeks' to 6 months' duration. The rate of premature withdrawal from these trials was approximately 2% in both the treated and placebo groups.

REPORTED ADVERSE EVENTS WITH AN INCIDENCE OF MORE THAN 2% IN PLACEBO-CONTROLLED ALLERGIC RHINITIS CLINICAL TRIALS

PERCENT OF PATIENTS REPORTING

	LORATADINE 10 mg QD n = 1926	PLACEBO n = 2545	CLEMASTINE 1 mg BID n = 536	TERFENADINE * 60 mg BID n = 684
Headache	12	11	8	8
Somnolence	8	6	22	9
Fatigue	4	3	10	2
Dry Mouth	3	2	4	3

Adverse event rates did not appear to differ significantly based on age, sex, or race, although the number of non-white subjects was relatively small.

In addition to those adverse events reported above, the following adverse events have been reported in 2% or fewer patients.

Autonomic Nervous System Altered salivation, increased sweating, altered lacrimation, hypoesthesia, impotence, thirst, flushing.
Body As A Whole Conjunctivitis, blurred vision, earache, eye pain, tinnitus, asthenia, weight gain, back pain, leg cramps, malaise, chest pain, rigors, fever, aggravated allergy, upper respiratory infection, angioneurotic edema.
Cardiovascular System Hypotension, hypertension, palpitations, syncope, tachycardia
Central and Peripheral Nervous System Hyperkinesia, blepharospasm, paresthesia, dizziness, migraine, tremor, vertigo, dysphonia.
Gastrointestinal System Abdominal distress, nausea, vomiting, flatulence, gastritis, constipation, diarrhea, altered taste, increased appetite, anorexia, dyspepsia, stomatitis, toothache.
Musculoskeletal System Arthralgia, myalgia.
Psychiatric Anxiety, depression, agitation, insomnia, paroniria, amnesia, impaired concentration, confusion, decreased libido, nervousness
Reproductive System Breast pain, menorrhagia, dysmenorrhea, vaginitis.
Respiratory System Nasal dryness, epistaxis, pharyngitis, dyspnea, nasal congestion, coughing, rhinitis, hemoptysis, sinusitis, sneezing, bronchospasm, bronchitis, laryngitis.
Skin and Appendages Dermatitis, dry hair, dry skin, urticaria, rash, pruritus, photosensitivity reaction, purpura.
Urinary System Urinary discoloration, altered micturition.

In addition, the following spontaneous adverse events have been reported rarely during the marketing of loratadine: peripheral edema; abnormal hepatic function, including jaundice, hepatitis, and hepatic necrosis; alopecia; seizures; breast enlargement; erythema multiforme; and anaphylaxis.

OVERDOSAGE
Somnolence, tachycardia, and headache have been reported with overdoses greater than 10 mg (40 to 180 mg). In the event of overdosage, general symptomatic and supportive measures should be instituted promptly and maintained for as long as necessary.

Treatment of overdosage would reasonably consist of emesis (ipecac syrup), except in patients with impaired consciousness, followed by the administration of activated charcoal to absorb any remaining drug. If vomiting is unsuccessful, or contraindicated, gastric lavage should be performed with normal saline. Saline cathartics may also be of value for rapid dilution of bowel contents. Loratadine is not eliminated by hemodialysis. It is not known if loratadine is eliminated by peritoneal dialysis.

Oral LD_{50} values for loratadine were greater than 5000 mg/kg in rats and mice. Doses as high as 10 times the recommended clinical doses showed no effects in rats, mice, and monkeys.

YOCON®
YOHIMBINE HCl

Description: Yohimbine is a 3a-15a-20B-17a-hydroxy Yohimbine-16a-carboxylic acid methyl ester. The alkaloid is found in Rubaceae and related trees. Also in Rauwolfia Serpentina (L) Benth. Yohimbine is an indolalkylamine alkaloid with chemical similarity to reserpine. It is a crystalline powder, odorless. Each compressed tablet contains (1/12 gr.) 5.4 mg of Yohimbine Hydrochloride.

Action: Yohimbine blocks presynaptic alpha-2 adrenergic receptors. Its action on peripheral blood vessels resembles that of reserpine, though it is weaker and of short duration. Yohimbine's peripheral autonomic nervous system effect is to increase parasympathetic (cholinergic) and decrease sympathetic (adrenergic) activity. It is to be noted that in male sexual performance, erection is linked to cholinergic activity and to alpha-2 adrenergic blockade which may theoretically result in increased penile inflow, decreased penile outflow or both.

Yohimbine exerts a stimulating action on the mood and may increase anxiety. Such actions have not been adequately studied or related to dosage although they appear to require high doses of the drug. Yohimbine has a mild anti-diuretic action, probably via stimulation of hypothalmic centers and release of posterior pituitary hormone.

Reportedly, Yohimbine exerts no significant influence on cardiac stimulation and other effects mediated by B-adrenergic receptors, its effect on blood pressure, if any, would be to lower it; however no adequate studies are at hand to quantitate this effect in terms of Yohimbine dosage.

Indications: Yocon® is indicated as a sympathicolytic and mydriatic. It may have activity as an aphrodisiac.

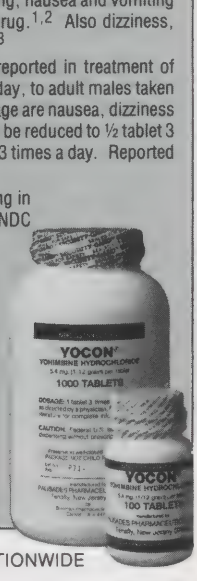

Contraindications: Renal diseases, and patient's sensitive to the drug. In view of the limited and inadequate information at hand, no precise tabulation can be offered of additional contraindications.

Warning: Generally, this drug is not proposed for use in females and certainly must not be used during pregnancy. Neither is this drug proposed for use in pediatric, geriatric or cardio-renal patients with gastric or duodenal ulcer history. Nor should it be used in conjunction with mood-modifying drugs such as antidepressants, or in psychiatric patients in general.

Adverse Reactions: Yohimbine readily penetrates the (CNS) and produces a complex pattern of responses in lower doses than required to produce peripheral a-adrenergic blockade. These include, anti-diuresis, a general picture of central excitation including elevation of blood pressure and heart rate, increased motor activity, irritability and tremor. Sweating, nausea and vomiting are common after parenteral administration of the drug.[1,2] Also dizziness, headache, skin flushing reported when used orally.[1,3]

Dosage and Administration: Experimental dosage reported in treatment of erectile impotence.[1,3,4] 1 tablet (5.4 mg) 3 times a day, to adult males taken orally. Occasional side effects reported with this dosage are nausea, dizziness or nervousness. In the event of side effects dosage to be reduced to ½ tablet 3 times a day, followed by gradual increases to 1 tablet 3 times a day. Reported therapy not more than 10 weeks.[3]

How Supplied: Oral tablets of Yocon® 1/12 gr. 5.4 mg in bottles of 100's NDC 53159-001-01 and 1000's NDC 53159-001-10.

Physician Organization and Management Services
The Michigan Advantage

By William J. Carbone

There are nine reasons why physicians are selecting MSMS/POMS consultants and services to help develop, implement and manage physician organizations (POs), physician-hospital organizations (PHOs), management service organizations (MSOs), clinics without walls and other managed care organizations. Stability, trust and expertise are just three of those reasons. Read on to learn more about these reasons and why, for many Michigan physicians, MSMS/POMS is the managed care consulting organization of choice.

Physicians are encouraged to use this article as a guideline to compare services available through MSMS/POMS and those of other consultants proposing the development of POs, PHOs and MSOs. As with any important decision, it is critical and good common sense to carefully compare the services, the costs of services and the stability of the organization providing them.

#1 Stability

The stability of MSMS is almost unparalleled by any other organization representing physicians of all specialties. Unlike other organizations, we won't be here today and gone tomorrow. Physicians who choose to pay for MSMS/POMS services will receive the ongoing assistance and support they need. While price is always an important consideration when purchasing a product or service, it is not the only consideration. Without ongoing assistance and support with the products or services you purchase, price has little meaning. MSMS/POMS offers that assistance and support and is here to stay.

#2 Trust and Collegiality

The most important aspect of developing a physician organization or a physician-hospital organization, or other managed care entity, is trust and collegiality. This factor in forming the new health care organization is interesting and provocative because it is so very important and necessary, yet least understood.

MSMS is acutely aware that in order to build strong managed care entities, we must have trust and collegiality in the cognitive, developmental, implementation and management steps of the organizations. While participating in a case study of successful POs and PHOs throughout the United States, MSMS has found that trust and collegiality are as important as we have presumed. As we help physicians to develop such entities, we must continually monitor the degree of trust and collegiality, take steps and use expert consultants to assist in the enhancement of trust and collegiality.

If you have not already done so, I encourage you to read "Driving the Nitroglycerin Truck," an outstanding article by Jeff C. Goldsmith, PhD, which describes the relationship between physicians and hospital management and the important role this relationship plays in the development and overall sustained success of POs and PHOs. (See Michigan Medicine, September 1993, pp. 43-46.)

#3 Loyalty to physicians

There is no other statewide medical association as loyal to physicians and committed to empowering physicians to leadership as MSMS. MSMS has made a financial and spiritual commitment to assist physicians in managed care, irrespective of their type or mode of practice. Providing the service probably epitomizes the finest membership benefit program available. It is interesting to note that physicians from other states continue to inquire about the services available to Michigan physicians through their state medical society.

#4 Flexibility and Adaptability

There is an adage around MSMS/POMS circles that "if you have seen one PO/PHO, you have seen one PO/PHO." MSMS knows full well that each health care community has certain special needs and idiosyncracies. Understanding this important facet of managed care development provides us with the unique ability to respond to physicians and the health care market according to the environmental conditions in each community, city, town or county.

Knowing that each PO/PHO or MSO is different from every other PO/PHO or MSO effectively allows us to concentrate on process, as opposed to presenting a model and then trying to fit the town's health care professionals into that model. We are proponents of the fact that process must precede structure for a long-term sustainable health care entity.

#5 Knowledge of physicians' needs

MSMS understands the needs of physicians and has been striving to serve physicians since it was founded in 1866. Whether a physician is in private, academic or corporate practice, or in primary or specialty care, or in solo, group or multi-practice arrangement, MSMS stands ready to assist you. As a division of MSMS, POMS shares this commitment to serving physicians.

#6 Comprehensive services

Another unique benefit of using the consulting services of POMS is the comprehensiveness of our services. We provide consultations to physicians and hospital management for managed care creation in the conceptual or cognitive, developmental and implementational stages and in continuing management and/or consultation. We help in the beginning and are available to assist and participate through the entire process to assure that we have a full array of services to meet all the needs of each community and its health care system and physicians.

To sustain itself, each PO and PHO or managed service organization will need to have ongoing services for management functions. This is why we also provide a full array of practice management and/or enhancement services that can be used by members either on an individual basis or through a PO, PHO or MSO. We have experts that can assist in patient collection procedures, effective staff utilization, individualized training on billing, coding and policy, and accounts receivable management. In addition, we are knowledgeable in all disciplines of practice management, medical record systems, patient tracking/follow-up systems, time management/scheduling, personnel management, office policy and procedure development and patient management skills. Furthermore, we provide services such as patient satisfaction assessments, medical office patient information brochure development and all types of business forms.

#7 Expert advice

POMS offers an expert management team of a dozen consultants with credentials and experience in innumerable health care disciplines. We bring together these consultants and their synergy to provide you with the necessary expertise and information so you may reach the best judgment.

#8 Confidentiality

We maintain the strictest and highest degree of confidentiality. MSMS is acutely aware of the critical need for confidentiality. This applies to all professional services provided through POMS.

#9 MSMS/POMS/Mercer Alliance

This alliance represents the culmination of months of evaluation and negotiation between your state medical society and William M. Mercer, Inc. This alliance provides a team and an arrangement that no other medical association in the United States has developed to date. Rest assured that others will certainly follow. This alliance provides both organizations with the competitive edge of presenting recommendations and proposals to physicians and hospitals, embodying the principles and understandings of the medical profession and one of the largest health care consultants in the United States.

Conclusion

Stability. Trust and collegiality. Loyalty to physicians. Flexibility and adaptability. Knowledge of physicians' needs. Comprehensive services. Expert advice. Confidentiality. MSMS/POMS/Mercer alliance. These are the nine reasons why physicians and health care entities are seeking the consultation and management services of MSMS/POMS. Our work continues to take us beyond the boundaries of Michigan to assist health care professionals throughout the country.

As you consider developing managed care delivery systems for your community and your colleagues, consider MSMS/POMS for any and all services you need.

For more information about POMS services, or to schedule a POMS presentation to you and your colleagues or to your medical staff, please call me at (517) 336-7570. We stand ready to serve you, your patients, your communities, your hospitals and your future.

Building a Successful Medical Practice

It's no secret that running a medical practice today is a more difficult, more complex task than ever before. As the complexities of reimbursement, government regulations, advancing technology and managed care contracts grow at a significant rate, the responsibilities of managing a practice intensify. In today's practice environment, physicians need professional office managers. Unfortunately for many practices, the importance of this position is often underestimated and overlooked. Benefits created through employing a practice manager can create improvements in collection and reimbursement, control of expenses, efficient utilization of staff, and regulatory compliance. Secondary benefits, such as increased organization, can generate improved quality of care, heightened patient satisfaction, and an increase in patient population...not to mention the decrease in stress for the physician trying to wear two hats.

This month's Michigan Medicine cover story explores, in depth, why physicians should hire professional office managers and how. It also includes information on a host of MSMS educational seminars for physicians and their staffs. Also included is a feature on the Michigan Medical Group Managers Association, one of the most prominent organizations of its kind in the state. Other highlights include an article on effective interviewing techniques, and a review of telephone etiquette for office staff. Rounding out this expanded cover story is a rundown of the many programs and services offered through Physician Service Group, Inc., an MSMS subsidiary operation.

Does Your Practice Have the Office Manager it Needs?

By Owen J. Dahl

Editor's note: The following article is reprinted with permission of Physician's Management.

It's no secret that running a medical practice today is a more difficult, more complex task than ever. Like many of your colleagues, you may have availed yourself of consultants, computers, and/or continuing education to help you manage your increasingly demanding business.

But what about your office manager? Have the skills in that all-important position kept up with the relentless march towards government regulation, third-party payers, and bureaucracy of every kind? Or is your office manager still in the 1960s, a high school graduate with a little bookkeeping and knack for stuffing envelopes? Sadly, it's been my observation that practices, particularly small ones in the primary care specialties, tend to fall into the latter category.

It's time to recognize that, in today's world, anyone who runs a medical office needs to be a professional. The people who actually do the job are starting to see their work in that light, and so should you. Let's review what it will take to put a top-notch office manager into your practice.

1. Why you need to hire a pro

I'd like to start off by establishing in your mind the value of a skilled practice manager. The fundamental factor at work here is change, both in our society and in medicine.

Until well into the 1960s, American physicians typically practiced in solo offices. This was especially true of primary care physicians. So the small size of most practices meant that the demands on the office staff were not all that great.

Of course, things are different now. Even those of you who are still in solo practice often share space, staff, equipment, and other resources with colleagues. The sheer volume of tasks, ranging from phone messages to bills to orders for syringes and gloves has grown correspondingly.

So has the complexity of those tasks, a factor that affects even the smallest of medical businesses. The real watershed was 1965, when Congress passed the Title 18 and Title 19 amendments to the Social Security Act and created Medicare and Medicaid. Prior to that there have been third parties and the need to deal with them, but the whole issue of government involvement in medicine took a light-year-type leap at that time. The ensuing years introduced practices to the now familiar problems of fair reimbursement, correct coding, and regulatory compliance.

Then came the managed care products and the inevitable question: "Should I join up?"

And, when computer technology began to penetrate the medical office, you asked: "Do I need this? Will it help or hurt? Can I afford it?" (I've walked into practices and seen three or four computer systems gathering dust: no one knew what to buy. Other offices never computerized, even though they probably should have. They didn't know enough, either.) In 1992 we saw the extension of the Clinical Laboratory Improvement Act (CLIA), to cover in-house office labs.

Again, you had to decide: "Should I keep my lab, or is the cost of compliance with CLIA too high?"

At your fingertips

My point in raising all these issues (and there are countless others) is that in every case, having a competent, professional manager in your practice would have made a real difference for the better. There would have been measurable improvements in collections and reimbursements, the control of expenses, regulatory compliance, and your workday stress level, too. You would have had at your fingertips the management information you need for making decisions, whether about computers or PPOs. The skills a professional office manager has to offer would have been good for your bottom line, and maybe your hairline as well.

2. To hire or to train?

Let's suppose I've piqued your interest, I can hear your next question coming: "I admit I don't have a real professional in charge of my office. How do I get these managerial skills into my practice? Do I hire a new office manager who has the qualifications I want, or do I send an existing employee out for training?"

Unfortunately, my experience indicates that replacement is the method of choice. Perhaps the physician discovers that the business is losing out on the bottom line and, panicking, decides that the manager of 15 years is the problem. In other cases that manager will go dismayed at the changes in the medical workplace and quit.

I'll concede that there is one plus to hiring someone new with clear credentials: time. The new professional arrives in your practice ready to get to work. You don't have to wait while someone goes to school. But that, I think is the only clear advantage of hiring a new employee rather than training a current one.

I find that there are often good reasons why the existing manager is the best candidate for the new,

A Sign of the Times

One sign of the development of the office manager's role toward professional status is the rise of professional organizations. PAHCOM, the Professional Association of Health Care Office Managers, with 2,300 members and more than 20 local chapters nationwide, is a good example.

PAHCOM's members pay annual dues of $85. They receive a bimonthly newsletter, quick access to the association's job banks and professional assistance services, discounts on books, networking opportunities, and the right to take PAHCOM's certification exam.

The examination is given annually. Applicants have the option of attending PAHCOM's preparation course, or preparing on their own. Those passing the exam receive certification as Certified Medical Managers, yielding another sign of professionalization: an acronym (in this case, CMM).

To maintain their certification, CMMs are also required to take 22 hours of continuing education in practice management topics every 2 years and to subscribe to at least one professional publication.

Executive Director Carmela Porter says the Pensacola, Florida-based organization is especially proud of its job bank and help hotline.

"Our job assistance works in both directions—for our members, and for medical offices looking for office managers. We keep members' resumes on file and check them weekly against requests for help from medical practices," she reports. "A physician or practice can phone us, and for a $75 fee we'll match their request against our job bank lists. We'll also assist physicians who prefer to upgrade the skills of the existing practice manager as opposed to hiring someone new."

Call the hotline for help

The 800-number hotline enables members to get answers to any question relating to the profession. "They call about coding, computers, receivables, you name it. In response, we provide them with the names and phone numbers of several experts who can answer their questions," according to Porter.

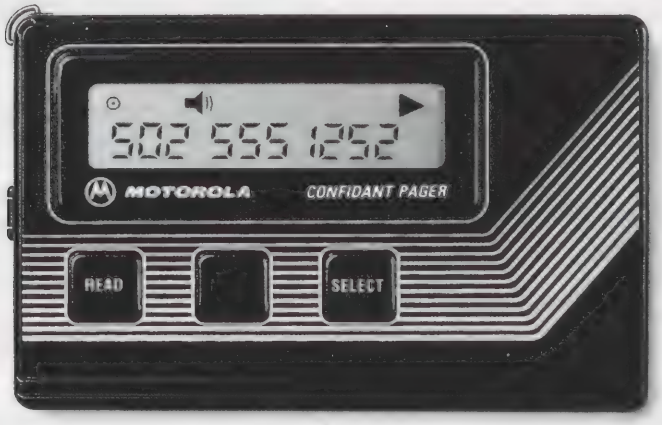

Sometimes the questions are generalized calls of "Help!"

"We'll get a call from someone who says, "I've just taken over an office and it's a mess!" The staff is leaving, the physicians aren't sure what they want exactly, and I'm worried!"

"We'll take that call seriously, too. After all, a manager can make or break a practice. So we give them a shoulder to lean on, and then sort out the specific issues for referral to experts," Porter says.

PAHCOM is in its sixth year. The telephone number is 800-451-9311, and the address is 2929 Langley Ave., Pensacola, Florida 32503.

beefed-up job. For example, if there is harmony among your staff, you should think twice about getting rid of someone who is liked and then adding in an unknown quantity. Your manager may also be popular with patients. Above all, there is real value to experience. Knowing the idiosyncrasies of a local PPO or how to negotiate with nearby labs is worth something to you.

Therefore, my general recommendation is to see if you can't keep your existing manager. If he or she has enough energy, talent, and interest to tackle some skills development work, send that person out to learn the things your practice needs from its manager. If the person can't measure up, isn't interested, or if there is another problem (dishonesty, personal incompatibility), then look for someone new.

3. Where to get help in developing a professional manager

If you decide to upgrade your current office manager, there are several ways to proceed.

The first is to send your manager to a local university, college, or community college for courses in specific areas. Before doing that, it's a good idea to sit down with your staff and figure out where your practice needs improving, so you can target what courses to take.

Accounting, computer use, risk management, law, and economics are typical college subjects that may be of use.

Some colleges are now offering courses aimed specifically at medical office personnel, and these may be of interest to you as well. There is also—as I'm sure you are aware—a barrage of seminars, training sessions, and conferences offered by hospitals, consultants, insurance companies, Medicare carriers, and so on.

Some of them are excellent (eg, the Medicare carriers often do a fine job of teaching the intricacies of the new coding system) and some are merely "quick fixes" of questionable value. So poke around first and check the credibility of anyone offering a seminar.

This method of improving your manager's skills has the advantage of being targeted and, at least in the short run, cost-effective.

A second approach is to embark on a more broad-based effort to help your manager reach professional status, including some meaningful form of credentialing. If I'm right in arguing that today's medical practices require more sophisticated management, then the move up to professionalism makes sense.

You will only benefit from such a step. Truly professional office managers will have a sense of pride and high standards; they'll have to earn their credentials, and then re-earn them through continuing education; they'll meet and network with others in their field, and cross-fertilize each other with new ideas, tips, and techniques. All of those advances in knowledge and "tone" will be of lasting value to you and your practice.

Some helpful programs to consider

Let me describe some currently available ways of achieving this status. The first two are in my own neck of the woods, and there are others around the country.

Loyola University of New Orleans offers a program (of which I'm coordinator) leading to certification of

What a Difference a Pro Makes

One of the clearest examples of the benefits of having a skilled office manager is the monthly financial report. A real office manager will give to you a concise monthly breakdown of your income, expenses, and productivity, along with year-to-date totals and comparative figures from the previous year. He or she will then sit down with you and spend 10 or 15 minutes discussing the report.

You'll be able to identify problem areas right off the bat. If your productivity is slipping, or if your spending on expenses is running high, that will be clear. You can then plan to take corrective action.

The value of this information becomes apparent when you have to make decisions.

Suppose you get an offer to join up with an HMO or PPO. If you have a solid idea of how well you're doing, it's easier to decide whether you can afford to turn down the offer, or whether you would be better off accepting the fee discount in exchange for the patient volume and income. Without solid and current information, you'd just be guessing.

You might argue that an accountant or practice management consultant could provide the report. That's the more expensive method, and besides, if your office manager is the one who gathers that data, it will be at his or her fingertips during the day-to-day functioning of the office. And that's the way things should be.

medical and dental managers. It's a 9-month curriculum. Students study a different topic each month under qualified college professors. The classes address the various aspects of managing a practice, and are held in the evening so participants can go right on working. Those who complete the course are given a certificate from the university and are recognized as Certified Practice Manager (CPM).

Woman's Hospital of Baton Rouge, Louisiana, has a program similar to the one at Loyola. The instructors are practicing professionals from the marketplace. Curricula of these kinds are beginning to crop up around the country and provide a sound avenue toward professionalization.

A second approach is to test existing medical office managers on their level of knowledge through a certification exam followed up by continuing education. Such is the method used by the Professional Association of Health Care Office Managers (PAHCOM). PAHCOM will also help practices hire qualified mangers. (Please see sidebar, "A Sign of the Times.")

The American College of Medical Group Administrators (ACMGA) in Denver takes an approach similar to PAHCOM's. The college is affiliated with the Medical

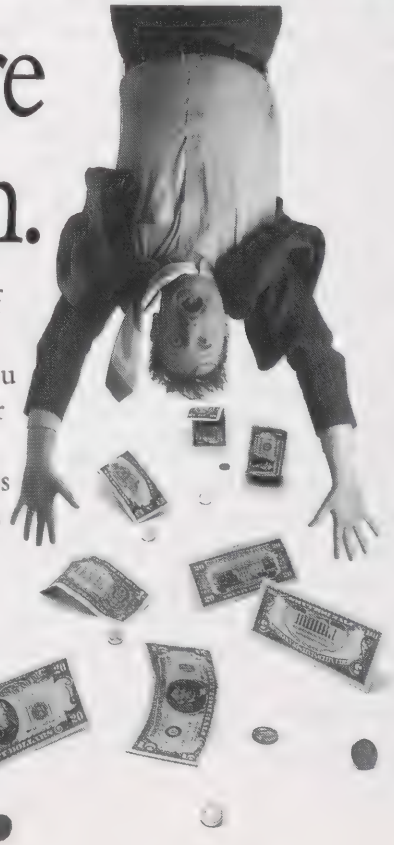

A "Woman's Profession" No Longer

The medical office manager's job has traditionally belonged to women. While that is still largely true, the gender balance is definitely changing.

One estimate is that between 5 to 10 percent of office managers who pursue professionalization are men, and the number is rising. The job is losing its stigma as "low-paid women's work" and is being appreciated for its real value.

A true profession will attract the attention of talented people, regardless of gender, and that is just what is happening with medical office managers.

Uncollected Receivables Can Turn Your Profit Picture Upside Down.

Seemingly attractive write-offs paint an ugly picture when you think of their cost in terms of equivalent sales.

Say you take an average 6% profit and write off $2,000 in bad debts. You would have to generate additional revenue of more than $33,000 to recover the loss.

Group Management Association, and has about 1,700 members.

As the name implies, the ACMGA's focus is on group practices (although nearly half the membership comes from small groups).

The college's ultimate credential is the FACMGA, or Fellow of the ACMGA, designation. To earn it, an applicant must first join the college; then take three comprehensive exams (in objective, essay, and oral formats); then accumulate 120 hours of CE or formal education; and finally write a paper, or three case studies, and have the result approved by a professional committee.

The requirement for a paper is not found in other programs, and the extra step may reflect ACMGA's group practice orientation. Like PAHCOM, ACMGA also offers a journal, exam review courses, networking support, and a placement service. You can call the association at (303) 397-7869, or write to the American College of Medical Group Administrators, Director Andrea Rossiter, 104 Inverness Terrace East, Englewood, Colorado, 80112-5306.

A crucial tip

At present, the medical office manager's profession is still evolving. The various approaches to professionalization will doubtless "shake out" over the next few years, and a clearly superior organization or approach may emerge. In the meantime, though, I don't think you're likely to go wrong with any reputable program. Try to assess what level of sophistication your practice needs and can afford and then "plug in" to a program or organization that is suited to you.

One tip I would offer, though, is that you should sit down with your manager and make clear the commitment of time and energy he or she will have to make. There will be classes to attend, exams to take, texts to read, and papers to write. Continuing education will be necessary. If that's clearly understood and acceptable, full steam ahead!

4. At what cost, and who should pay?

Cost, and who should bear it, is one of the stickiest doctor/staff issues. I generally don't have much problem convincing physicians that they need a quality player in the office manager's slot—present-day realities support my point. The question is cost, especially in smaller practices.

To start with, what will the cost be? The simpler approach of sending someone to take a number of college courses will run anywhere from $500 to $3,000, depending on how many subjects the manager studies, and where. A curriculum like the one at Loyola cost about $2,400. The total cost of getting a PAHCOM certification might run $500 to $1,000, including membership, the exam fee, the preparation course, books and materials, and accommodations at the annual conference (where the certification exam is given).

Offhand, these numbers might seem high. They aren't. If, in exchange for a few thousand dollars, you bring professional management skills into your office, you'll benefit in numerous ways. An improvement in collections or third-party reimbursement alone might quickly pay off the whole expense. The outlay becomes especially worthwhile when you consider that the higher level of operation will be ongoing—you'll get the benefits year after year.

As to who should pay for this skills improvement, my belief is that it makes perfect sense for an employer to fully underwrite training costs that improve the value of a staff's performance. After all, you'll be receiving the direct benefits for years to come.

I've heard may physicians object here. "Suppose she leaves six months after getting a certification? Or asks for a raise?"

I have two things to say about the possibility of losing someone after bankrolling their professional education. One is that in the worst case—if your manager does leave six months after getting some sort of credential—you'll still have gotten your money's

Prevent Medical Malpractice

Recently our program at Loyola University completed a presentation on medical risk management, with an emphasis on malpractice issues.

A week later, one of the students reported to the class on the difference that seminar had made. It seems the student, a medical office manager, overheard the receptionist having a conversation with a patient that was leading directly into a major breach of the patient's confidentiality. Red lights went off in the manager's head, and she tactfully interrupted the receptionist, gave her an immediate (if slightly spurious) assignment, and took over the interaction with the patient herself.

The value to the practice? First, a situation was averted in which the receptionist was about to hand over to the patient a golden opportunity to file a lawsuit. Second, the office's level of consciousness regarding risk management was raised dramatically.

Such things are sometimes hard to measure, but clearly, that medical practice got real value for it's investment in it's manager.

worth. The skills, procedures, manuals, and higher level of performance will be of immediate benefit to your practice and afterward will still be in your office, again with ongoing benefit to you.

Second, many physicians (and other professionals, ranging from lawyers to travel agents) sign agreements with their employees stating that in exchange for free training the employee agrees not to work for any competing business in the region for one or two years. That usually solves the problem.

An incentive for both of you

While I believe that it's in a practice's interest to pay for educating staff members, at the same time I like the student to get involved and take some responsibility.

One way to accomplish both goals is to set up an incentive agreement. If your office manager is taking college courses, you might have him or her bear the tuition cost up front. You could then reward a "C" grade with 50 percent reimbursement, a "B" with 75 percent, and an "A" with 100 percent. If the manager takes the PAHCOM certification exam, you might refund half the cost just for taking the test, and the whole cost if the certification is achieved.

Money well spent

As for the question of compensation, I decided to take that one directly to a class of 20 students in the Loyola University program. I was very surprised to hear their response.

First, virtually all of them said they had opted to pursue certification because they were interested in the education for its own sake and for a sense of the personal enrichment they would derive from professionalization.

Second, they felt the skills enhancement would increase both their value to their practices and their marketability.

Over time, they were confident that this increase in value would be recognized—preferably in their current office, but elsewhere if need be.

Which means that a professional office manager might well cost you a little more in compensation than you're paying now. Still, if you've followed my point in this article, you'll see that it's money well spent. Not to make the outlay would almost certainly be a false economy!

MSMS to hold First Annual Office Managers Conference

MSMS will be holding its First Annual Office Managers Conference August 4-5, at the Ritz Carlton, Dearborn. This two-day conference will provide valuable information for the medical office manager in a small, private practice setting, as well as from a large, integrated health care system.

Leading experts will address current issues in health system reform during the opening session, followed by a dinner presentation and "panel-of-peers" to address your specific questions, concerns and success stories in today's environment of change.

An outstanding line-up of practice management consultants will lead the next day's sessions on successful practice-building methods, risk management, supervisory and other management skills, exploring successful management techniques for the medical office manager of the future.

In a comfortable social setting, you can exchange tips, discuss common interests, offer support, and forge friendships for years to come.

Hotel reservation information will be forwarded with your seminar confirmation, or call MSMS at (517) 336-5784 for hotel rates. Overnight accommodations should be made directly with the hotel facility.

American Diabetes Association.
Michigan Affiliate, Inc.

The Michigan Affiliate of the American Diabetes Association is currently in the process of creating a new Physician Referral Directory. Many individuals with diabetes contact the affiliate to seek advise in choosing a physician with interest and expertise in diabetes. The directory will be mailed to potential patients and they will be able to make their own decision accordingly.

The qualifications that we require of a physician to be listed in our directory are:

(1) Must be a member of the professional section of the American Diabetes Association, and

(2) Must attend either a Michigan or a nationally-sponsored CME course regarding diabetes of four or more hours each year.

If you wish to be included in our Physician Referral Directory, please call the Affiliate office at (810) 433-3830 or 1-800-525-9292 and ask for a "Referral Directory" application.

Should you have any questions, please feel free to contact Mary Lorenz, Director of Programs, at the Michigan Affiliate office in Southfield, Michigan.

MMGMA: The CEOs of Modern Medicine

By Ralph D. Ward

Ask Michigan's medical group managers about health care reform, and you realize that they are prepared for big changes—in part because they've seen so much transformation already. "There's going to be great change in the future," says Vivian "Skip" Bellis, president of the Michigan Medical Group Managers Association. "With the new types of health plans, and more government intervention, all the turmoil is sure to effect us."

But Michigan's group managers have proven their ability to roll with the punches. Founded 21 years ago with just 14 members in Fenton, Michigan, MMGMA has seen its membership soar along with the complexities of modern medical practice. "We had 310 members two years ago but the number has climbed to 480 today," says Bellis, who works with The Medical Group practices in Michigan City, Indiana. MMGMA serves a vital support purpose for its members. More perhaps than other medical-related associations, MMGMA puts great emphasis on networking and mentoring among members. The variety of medical practice in Michigan, from the dwindling number of small-physician practices to large, affiliated clinics, means that the term "practice manager" covers a great range. These managers, likewise, cover a skill continuum that extends from high-school graduates to MBAs. MMGMA members with greatest education and experience truly work to help their fellow members who have less training, or are in smaller practices. Even these seemingly simpler practices are facing new challenges in the 1990s.

Indeed, the role of the group manager has seen as much development and evolution over the years as any area of specialty medicine. Thirty years ago, a medical practice might have a secretary and receptionist who did billings a half day a week. "Now," says Bellis, "you need four or five people to handle it, plus an accounting staff to keep track of the numbers." Third party billing requirements alone have transformed the profession into a vital administrative force, the lifeblood of many medical practices. As the numbers have increased, so has the need for practice management specialization. "In most offices, someone used to be just an insurance biller," recalls Bellis. "Now, some people are just coders, some just handle Medicare, some just HMOs, some PPOs, and some keep track of those with no insurance."

But 1990s practice managers transcend even these paper chase headings. Today, they must also work in financial planning sales and marketing, bookkeeping, personnel management, and strategic planning. "Practice managers have become more like what the CEO is to a corporation," observes Eric Thompson, of The Burns Clinic, PC, in Petosky, who serves as MMGMA treasurer. "Physicians are turning more to their administrators for advice, and this puts more pressure on us to take a leadership role." This increased reliance by physicians on the talents of practice managers has brought with it growing respect for managers among practitioners. Says Thompson: "Physicians and administrators have been developing more mutual respect. As physicians realize the importance of skilled administration, they're hiring more skilled people." Indeed, the very term "group" or "practice" manager seems to be bursting at the seams.

MMGMA fulfills need

This need for "skilled people" is being met by MMGMA members, who work hard at keeping current on health care administration issues. "Our members are very interested in keeping up with professional standards by continuing academic work," says Bellis. One example of the MMGMA impulse toward greater professionalism happens this month, with the group's spring conference in East Lansing. Subjects to be covered include team motivation, improving service, and the impact of national health care reform. Credits are also available through the medical practitioner's national group, the American College of Medical Practice Executives. There are approximately 400 ACMPE members in Michigan, outside of the MMGMA membership.

Yet despite the concentration on staying current, MMGMA members increasingly find themselves running faster just to stay in place, given the pace and breadth of health care reforms. Even the concept of a practice manager as someone who does the paperwork is evolving. "Many of us probably won't have jobs, at least of the same type," says Bellis. "We'll be marketers, out selling to health plan and managed care consortia." Their front-line status in the health-care bureaucracy should give practice managers a seat at the table in the process of shaping reform, according to Bellis. "We want to be involved, to bring in different views." This first-hand knowledge of paperwork hassles helps practice managers see just what works in our current reimbursement system—and what doesn't. "The paperwork and administrative hassles are forced on us by government. We shouldn't take the blame as administrators. So much of the cost is defensive medicine."

No medical support sector can go through such rapid, explosive change without taking its toll. "The responsibility is wearing," say Bellis. Still, the responsibility and air of change offers spiritual rewards for those who manage medical practices. "The true administrator is the one who pulls the whole practice together, who makes it seem like one team."

Effective Interviewing Techniques Net the Right Personnel

By Julie Smith

Interviewing, screening and eventually hiring the right candidates for an office position within your practice demand more than running a personality contest. They require your considerable time, special skills and written documentation.

Ferreting out the right professional candidate to represent the approach and attitude of your practice can seem overwhelming. The combined skills of Sherlock Holmes, Doctor Watson and Dear Abby all come into play as soon as you begin seeking applicants.

You should be immediately forewarned that processing candidates requires careful documentation every step of the way. Should any legal action be taken against your practice from a rejected candidate citing discrimination, your interview records will become invaluable. These records, by the way, should be kept at least two years.

Your practice consultant can give you valuable assistance with screening and interviewing and can always be called in to assume this responsibility for you. However, should you decide to go through the process yourself, here are some time-honored tips that work.

Have basics at hand

First, have a written job description and policy handbook available. There should be no question in the candidates' minds as to their duties, along with the benefits, holidays, vacation time and other programs they will be entitled to.

Second, request a typed resume' and a cover letter from each applicant. This serves as a useful screening tool and can eliminate a lot of unnecessary face-to-face time. Also, pay attention to all written materials candidates submit: They offer a candid reflection of their desire for excellence and professionalism. Legible handwriting is extremely important. If a Medicare audit takes place in your office, an auditor checking through illegible files could find it hard to read documentation that justifies certain services and procedures you billed for.

As the resumes come in, create three separate files using the "stoplight" method with highlighting markers: Red means "no," yellow means "maybe," and green means "yes." After reading through each resume, highlight the skills and experience that apply or not apply to the position. Then tally up the colored marks and place in the appropriate file.

For instance, if the applicant has previously worked in a cardiology practice or for a dentist and those experiences directly relate to the position you're offering, they would be highlighted in green. Also notice tenure at previous positions and be alert to any excessive salary statements.

Notice phone demeanor

Try to call candidates at home when arranging the first interview. Trying to reach them at work may place them in a compromising position with either coworkers or management. That first telephone contact can tell you a lot about the applicant. Is she pleasant and courteous on the phone? Then consider if she will be answering the phones in your office.

During the phone conversation, offer a synopsis of the practice and explain the location. These issues may immediately eliminate the candidate and again save eventual interviewing time. Then do your homework before the first interview. To help keep the interview focused, prepare a checklist of questions to ask each applicant. Leave lots of blank spaces to fill in the answers.

Set up an interview time for the candidate to come in and fill out an application. Without being obvious, observe promptness, professional appearance and how she interacts with other employees or individuals in the waiting room, as she completes the application.

Surreptitious observation can be extremely revealing about the candidate. Once in an interview situation, the individual may be extremely nervous. How she interacts with others in the waiting room may provide a truer picture of her personality.

Before your first interview takes place, you will have already gleaned much useful information about your candidate. This includes phone manners, personality, grooming, punctuality and overall skills and qualifications.

Be informal

During the interview keep the tone and feeling information, even though you'll be following a checklist of additional information needed from the candidate. Encourage the applicant to talk about herself, questioning her about anything in the resume or application that could be perceived as a negative.

Be sure to ask the following basic questions:

- Why do you want to work in a medical office?
- What made you choose this line of work?
- Why do you think you'd like this job?
- Medical office personnel frequently don't get out in time. Will this interfere with your personal schedule in some way?
- Why did you leave your previous job?
- Will you have a problem asking patients for money?
- Can you deal with the sight of blood?

Avoid discrimination

Keep in mind that there are many questions which are illegal to ask, particularly with regard to potential discrimination. Some of these questions relate to height, weight, marital status, physical or cognitive disabilities, existence of children or an arrest record.

When concluding the interview, request names and numbers for conducting a reference check. Also, immediately write down your impressions of the applicant as soon as she walks out the door. Jotting notes while the interview is still fresh in your mind will help you recall the details later. It also provides additional documentation about the suitability of a candidate should there be a problem later.

One obvious red flag during an interview is an applicant's request that you not talk to her previous employer, but instead requests that you speak to a co-worker with whom she worked more closely.

Co-workers can be either a crony or fiercely competitive. Whatever they say can be extremely prejudicial. Always speak to the employer about a candidate, even if candidates claim they never worked closely with him or her. It should still prove to be insightful.

Asking how soon the applicant can begin the job can also be very telling. Is she willing to give her current employer the accepted two-week notice? This courtesy extended to her current employer easily discloses how she might treat a future employer - you.

Remember that letters of reference on a previous employer's letterhead can easily be forged. Talking to these individuals instead by phone is a wiser alternative.

When setting up second interviews with selected applicants, be sure to include those staff members who will be working closely with this individual. Their input can avoid future personality clashes.

To be sure the final candidate is clear on her responsibilities and terms of employment, have her sign an employment agreement. It should spell out everything from starting date to starting salary. This form can protect both parties - employer and employee, should the employee need to be terminated.

Following these screening and interviewing procedures can help eliminate much of the guesswork involved with hiring the right person for the job. Considering that employees generally need to work for you at least a year before their value equals what you pay them, putting in the necessary time and energy during the interviewing process can be one of your wisest investments.

When You're On the Line

By Julie Smith

The telephone is the most often used...and misused...piece of medical equipment in a physician's office. It is often the vehicle for miscommunication which can lead to medical injuries and the seeds of malpractice suits. Breaches in patient confidentiality, inappropriate medical advice, and miscommunication of diagnostic studies are common direct causes of malpractice lawsuits. In addition, the frustration often created by insensitive telephone management can be the "straw that breaks the camel's back" in the determination to seek the opinion of a plaintiff attorney.

Patient confidentiality

The telephone provides significant potential for breaches in confidentiality. Problems include the inability to guarantee identity of persons to whom medical information is being provided, purposefully or inadvertently leaving confidential messages on answering machines or with secretaries or co-workers, or even having the telephone communication overheard by other patients present in the office. Modern technology, such as the fax machine, eases many of the tasks encountered in a medical practice, but continually presents new challenges to maintaining patient confidentiality. Very often, staff ignorance with the importance of confidentiality and their unawareness of how to avoid spilling confidential information form the basis for problems. Staff must be educated and continually reminded as to the impact of their telephone behaviors, and strict policies and systems must be implemented within the office to guard against these actions.

Inappropriate medical advice

It is a rare physician who is not aware of the adverse consequence of allowing non-medical personnel to provide medical advice independently. In my experience working with medical offices to implement office risk management programs, I have often asked the question of who may provide advice to patients. I invariably receive the answer that only the physician, and perhaps the nurse, may provide advice. However, after a day or two in the office, I frequently witness telephone conversations which contradict this answer. In fairness to the employee, advice is often given innocently and accurately. But it is replete with hazard. Even advice which seems trivial at the time may be critical to the ultimate health care outcome.

Miscommunication of diagnostic studies

Probably the most common "miscommunication" of diagnostic studies is that which does not occur at all. The failure to inform a patient of an abnormal study which eventually results in an injury to the patient is difficult to defend if a malpractice lawsuit is filed. Miscommunication also occurs when non-medical personnel provide patients with test results, but do not provide the patient with an accurate interpretation of the study or clear follow-up instructions. This, too, can possibly lead to malpractice and can almost assuredly lead to patient frustration and dissatisfaction.

Telephone courtesy

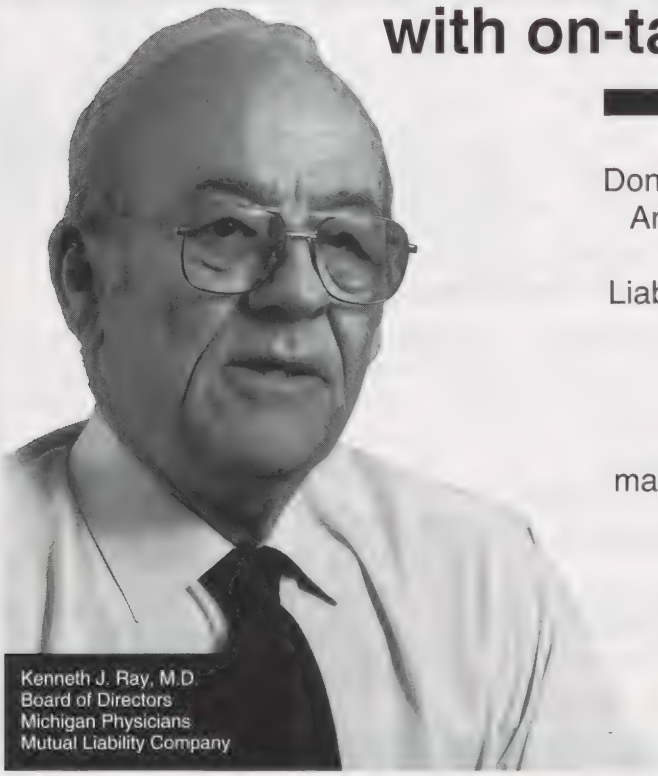

Patients can experience severe frustration by not being able to get through to the office, being placed on hold for long periods of time, and by not having telephone calls returned as promised. The telephone provides the patient's first impression, as well as continued impressions of the office; therefore, its appropriate use can be an effective marketing tool, as well as a device for promoting patient satisfaction.

Realizing the importance of the telephone to the medical office and the reality that many medical office personnel do not receive formal training to perform their job responsibilities, MSMS has developed a new course entitled, "When You're On the Line: Telephone, Reception and Scheduling Techniques for Today's Front-Office Staff". This day-long program will outline the importance of the receptionist's position, especially related to management of the telephone. Malpractice pitfalls, methods for improving efficiency and scheduling techniques will be addressed. Representatives from Communications Dynamics will present information on voice and imaging techniques to create positive and pleasant impressions. MSMS Group Insurance Trust strives to meet the diverse needs of physicians

By B. David Wilson, MD

The Michigan State Medical Society Group Insurance Trust (GIT) was created in 1987 to provide member physicians and their employees access to quality, comprehensive, cost-competitive insurance programs and personalized service. GIT is the fourth largest medical trust in the country. Its primary function is to administer and direct MSMS-sponsored insurance programs such as the Blue Cross Blue Shield of Michigan health benefit program, the Delta Dental program, disability income and business overhead protection, and term life insurance. Just recently, group auto and homeowners and long-term care plans were introduced.

The MSMS Health Benefit Program currently provides personalized service to over 15,000 physicians, their employees and their family members. In addition to the administrative activities, GIT bills and collects over $22 million dollars in premiums each year. 1991 marked the introduction of true group programs,

ANNOUNCING THE MICHIGAN CONNECTION IN LOCUM TENENS

CompHealth/Kron, the nation's premier locum tenens (temporary physician staffing) organization, has established a local staffing network in Michigan.

That means we have qualified, experienced, local physicians available to fill in when your medical practice or facility is short staffed, or when you need daily, weekly, evening, weekend, or routine physician coverage.

It's a great way to make sure your patients have convenient access to quality care in your practice or facility.

Call us today to discuss your practice coverage needs, or to find out more about building a flexible, rewarding practice as a locum tenens physician with our Michigan staffing team!

enabling us to market all group options available through Blue Cross Blue Shield of Michigan to medical groups of all sizes. These group offerings were expanded in 1993 and now include Preferred Provider options, too.

The Delta Dental Program, since its introduction in 1988, has grown to over $1 million in annual premiums with over 1,700 contracts currently in place. The Delta plan was expanded in 1993 and now includes a choice between traditional and Preferred Provider coverage. The MSMS program was the first free-standing association plan of its kind and is currently being replicated by other state associations in Michigan. We should be proud that MSMS was Delta Dental's model association.

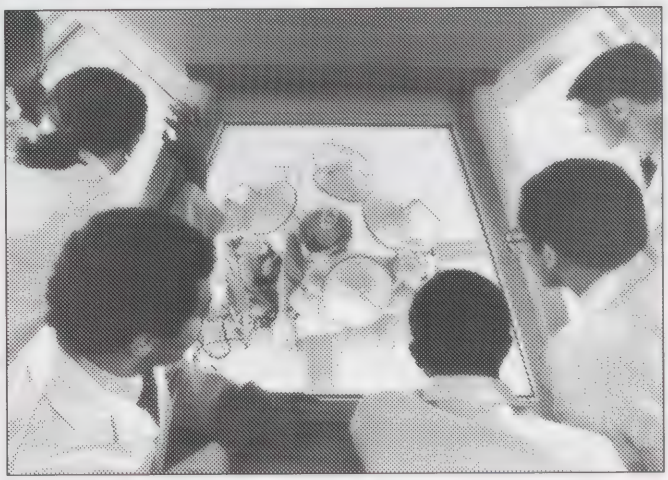

> "We are especially pleased with MSMS's newest insurance program, group auto and homeowners coverage."

Working in conjunction with Stratton, Cheeseman & Walsh, Inc., MSMS's affiliated insurance agency, the Group Disability Income Program through Provident Insurance Company has been enhanced. Physicians can apply for $4,000 of monthly disability benefits and $6,000 of business overhead protection through this program. MSMS, GIT and Provident have clarified the definition of total disability. Under this new definition, a physician is declared totally disabled if he/she is unable to perform the duties of his/her specialty. If a physician is unable to work in their occupation at full capacity and suffers a subsequent loss of earnings of 20 percent or more, partial benefits are payable.

Through Stratton, Cheeseman & Walsh, MSMS members have access to accidental death coverage and term life insurance protection. The MSMS term life insurance plan offers up to $200,000 of term life insurance at affordable group rates. New MSMS members, under age 40, enrolling within 60 days of becoming members are guaranteed at least $25,000 of term life coverage.

We are especially pleased with MSMS's newest insurance program, group auto and homeowners coverage. These new plans are being underwritten by Auto Owners Insurance Company. Auto Owners, based in Lansing, has earned the highest rating possible from A.

M. Best. With assets over $3 billion and a sophisticated claims office network, Auto Owners is a solid agency force. MSMS members will be able to obtain coverage through Stratton, Cheeseman & Walsh, Inc., MSMS's affiliated insurance agency or through one of over 600 independent Auto Owners agencies throughout Michigan.

In 1992, GIT joined with the AMA to offer access to an HIV Indemnity program. This program, designed especially for physicians, is a solution to the unmet need for financial protection against the HIV virus. The AMA HIV Indemnity plan provides an important difference you won't find with other types of insurance plans - it pays benefits upon a positive HIV diagnosis to help protect your family's financial assets immediately. This lump-sum payment can help you replace your lost income and cover the high costs of HIV treatment without having to dip into savings or investments. This unique type of insurance coverage has gained wide recognition and several hundred MSMS members have applied for coverage.

Again in 1993, GIT joined with the AMA to market a unique health, disability and life insurance benefit package especially designed for medical students. This special program is currently being offered to the medical student population at Wayne State University School of Medicine. The Michigan State University College of Human Medicine and the University of Michigan Medical School are reviewing the plan for possible implementation in 1994.

Working to meet the diverse needs of physicians, the MSMS Group Insurance Trust continues its goal of providing exceptional service to our members. GIT has

MSMS sponsored and endorsed insurance programs

- Blue Cross Blue Shield Health Benefits Programs
- Delta Dental Programs
- HIV Indemnity Protection
- Group Homeowners and Automobile Insurance
- Disability Income Insurance
- Business Overhead and Expense Protection
- Accidental Death and Dismemberment Coverage
- Medical Student Health, Disability and Life Coverage

"OmniCare and OmniCarePlus were a logical choice to help my practice survive today's changing health care climate."

Richard Stober, M.D., Internal Medicine

Today, more than 1,500 primary care physicians and specialists — and 46 hospitals — are affiliated with OmniCare Health Plan. And already a large number of providers have associated with OmniCare's new POS plan, OmniCarePlus.

Why?

Our large patient base — there are nearly 100,000 members in OmniCare alone.

And our experience — for more than 18 years, we've successfully managed health care costs without compromising quality. Putting our plans — and our providers — in excellent position for future changes in health care.

According to Dr. Stober, "OmniCare and OmniCarePlus offer advantages beyond just a steady flow of patients."

We have, for example, developed an exclusive in-office software program that supplies immediate access to patient benefits and medical history. We encourage active physician involvement in our Quality Assurance and Peer Review Committees. And our fees are competitive and promptly paid.

For more details on the present and future advantages of becoming a participating physician, call OmniCare Provider Services today, at (313) 393-4540.

MSMS Reimbursement Roundup

By Joyce Nurenberg
MSMS REIMBURSEMENT OMBUDSMAN

Following are answers to questions about reimbursement issues MSMS received from member physicians and their staffs over the last month.

Q If I participate with the Medicare program, can I bill Medicare patients an interest charge for nonpayment of their coinsurance and deductible amounts?

A No. The provision in the Medicare regulations 42 CFR 424.55 states that a physician or other supplier that accepts assignment may not collect from the beneficiary for a covered service more than the applicable deductible and coinsurance. This precludes anyone from imposing any interest charges on beneficiaries because of carrier delay in processing the claims or beneficiary delay in paying their deductible and coinsurance amounts. Section 1848 (g)(1) of the Act prohibits physicians who do not accept assignment from charging more than the limiting charge.

Q I am a nonparticpating physician with BCBSM. Are there any BCBSM plans that are not subject to the per claim participation rules?

A Only one, the Caring for Children Program. Per claim participation rules require that non participating physicians who elect to participate on a procedure, must participate on that same procedure for the balance of the calendar year. Public Act 350 applies to providers regardless of the benefit program involved. It applies to self-insured (Administrative Service Contracts) as well as underwritten groups.

Q Can anyone other than the physician obtain the Medicaid Prior Authorization Case Evaluation and Review (PACER) number?

A Yes. According to Medicaid Policy staff, a PACER number is required for all inpatient elective admissions, all readmissions and transfers. The physician or a representative may request the number. The representative may be the nursing staff, hospital staff, office employees, anyone authorized to seek the PACER number on behalf of the physician. The physician remains responsible for determination and documentation in the medical record of the need for the admission or transfer.

Q A recent voucher for payment of procedure 94657, mechanical ventilation, subsequent day, reported payment of $31.75. We used to receive $84.75. Is this an error?

A No. BCBSM made a number of changes in processing mechanical ventilation. BCBSM claims $84.75 was originally in the system to be a global payment for all days and therefore the fee adjustment is now based on a daily rate. Other changes: services are now quantity processed and up to 10 days can be processed without having to submit documentation.

Q Is it necessary to obtain a rejection from BCBSM before billing Medicaid for noncovered services or a terminated primary insurance plan?

A No, but it is important to complete box 62 with the appropriate numerical reason to explain your claim to Medicaid. Report a "6" in box 62 when it is a noncovered benefit of the primary insurance plan and a "2" when the primary insurance has terminated. Include an explanation in the remarks column.

The explanation should include the primary insurance plan name, contract or policy number and the reason why you are billing Medicaid, i.e., noncovered or terminated. It is no longer necessary to include the insurance address, phone number, service code, group number, or subscriber name.

Q How can I get payment from a patient who has Master Medical and Medicaid?

A Treat them as patient pay and collect the money up front. Payment for Master Medical (MM) services are not subject to a participation agreement so you can collect your usual fee.

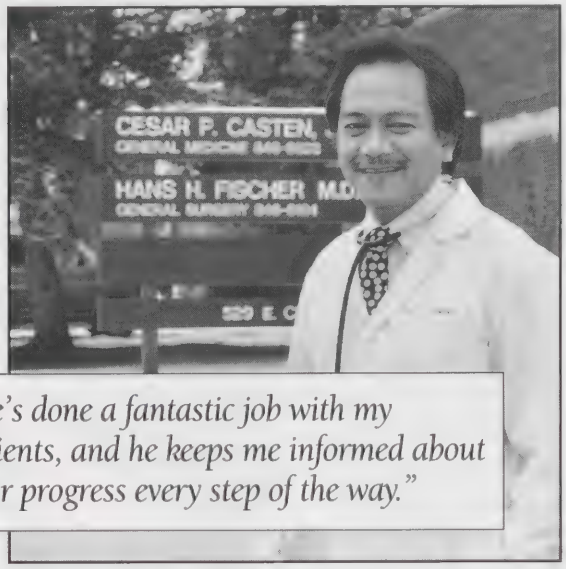

An alternative is to inform the patient the subscriber will receive the money from BCBSM and that you will accept BCBSM's payment as payment in full if they turn in the check. In most, if not all instances, Medicaid will not pay any more.

If the patient does not send you the money, let them know you will contact their caseworker to report the money paid to them as income.

HEALTHY RELATIONSHIPS

"He's done a fantastic job with my patients, and he keeps me informed about their progress every step of the way."

Dr. Cesar Casten
Family Practice, Standish, MI

"The St. Luke's Specialist Referral Network introduced me to Dr. deBari. I work closely with a local foster home in our area that houses many individuals with paraplegia and other disabilities, and I frequently send these patients to Dr. deBari for the more specialized orthopedic care they need. It's a great relationship. I benefit. Dr. deBari benefits. And, of course, our patients benefit most of all."

Dr. Anthony deBari, Orthopedic Surgery
St. Luke's Specialist Referral Network, Saginaw, MI

"I've only been practicing in this area for three years, and St. Luke's Specialist Referral Network has been very helpful in marketing my practice. I've had many doctors refer patients to me and consult with me about a patient. I'm more than happy to do that. After all, that's what the Specialist Referral Network is all about. Physicians helping physicians."

SPECIALIST REFERRAL NETWORK

It's a simple idea. Rural physicians call St. Luke's Specialist Referral Network when they need the advice or services of a specialist. The Network contacts the appropriate specialist, arranges a phone consultation or makes a referral appointment, then calls the rural physician with the information. No hassles No waiting. A simple idea. And it's working.

When a healthy relationship with one of our Saginaw area specialists can help you and your patient, call the Specialist Referral Network at 1-800-541-3939.

A Car Accident Can Change Your Mind

One third of those injured in significant motor vehicle accidents experience emotional or cognitive problems caused by mild traumatic brain injury, or MTBI. Once viewed as minor, there is now strong medical evidence that MTBI can have a dramatic impact on one's family and professional life.

MTBI is often caused by a blow to the head or whiplash typical of car accidents. Symptoms include depression, headache, irritability, difficulty in thinking clearly, loss of memory and sleep disturbance. Experience shows that MTBI patients recover more quickly and completely when treatment includes psychological as well as physical care.

Michigan Trauma Center specializes in the treatment of mild traumatic brain injuries, post traumatic stress disorder and other psychological effects of injury. For a detailed report on MTBI, call Armin I. Feldman, M.D. at (810) 356-8000.

tology, nephrology, endocrinology, cardiology, gastroenterology, general surgery, and obstetrics and gynecology, to mention but a few. Good physicians respond to a patient's need. Specialists are good physicians, too. Specialists who offer the principal continuing care do provide general medical and preventative care to a level not unlike primary care physicians. Maybe it's not too late to make a semantic's change to principal continuing care physicians and thus offer another reason for Congress to forego control of graduate medical education.

The explosion of medical knowledge and technology in the last three decades has influenced physicians to target their expertise and skill to more limited and defined areas — even within a specialty. Some have become noted as subspecialists!

Is it wrong for the public or patients to demand or request an orthopedic hip surgeon, an arthroscopist, or a hand surgeon? How did American physicians come to receive the worldwide recognition as providers of the "best health care?" A major reason remains that ALL physicians are specialty trained whether the physician is a primary care physician or a primary or a principal continuing care physician!

Will those physicians who just wish to triage medical care please line up inside the White House halls to visit the president? The number of physicians who might will not clog the halls in my view!

Space doesn't permit me to relate a number of other personal pet peeves which might be more important and relate to antitrust, negotiations and medical information systems.

I wish to conclude my final President's Page with a quote from my inaugural speech to the MSMS House of Delegates, even though it has already been published in the August 1993 issue of Michigan Medicine:

"...my fervent hope is that, together, we recognize the opportunities for our patients and us; we use wisdom to confront those opportunities that are without merit; we have courage to assist the opportunities that will benefit our patients; and, in fairness, we maintain unity to accomplish the task."

Persevere! And God Bless!

My Personal Pet Peeves!

By Gilbert B. Bluhm, MD

The word "physician" has acquired a number of derogatory synonyms over the years. Most are not printable! Some are descriptive of special roles for physicians as health delivery systems change and are in print. However, physicians may find a few of the terms demeaning and/or inappropriate.

For me, "gatekeeper" implies a physician may be less than a patient's (NOT a client or subscriber) advocate, and in reality, has sometimes (maybe too often) ended up as a "rationer" of care that led to a decrease in quality of care.

Even though data presented recently at the February PO/PHO Conference (co-sponsored by MSMS and MPMLC) emphasized that cost effective care resulted from managed care systems, calling a physician a "gatekeeper" grates me.

It doesn't help my attitude when a physician is referred to as "provider," either! Especially, as it is clear the context of provider usage often addresses only physicians. There are many instances when physicians are lumped together with "other health care providers," when in my view it demeans the professionalism of physicians. A few years ago, the new physician contract for BCBSM initially had deleted physician in preference to "provider," but the BCBSM representatives soon understood from those of us on the Physician Contract Advisory Committee that the change to physician was important.

> "...my fervent hope is that, together, we recognize the opportunities for our patients and us; we use wisdom to confront those opportunities that are without merit; we have courage to assist the opportunities that will benefit our patients; and, in fairness, we maintain unity to accomplish the task."

Currently, one of the debates about the Health Security Act of 1993 regards "too many specialists." Lead articles often are titled, "Primary Care Physicians Versus Specialists!" Don't the authors or editors know that the primary care physicians include physicians who are members of specialty societies? Those societies are the American Academy of Family Practice, American College of Physicians and the American Academy of Pediatrics. Each organization has specified residency training and certification requirements to qualify its physician members as specialists. Primary care physician versus specialist qualifies as another oxymoron.

What about the proposal to "retrain" specialists to provide broader coverage of health care? Many specialists can and do provide generalist medical care for their patients who undergo continuing care for recurrent or chronic disease management. Such examples occur in oncology, diabetology, rheuma-

COVER STORY

Violence, and what can be done to reduce its frequency, is on everyones' minds these days. Recognizing the key role physicians can play in helping curb domestic violence, MSMS, in conjunction with the AMA, has been taking part in an educational campaign to increase physician and public awareness of family violence since the fall of 1992. This month's cover story highlights the many activities and accomplishments of MSMS in its anti-violence efforts. Also included are: a look at future MSMS anti-violence plans; a report from the MSMS Department of Medical Economics and Health Care Delivery on the growing incidents of violence; a report on the MSMS Alliance and its plans to help educate youth about the dangers of guns; and a report from the AMA on its plans to form a national coalition of groups representing medicine and law to fight family violence. Rounding out the cover story is a review of the ethical considerations of treating victims of domestic violence. page 34

New Medicare Carrier Plans regular transition updates

To help doctors make a smooth transition to Michigan's new Medicare carrier Oct. 1, that new carrier is providing MSMS with regular updates on its activities concerning the transition. Health Care Service Corporation (HCSC), a Blue Cross Blue Shield Association affiliate which administers the Illinois Medicare program, will take over Michigan's Medicare contracts Oct. 1. Those contracts cover claims processing for Medicare Part A, which pays for hospital inpatient care and other institutional services, and Medicare Part B, which reimburses doctors for their medical services. The Health Care Financing Administration announced in March that it will end its contracts Sept. 30 with its current Michigan Medicare carrier, Blue Cross Blue Shield of Michigan.

Regional meetings with doctors and their office staffs about details of the transition also are under discussion by MSMS, HCSC and HCFA. Watch Michigan Medicine and Medigram for updates on how the transition will affect your medical practice.

MSMS PO/PHO Masters series to continue this fall

MSMS will continue its popular Masters series this fall on developing physician organizations (POs) and physician-hospital organizations (PHOs). The series was started in 1993 to provide doctors with the information they need to meet the challenges of coming health system reforms. Day-long seminars and two-day conferences have detailed how to create POs and PHOs. Attendees also have learned about what's on the horizon in managed care, and received updates on anti-trust issues. The next conference in the series will cover credentialing issues May 25 at MSMS headquarters. Call the MSMS Office of Physician Education at (517) 336-5784 to register.

National conference on well-being coming to Dearborn

This fall MSMS will jointly sponsor a national conference on professional well-being for physicians, their spouses and other health-care professionals. The MSMS Task Force on Physician Well-Being is working with the Society for Professional Well-Being in Durham, North Carolina, to bring the national group's seventh annual conference to Dearborn Oct. 6-9.

The October conference will cover how to create a healthy practice environment, how to enhance family life, how to respond to the economic threats of health system reform, how to respond to medical liability litigation contructively, and several other topics to help doctors cope with the stresses of practicing medicine.

Since 1993, the MSMS task force has co-sponsored a dozen well-being programs around Michigan to help doctors learn more about the stress of their profession and how to take care of themselves as well as their patients. Call the MSMS Office of Physician Education at (517) 336-5784 for details on the national conference and the statewide seminars conducted by the MSMS Task Force on Physician Well-Being.

For details on these and other issues call William E. Madigan, Executive Director, MSMS 517/337-1351.

Committed Volunteers – Physicians Needed

Make Home Towns Good Places To Live

By Louis L. Constan, MD

Recently I resigned my position as medical officer of the Saginaw County Juvenile Center, affectionately known as "Juvy," after 15 years of service. I suspect that many of you did not know that I worked there two or three hours a week. My work did not seem especially important to other doctors and I rarely mentioned it. At my retirement dinner, the Juvy Administration pointed out that my 15 years did not go to waste, and that the Saginaw County Facility is widely regarded as having one of the best run Medical Departments in the state of Michigan. As I look back at why I started working at that facility, I had some insights as to why it is important for everyone, especially doctors, to be active in the community.

First, I wanted to contribute something to my community other than just taking care of patients, which, although important, can become a mundane activity. I felt I could become bored, and lose my touch. That was certainly true. However, much more happened. I learned a great deal about how our community, in this case, the court system, functions. I learned a lot about diseases that I never see in my office. I got to meet and work with a group of people whose devotion to their community and desire to help people are on a par with the doctors I know. That was a revelation. I had naively thought that doctors were the only truly idealistic people. Such revelations have helped me grow as a person, giving me a perspective that has helped my patients in my private practice.

"I feel that Saginaw is 'My Kind of Town' because, in a very real sense, my efforts helped make it what it is...it is important for everyone, especially doctors, to be active in the community."

Second, when we help the community, we really help ourselves. This area is a good one in which to practice medicine, largely because it is, in general, a good place in which to live. How does a community become a good place to live? One way is for many individuals to contribute more to the community than they take from the community. But, more importantly, talented and intelligent people contribute their knowledge and expertise to solving community problems. And who is more talented and intelligent than us doctors? We certainly have some of the most advanced degrees around, and our problem solving skills are unmatched in other sectors of society. Saginaw has a dearth of corporate leadership monitoring its welfare. There are no major corporations that have their national headquarters here. It is the small businesses, and the everyday people like us, whose combined efforts make our community what it is.

Third, community institutions, without proper guidance, can make it difficult for us to do our jobs of providing medical care, not out of malice, but simply out of well meaning ignorance. The Juvenile Center kids were patients of many of you readers, and I was able to influence Juvy policies and practices to make it easier for community doctors to take care of them when they left the Juvenile Center.

So, what opportunities are there for community service? I suspect that there are many, many such opportunities, but I would like to suggest just a few.

1. Volunteer as an advisor to your child's school. There are plenty of committees that would love to have a doctor represented.

2. Volunteer on the board of a social service agency, such as VNA, a counseling agency, the Red Cross, Salvation Army. These groups help our profession by attacking the root causes of disease—poverty, crime, mental illness.

3. Run for public office. Many doctors have done this and find it a way of promoting the public health in ways that they could never do in their own offices. There are opportunities in City and Township government, County government, school boards, and even state politics. I suspect that if you expressed even a passing interest to the right people, that it would not be hard to get involved.

I know that many of you are already involved, but may never talk about it, just as I rarely talked about my experience at Juvy. Why not write (your county society bulletin or Michigan Medicine) and tell us of your experiences? It might give the rest of us some ideas (and encourage those who are not yet involved!)

As for myself, I feel that Saginaw is "My Kind of Town" because, in a very real sense, my efforts helped make it what it is.

Is there a doctor in the House (or Senate)?

Physician aspirants learn running for office exhilarating, though difficult, process

By Ralph D. Ward

Thomas C. Payne, MD

Dean G. Sienko, MD

"The first rule doctors learn on entering politics is that they're nothing special." That, according to Dean G. Sienko, MD, was the essential message learned at the January "Medicine's Candidate" seminar organized by American Medical Political Action Committee (AMPAC). The program, held in Washington, DC, offered physicians from around the country insights on just how our political leaders are elected—and how their medical reputation will do them little good should they choose to toss their own hats in the ring. Doctor Sienko, medical director for the Ingham County Health Department, Lansing, attended the seminar because he was "curious about the political process, and curious about what a run for office might entail." He and several other physicians experienced a valuable program that actually walked politico-wannabe's through the details involved in making a run for public office. Sessions included making the decision to run, public speaking, fundraising, dealing with the media, and how to deal with the personal and family strains of political campaigning.

These latter costs, the incredible demands on family, time and integrity, were the aspects attendees found most eye-opening. "You need a lot of fire in the belly to do this right," says former MSMS president and AMPAC board member Thomas C. Payne, MD. "This program showed the physicians that [running for office] would mean a great deal of difference in their lives." Gale Northcross, MD, of Trenton, came away impressed with demands a political run would make. "Once you make a decision, you have to take yourself very seriously. Nothing is sacred, and if you walk into it naive, you'll get burned."

"The physicians...who had run for office made it clear that politics require(s) tremendous sacrifice...But everyone there, whether they had won or lost, said they didn't regret it. It was the most exhilarating experience of their lives."

Some shocking discoveries

Such rough handling can come as a surprise to physicians. Doctors are well educated, acknowledged as skilled professionals in their field, and generally hold a respected position in their communities. While used to frustrations (especially in today's health care practice environment), doctors usually receive some deference. To suddenly find themselves with no private life, on the campaign road 18 hours daily, every aspect of their personal lives and business history closely scrutinized, and having to sell themselves to an electorate that is either hostile, indifferent or uninformed, is quite a shock. "We found out the physician gets no benefit as a candidate," says Doctor Sienko. "Physicians may think that if they run, they'll be hailed by the public, and the world will take to them. That's bull." Doctor Payne says that being a physician may send the public some negative messages. "Physicians may also be considered elitist." Doctor Sienko finds that even the physician's knowledge of health care issues may not be enough. "I think the political polls show that health care is not the big issue on people's minds. Violence, safety and education are probably higher. Just health care reform won't cut it."

No sacred cows

The scrutiny that every aspect of the candidate's life may face also lets doctors know they are no sacred cows. The recent misadventures that President and Mrs. Clinton have faced because of investments made years earlier are instructive. Whatever your views on the president's ethics, could your life face such searching, hostile fine-tooth combing for even the appearance of impropriety? Participants at the AMPAC seminar were advised to clear up any skeletons in their closets before considering a run for office.

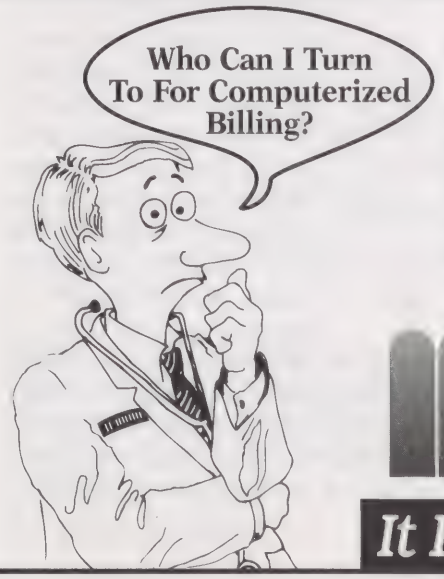

The frantic pace of campaigning, fundraising and meetings that continue throughout the politician's career also tend to squeeze out all except full-time politicos. Michigan, as with most states, has a full-time legislature, making it almost impossible for a physician to serve while continuing in practice. Physicians also face electoral roadblocks at the party political level. The elaborate structure of local, county and state party organization is often a club that doesn't count the doctor among its members. "Up until recently, we weren't involved to the extent we ought to be," says Doctor Sienko. "Some physicians are running for high office, but have little political experience."

Political experience key

Political experience is what the AMPAC conference aimed to offer, in a concentrated dose. Attendees learned much about the actual nuts and bolts of campaigning, some insightful, some a bit disillusioning. For instance, the seasoned pro politician doesn't let a word leave his or her mouth that hasn't been considered carefully for maximum political effect, and preferably is pre-written. "When they ask the candidate to say a few words, he always has something pre-written," counsels Doctor Northcross. "These great speeches and sound bites don't just happen," adds Doctor Sienko. "They're all planned out."

The AMPAC meeting caused those attending to ask hard questions of themselves. Is it worth it? Why should a physician face the punishment and uncertainty that goes with politics? "More physicians realize that they had better be involved in this, that the political system is where the big decisions are made," according to Doctor Payne. He finds more and more physicians deciding that, no matter how great the sacrifices, their personal commitment to medicine increasingly demands that they become involved in the political process. "The physicians at the seminar who had run for office made it clear that politics required tremendous sacrifice," observes Doctor Sienko. "But everyone there, whether they had won or lost, said they didn't regret it. It was the most exhilarating experience of their lives."

MSMS participates in PO/PHO site visitation project

Many valuable lessons were learned

By William E. Madigan
Executive Director
Michigan State Medical Society

William E. Madigan

Thomas Wolff

William Powers

For the past two years, MSMS has been actively involved in assisting Michigan physicians in creating physician organizations (POs) and physician-hospital organizations (PHOs). Last year, we approached the AMA, as well as the Illinois State Medical Society (ISMS)and Indiana State Medical Association (ISMA), with the idea of conducting a research project to gather and disseminate information concerning POs and PHOs. The major purpose of this study is to provide valuable information to physicians who are considering whether to establish or join a PO or PHO. Another purpose of the project is to increase the knowledge base of staff of the MSMS Physician Organization and Management Services division.

The AMA, ISMS, and ISMA saw the value of participating in the study, and in December 1993, the first site visit was conducted. Over the next three months, staff of the four medical societies visited the following PHOs: Akron City Health System, Akron, Ohio; Allegiance Corporation, Ann Arbor, Michigan; California Pacific Medical Services Organization, San Francisco, California; Hartford PHO, Hartford, Connecticut; Michiana Healthnet, South Bend, Indiana; Morristown Memorial PHO, Morristown, New Jersey; Spectra Health System, Chandler, Arizona; and SwedishAmerican Health Alliance, Rockford, Illinois. Thomas M. Wolff, William D. Powers, and I represented MSMS.

Several criteria used

Several criteria were used to select PHOs to be included in the project. There was a strong desire to include a broad mix of PHOs, including:

- PHOs located in various regions of the country, with various market sizes, and various levels of managed care market penetration;
- PHOs that are in various stages of development, including some that had been in operation for five or more years, and some that have been formed within the past year or two;
- PHOs that have a PO associated with them and PHOs that were formed without utilizing a PO;
- PHOs that are involved in risk-based payment arrangements such as capitation, and PHOs that are involved primarily in discounted fee-for-service payment arrangements.

"It is vitally important for physicians to establish a PO before working with a hospital to create a PHO. Establishing a PO first is critically important because it ensures that physicians have a vehicle through which they can present a united front in discussions with hospital representatives."

Many lessons learned

Among the "lessons learned" from the site visit project are the following:

- It is vitally important for physicians to establish a PO before working with a hospital to create a PHO. Establishing a PO first is critically important because it ensures that physicians have a vehicle through which they can present a united front in discussions with hospital representatives.
- A key PO/PHO success factor is respected physician leadership that is committed to the success of the PO/PHO and that has a clear vision of the role the PO and PHO can play in the changing health care delivery system.
- It is essential for the PHO's long-term success that it have a sophisticated management information system in order to develop the "information infrastructure" that is needed to run an effective integrated delivery system.
- A PHO needs considerable operating capital in order to purchase a sophisticated management information system and to hire the qualified staff needed to run the organization's day-to-day operations.
- It is important that the PHO board be composed of equal numbers of physician and hospital representatives. In addition, a requirement that important actions must be approved by a majority of both the physician and hospital representatives helps to ensure that consensus is reached on key decisions.

Site visit a first step

MSMS is very pleased to have participated in the site visit project. This project is only the first step in our study of evolving health care delivery mechanisms. In the next few months, the four medical societies that conducted this project intend to undertake a similar study of other PO stratagies, including the physician equity model, a model in which physicians are in sole control and either own a hospital or contract with it for inpatient services.

If you have any questions concerning the site visit report, please call Thomas Wolff at (517) 336-5740 or William Powers at (517) 336-7597. Copies of the complete site visit report are available for MSMS, AMA, ISMS, and ISMA members for $20, $95 for all others. If you are interested in obtaining a copy of the report, please call Shannon Stockwell at (517) 336-7600.

An executive summary of the PO/PHO site visitation project follows on pages16-19.

Case Study Analysis of Physician Hospital Organizations

By Thomas M. Gorey, JD

Following is an executive summary of a case study analysis of PHOs prepared by Thomas M. Gorey, JD, of Crystal Lake, Ill., on behalf of the American Medical Association, Illinois state Medical Society, Indiana State Medical Society amd Michigan State Medical Society.

In response to the growing interest in Physician Hospital Organizations (PHOs), the American Medical Association, the Illinois State Medical Society, the Indiana State Medical Association, and the Michigan State Medical Society agreed to co-sponsor a study of PHOs and the Physician Organizations (POs) associated with them.

The sponsors agreed that the best way to obtain the desired information on PHOs would be to acquire it directly from those who were involved in the formation and ongoing operation of PHOs, via a series of PHO case studies which would have a primarily qualitative, rather than quantitative, focus.

In reviewing the findings of this study, it is important to keep in mind that the undertaking of this study does not represent an endorsement of the PHO concept or of managed care, but rather is part of organized medicine's ongoing effort to communicate to its members timely information concerning significant changes in the organization, delivery, and financing of health care services. PHOs are only one of a number of models that may warrant consideration by physicians as part of their longrange strategic planning. An examination of other models is being undertaken through a separate study, which will provide information and analyses on the physician equity model, the "group without walls" approach, and other physician integration strategies.

The Role of Physician Orqanizations in the Development and Operation of PHOs

The importance of a PO in the formation and ongoing operation of a PHO was confirmed throughout this study. Repeatedly, in discussions with physician and hospital representatives of PHOs that had a PO (six of the eight studied), the point was made as to the essential role played by the PO in all phases of PHO planning, development, operations, and policymaking.

"The need for primary care physicians to play a prominent role in all phases of PHO development and operations was emphasized repeatedly by hospital CEOs and physicians alike."

Those supporting the physician organization concept felt that a PO served an important role in unifying the physicians; providing a structure and process for information sharing and policymaking; fostering physician consensus-building and decision-making; presenting a unified front in discussions with hospital representatives; and enhancing the ability of the PHO to negotiate with payers.

Physician Leaders: A Driving Force for Change

A key ingredient in whatever success has been achieved to date in the POs and PHOs included in this study is the leadership role played by a handful of dedicated, respected physicians. These physicians had a number of characteristics in common, including a clear vision of the role the PO and PHO could play in the changing health care delivery system and a sincere commitment to the concept of physicians working cooperatively with their hospital to further the goals of patients, physicians, and hospitals. These physician leaders also had the trust and respect of the medical staff and were willing to devote countless hours to the tasks associated with organizing and operating a PO and PHO.

An issue that affects most PHOs, and which is even more pronounced if there is a PO in place, involves the relationship between the PHO (and PO if one exists) and the medical staff leadership. In some cases, PHOs have taken the approach that the medical staff is a completely separate entity that has little relevance to the business or policy operations of the PHO. As

Long-Acting Antihistamine

PRODUCT INFORMATION

DESCRIPTION CLARITIN Tablets contain 10 mg micronized loratadine, an antihistamine, to be administered orally. They also contain the following inactive ingredients: corn starch, lactose, and magnesium stearate.

Loratadine is a white to off-white powder not soluble in water, but very soluble in acetone, alcohol, and chloroform. It has a molecular weight of 382.89, and empirical formula of $C_{22}H_{23}ClN_2O_2$; its chemical name is ethyl 4-(8-chloro-5,6-dihydro-11*H*-benzo[5,6]cyclohepta[1,2-b]pyridin-11-ylidene)-1-piperidinecarboxylate and has the following structural formula:

CLINICAL PHARMACOLOGY Loratadine is a long-acting tricyclic antihistamine with selective peripheral histamine H_1-receptor antagonistic activity.

Human histamine skin wheal studies following single and repeated 10 mg oral doses of CLARITIN Tablets have shown that the drug exhibits an antihistaminic effect beginning within 1 to 3 hours, reaching a maximum at 8 to 12 hours and lasting in excess of 24 hours. There was no evidence of tolerance to this effect after 28 days of dosing with CLARITIN Tablets.

Pharmacokinetic studies following single and multiple oral doses of loratadine in 115 volunteers showed that loratadine is rapidly absorbed and extensively metabolized to an active metabolite (descarboethoxyloratadine). The specific enzyme systems responsible for metabolism have not been identified. Approximately 80% of the total dose administered can be found equally distributed between urine and feces in the form of metabolic products after 10 days. The mean elimination half-lives found in studies in normal adult subjects (n = 54) were 8.4 hours (range = 3 to 20 hours) for loratadine and 28 hours (range = 8.8 to 92 hours) for the major active metabolite (descarboethoxyloratadine). In nearly all patients, exposure (AUC) to the metabolite is greater than exposure to parent loratadine.

In a study involving twelve healthy geriatric subjects (66 to 78 years old), the AUC and peak plasma levels (Cmax) of both loratadine and descarboethoxyloratadine were significantly higher (approximately 50% increased) than in studies of younger subjects. The mean elimination half-lives for the elderly subjects were 18.2 hours (range = 6.7 to 37 hours) for loratadine and 17.5 hours (range = 11 to 38 hours) for the active metabolite.

Loratadine, dosed once daily, had reached steady-state by the fifth daily dose. The pharmacokinetics of loratadine and descarboethoxyloratadine are dose independent over the dose range of 10 to 40 mg and are not significantly altered by the duration of treatment.

In the clinical efficacy studies, CLARITIN Tablets were administered before meals. In a single-dose study, food increased the AUC of loratadine by approximately 40% and of descarboethoxyloratadine by approximately 15%. The time to peak plasma concentration (Tmax) of loratadine and descarboethoxyloratadine was delayed by 1 hour with a meal. Although these differences would not be expected to be clinically important, CLARITIN Tablets should be administered on an empty stomach.

In patients with chronic renal impairment (Creatinine Clearance ≤ 30 mL/min) both the AUC and peak plasma levels (Cmax) increased on average by approximately 73% for loratadine; and approximately by 120% for descarboethoxyloratadine, compared to individuals with normal renal function. The mean elimination half-lives of loratadine (7.6 hours) and descarboethoxyloratadine (23.9 hours) were not significantly different from that observed in normal subjects. Hemodialysis does not have an effect on the pharmacokinetics of loratadine or its active metabolite (descarboethoxyloratadine) in subjects with chronic renal impairment.

In patients with chronic alcoholic liver disease the AUC and peak plasma levels (Cmax) of loratadine were double while the pharmacokinetic profile of the active metabolite (descarboethoxyloratadine) was not significantly changed from that in normals. The elimination half-lives for loratadine and descarboethoxyloratadine were 24 hours and 37 hours, respectively, and increased with increasing severity of liver disease.

There was considerable variability in the pharmacokinetic data in all studies of CLARITIN Tablets, probably due to the extensive first-pass metabolism. Individual histograms of area under the curve, clearance, and volume of distribution showed a log normal distribution with a 25-fold range in distribution in healthy subjects.

Loratadine is about 97% bound to plasma proteins at the expected concentrations (2.5 to 100 ng/mL) after a therapeutic dose. Loratadine does not affect the plasma protein binding of warfarin and digoxin. The metabolite descarboethoxyloratadine is 73% to 77% bound to plasma proteins (at 0.5 to 100 ng/mL).

Whole body autoradiographic studies in rats and monkeys, radiolabeled tissue distribution studies in mice and rats, and in vivo radioligand studies in mice have shown that neither loratadine nor its metabolites readily cross the blood-brain barrier. Radioligand binding studies with guinea pig pulmonary and brain H_1-receptors indicate that there was preferential binding to peripheral versus central nervous system H_1-receptors.

Clinical trials of CLARITIN Tablets involved over 10,700 patients who received either CLARITIN Tablets or another antihistamine and/or placebo in double-blind randomized controlled studies. In placebo-controlled trials, 10 mg once daily of CLARITIN Tablets was superior to placebo and similar to clemastine (1 mg BID) or terfenadine (60 mg BID) in effects on nasal and non-nasal symptoms of allergic rhinitis. In these studies, somnolence occurred less frequently with CLARITIN Tablets than with clemastine and at about the same frequency as terfenadine or placebo. In studies with CLARITIN Tablets at doses 2 to 4 times higher than the recommended dose of 10 mg, a dose-related increase in the incidence of somnolence was observed. Therefore, some patients, particularly those with hepatic or renal impairment and the elderly, may experience somnolence.

In a study in which CLARITIN Tablets were administered at 4 times the clinical dose for 90 days, no clinically significant increase in the QTc was seen on ECGs.

INDICATIONS AND USAGE CLARITIN Tablets are indicated for the relief of nasal and non-nasal symptoms of seasonal allergic rhinitis.

CONTRAINDICATIONS CLARITIN Tablets are contraindicated in patients who are hypersensitive to this medication or to any of its ingredients.

PRECAUTIONS General: Patients with liver impairment should be given a lower initial dose (10 mg every other day) because they have reduced clearance of CLARITIN Tablets.

Drug Interactions: The coadministration of a single 20 mg dose of CLARITIN Tablets (double the recommended daily dose) and a 200 mg dose of ketoconazole twice daily to 12 subjects resulted in increased plasma concentrations of loratadine (180% increase in AUC) and its active metabolite, descarboethoxyloratadine (56% increase in AUC). However, no related changes were noted in the QTc on ECGs taken at 2, 6, and 24 hours after the coadministration of loratadine and ketoconazole. Also, there were no significant differences in clinical adverse events between CLARITIN Tablet groups with or without ketoconazole.

Other drugs known to inhibit hepatic metabolism should be coadministered with caution until definitive interaction studies can be completed. The number of subjects who concomitantly received macrolide antibiotics, cimetidine, ranitidine, or theophylline along with CLARITIN Tablets in controlled clinical trials is too small to rule out possible drug-drug interactions. There does not appear to be an increase in adverse events in subjects who received oral contraceptives and CLARITIN Tablets compared to placebo.

Carcinogenesis, Mutagenesis, and Impairment of Fertility: In an 18-month oncogenicity study in mice and a 2-year study in rats, loratadine was administered in the diet at doses up to 40 mg/kg (mice) and 25 mg/kg (rats). In the carcinogenicity studies, pharmacokinetic assessments were carried out to determine animal exposure to the drug. AUC data demonstrated that the exposure of mice given 40 mg/kg of loratadine was 3.6 (loratadine) and 18 (active metabolite) times higher than a human given 10 mg/day. Exposure of rats given 25 mg/kg of loratadine was 28 (loratadine) and 67 (active metabolite) times higher than a human given 10 mg/day. Male mice given 40 mg/kg had a significantly higher incidence of hepatocellular tumors (combined adenomas and carcinomas) than concurrent controls. In rats, a significantly higher incidence of hepatocellular tumors (combined adenomas and carcinomas) was observed in males given 10 mg/kg and males and females given 25 mg/kg. The clinical significance of these findings during long-term use of CLARITIN Tablets is not known.

In mutagenicity studies, there was no evidence of mutagenic potential in reverse (AMES) or forward point mutation (CHO-HGPRT) assays, or in the assay for DNA damage (Rat Primary Hepatocyte Unscheduled DNA Assay) or in two assays for chromosomal aberrations (Human Peripheral Blood Lymphocyte Clastogenesis Assay and the Mouse Bone Marrow Erythrocyte Micronucleus Assay). In the Mouse Lymphoma Assay, a positive finding occurred in the nonactivated but not the activated phase of the study.

Loratadine administration produced hepatic microsomal enzyme induction in the mouse at 40 mg/kg and rat at 25 mg/kg, but not at lower doses.

Decreased fertility in male rats, shown by lower female conception rates, occurred at approximately 64 mg/kg and was reversible with cessation of dosing. Loratadine had no effect on male or female fertility or reproduction in the rat at doses of approximately 24 mg/kg.

Pregnancy Category B: There was no evidence of animal teratogenicity in studies performed in rats and rabbits. There are, however, no adequate and well-controlled studies in pregnant women. Because animal reproduction studies are not always predictive of human response, CLARITIN Tablets should be used during pregnancy only if clearly needed.

Nursing Mothers: Loratadine and its metabolite, descarboethoxyloratadine, pass easily into breast milk and achieve concentrations that are equivalent to plasma levels with an AUC_{milk}/AUC_{plasma} ratio of 1.17 and 0.85 for the parent and active metabolite, respectively. Following a single oral dose of 40 mg, a small amount of loratadine and metabolite was excreted into the breast milk (approximately 0.03% of 40 mg over 48 hours). A decision should be made whether to discontinue nursing or to discontinue the drug, taking into account the importance of the drug to the mother. Caution should be exercised when CLARITIN Tablets are administered to a nursing woman.

Pediatric Use: Safety and effectiveness in children below the age of 12 years have not been established.

ADVERSE REACTIONS Approximately 90,000 patients received CLARITIN Tablets 10 mg once daily in controlled and uncontrolled studies. Placebo-controlled clinical trials at the recommended dose of 10 mg once a day varied from 2 weeks' to 6 months' duration. The rate of premature withdrawal from these trials was approximately 2% in both the treated and placebo groups.

Adverse event rates did not appear to differ significantly based on age, sex, or race, although the number of non-white subjects was relatively small.

In addition to those adverse events reported above, the following adverse events have been reported in 2% or fewer patients.

Autonomic Nervous System Altered salivation, increased sweating, altered lacrimation, hypoesthesia, impotence, thirst, flushing.

Body As A Whole Conjunctivitis, blurred vision, earache, eye pain, tinnitus, asthenia, weight gain, back pain, leg cramps, malaise, chest pain, rigors, fever, aggravated allergy, upper respiratory infection, angioneurotic edema.

Cardiovascular System Hypotension, hypertension, palpitations, syncope, tachycardia.

Gastrointestinal System Abdominal distress, nausea, vomiting, flatulence, gastritis, constipation, diarrhea, altered taste, increased appetite, anorexia, dyspepsia, stomatitis, toothache.

Musculoskeletal System Arthralgia, myalgia.

Psychiatric Anxiety, depression, agitation, insomnia, paroniria, amnesia, impaired concentration, confusion, decreased libido, nervousness.

Reproductive System Breast pain, menorrhagia, dysmenorrhea, vaginitis.

Respiratory System Nasal dryness, epistaxis, pharyngitis, dyspnea, nasal congestion, coughing, rhinitis, hemoptysis, sinusitis, sneezing, bronchospasm, bronchitis, laryngitis.

Skin and Appendages Dermatitis, dry hair, dry skin, urticaria, rash, pruritus, photosensitivity reaction, purpura.

Urinary System Urinary discoloration, altered micturition.

In addition, the following spontaneous adverse events have been reported rarely during the marketing of loratadine: peripheral edema; abnormal hepatic function, including jaundice, hepatitis, and hepatic necrosis; alopecia, seizures; breast enlargement; erythema multiforme; and anaphylaxis.

DRUG ABUSE AND DEPENDENCE There is no information to indicate that abuse or dependency occurs with CLARITIN Tablets.

OVERDOSAGE Somnolence, tachycardia, and headache have been reported with overdoses greater than 10 mg (40 to 180 mg). In the event of overdosage, general symptomatic and supportive measures should be instituted promptly and maintained for as long as necessary.

Treatment of overdosage would reasonably consist of emesis (ipecac syrup), except in patients with impaired consciousness, followed by the administration of activated charcoal to absorb any remaining drug. If vomiting is unsuccessful, or contraindicated, gastric lavage should be performed with normal saline. Saline cathartics may also be of value for rapid dilution of bowel contents. Loratadine is not eliminated by hemodialysis. It is not known if loratadine is eliminated by peritoneal dialysis.

Oral LD_{50} values for loratadine were greater than 5000 mg/kg in rats and mice. Doses as high as 10 times the recommended clinical doses showed no effects in rats, mice, and monkeys.

DOSAGE AND ADMINISTRATION Adults and children 12 years of age and over: One 10 mg tablet daily on an empty stomach.

In patients with liver failure, 10 mg every other day should be the starting dose.

such, they have distanced themselves from the organized medical staff. In others, however, there has been a deliberate attempt to foster goodwill between the medical staff and the IPA by keeping the medical staff organization informed of PHO developments and involved in its activities.

Most PHO participants foresee significant, long-term issues involving the hospital medical staff, including possible duplication of effort and conflict, particularly if PHOs and POs begin to take on some of the responsibilities currently assumed by the medical staff in such areas as credentialing and quality assurance.

The Role of the Hospital Administration and Board in PHOs

Having a well-organized and focused group of physicians, with talented and motivated leaders, represents only half of the PHO equation. As important as it is that the physicians have leaders whom they trust and respect, it is equally critical that the hospital administration have the trust and respect of the medical staff. Although the level of trust typically increases as the parties begin to work more closely together in a PHO arrangement. a certain level of trust must be present at the outset.

It is important that the hospital administration and hospital board be committed to the PHO concept, including being willing to share control and decision-making within a joint venture framework. It also is critical that the hospital CEO have the interpersonal skills to be able to handle conflict constructively and to build consensus.

Measures of a hospital administration's commitment to a PHO include: the extent to which the hospital is pursuing conflicting strategies, such as purchasing primary care physician practices; the administration's willingness to utilize the PHO for all of the hospital's managed care contracting; and the willingness of the administration to sacrifice short-term financial gains for the long-term success of the hospital, the medical staff, and the PHO.

In addition to having a hospital administration that is committed to the success of the PHO, it is important that there be strong support for the PHO at the hospital board level and that the hospital board understand the long-range implications of establishing a PHO. Bringing hospital board members into the PHO planning process at the earliest possible stage and giving them meaningful involvement in PHO decision-making can enhance a PHO's potential for success.

"If there was one comment that was made consistently by representatives of every organization included in this study, it was that having a good computer information system is essential to the success of PHOs."

The Role of Primary Care Physicians in PO and PHO Membership, Policymaking, and Operations

The need for primary care physicians to play a prominent role in all phases of PHO development and operations was emphasized repeatedly by hospital CEOs and physicians alike. Several PHOs in this study were formed following earlier, unsuccessful efforts spearheaded by specialists, which failed because they did not develop a managed care product that was attractive to business and other payers.

Two issues that surfaced consistently throughout the case studies were: (1) the need to address a perceived imbalance between the number of primary care physicians and specialists in the membership of POs and PHOs, and (2) the need to provide for a significant degree of primary care physician involvement in PO and PHO governance and policymaking.

Currently, the specialty composition of PHOs tends to mirror quite closely the physician population as a whole, with most PHOs having roughly one-third primary care physicians and two-thirds specialists. While aggressively seeking to recruit and retain primary care physicians, most PHOs are struggling with the issue of how to narrow their panel of specialists. The notion of creating sub-panels of physicians within the PHO, which would be eligible for participation in some, but not all, of the PHO's managed care contracts is an option that many PHOs currently are considering.

Despite unanimous agreement among PHO representatives with the concept of empowering primary care physicians and providing them with a lead role in PO and PHO policymaking, most of those in this study have not established primary care-controlled governance structures.

Most PHOs have faced the issue of physicians of various specialties wanting to be considered "primary care physicians." Although most PHOs have begun to address the problem by adopting a definition of primary care that encompasses only family practice, general internal medicine, and pediatrics, contentious issues between primary care physicians and specialists are likely to continue in PHOs.

Information Systems: "The Heart and Soul of a Good PHO"

If there was one comment that was made consistently by representatives of every organization included in this study, it was that having a good computer information system is essential to the success of PHOs. However, despite this recognition of the critical importance of management information systems, none of the PHOs in this study was completely satisfied with the systems that they had in place and virtually every PHO representative lamented the fact that they had not moved more aggressively to put in place an adequate information system.

In particular, the concern was voiced that data collected by the hospital (or insurance companies) for claims and payment purposes may not be useful for purposes of analyzing physician practice patterns. Most PHOs indicated that they do not want to continue to be dependent on payers for data, because they feel that utilization data from payers often is not received in a timely manner, is too oriented toward inpatient care, or is compiled in unique ways by different payers, thereby decreasing its usefulness to the PHO as a utilization management tool.

PHO Capitalization, Management and Operations

The amount of money invested by physicians and hospitals in PHO ventures varies considerably and is dependent primarily on the purposes for which the PHO is organized. The initial expenses associated with establishing a PHO are primarily for legal and consulting services and, for the PHOs included in this study, these fees generally ranged from $50,000 to $150,000. Aside from these initial market analysis, strategic planning and organizational expenses, the two major sources of PHO expense involved a significant, one-time expense for development of a management information system and ongoing expenses for PHO administrative support (i.e., staff salaries and benefits). In most cases, the initial expenses to establish the PHO were dwarfed by the ongoing operational expenses, particularly if the PHO was involved in claims processing.

All of the PHOs in this study were legally structured as 50-50 joint ventures between physicians and the hospital, but in practice none of the PHOs actually was funded at the outset by a 50 percent capital contribution from the physicians. Although the specific details varied from PHO to PHO, in each there was some loan, letter of credit, or other arrangement by which physicians could pay back their share of the initial capitalization over time.

"Inherent in the PHO concept is an assumption of shared physician/hospital decision making. Without exception, the PHOs in this study confirm that assumption, with physician and hospital representatives having an equal voice in each of the PHOs studied."

Regardless of the number of staff a PHO had, the point was made repeatedly as to the necessity of having knowledgeable, dedicated staff who have a broad mix of technical and interpersonal skills, and who are able to work effectively with the hospital administration and with physicians. PHO staff came from a variety of educational and professional backgrounds, but most had significant experience either with an insurance company, HMO, or hospital.

Most of the PHOs in this study were legally organized as not-for-profit corporations and representatives of these organizations repeatedly indicated that there was no expectation that the PHO itself would generate a surplus. Rather, the explicit goal of these PHOs was to preserve or expand the market share of the participating physicians and the hospital. However, several of the PHOs which were aggressively pursuing risk-based payment arrangements (or that were forming their own HMOs) clearly were seeking to realize significant financial returns for the PHO.

PHO Contracting and Payment Arrangements

The types and numbers of contractual arrangements entered into by the PHOs in this study varied considerably. On the low end, one of the PHOs had only two contracts and on the high end one of the PHOs had over 30 payer contracts. The number of covered lives ranged from less than 5,000 for a relatively new PHO to over 80,000 in the case of three of the more well-established PHOs in the study.

To a large extent, the type of contracting arrangements entered into by the PHO was a reflection of the type of market in which the PHO was located. PHOs in relatively low managed care markets, where PPOs were the predominant form of managed care, entered primarily or exclusively into discounted fee-for-service payment arrangements. PHOs located in high managed care markets typically had both PPO and HMO contracts, with a clear pattern toward growth in HMO and other risk-based contracts. Most PHO representatives indicated that, if possible, it was best to begin with relatively simple, discounted fee-for-service contracting arrangements and gradually move toward more sophisticated risk-sharing contracts, as the PHO matures.

The PHOs in this study utilized a variety of physician and hospital payment approaches. For the most part, even if the PHO was accepting capitation payment from an HMO, the physicians were being paid primarily on a fee-for-service basis, often with a withhold. In several cases though, primary care physicians were being paid on a fixed, per member, per month basis, while specialists were paid based on a fee schedule. Most PHOs have either developed or are in the process of developing their own physician fee schedule.

Currently, if physicians are "at-risk" in PHO arrangements, it is typically through the use of withholds. However, most PHO representatives were not completely satisfied with withholds and agreed that, over time, mechanisms will be implemented to provide individual-based physician incentives.

The PHOs in this study differed in their ability to bind the physicians to the terms of PHO contracts. In some cases, the physicians had given the PHO the authority to enter into binding agreements with payers if the contracts met certain terms; in others, the physicians had an opportunity to "opt out" of any contract by notifying the PHO.

PHOs utilize several types of hospital payment arrangements, including per diems, DRGs, and capitation. Although per diems were the most frequently used hospital payment mechanism, most of the PHO representatives indicated that, as with physicians, hospitals would be accepting more and more risk over time, first through case payment rates and eventually through fixed, per member, per month payment.

Although the potential for direct contracting with businesses is often held out as one of the major advantages of PHO arrangements, a number of the PHOs in this study were reluctant to enter into direct contracts with employers for fear of alienating the insurance companies and HMOs with whom the hospital or PHO currently has contracts. In other cases, however, direct contracting arrangements were the stimulus for the development of the PHO, and the PHOs have pursued such arrangements seemingly without any adverse ramifications.

"Most PHO representatives expressed the view that physician practice patterns will eventually become a more significant factor in the PHO credentialing—and especially recredentialing—process. Many saw this movement toward a more "closed" approach as being integral to the future success, and perhaps even viability, of PHOs."

State insurance laws, which explicitly or implicitly limit the extent to which PHOs can accept risk, is another reason some PHOs have been reluctant to pursue direct contracting arrangements. Other PHOs have been more comfortable operating in the "gray area" that currently exists in most state insurance statutes.

Several of the PHOs in this study were involved in the development of an HMO, either through the PHO itself, through the hospital, or through a consortium of PHOs or hospitals. Many of the PHOs in this study, however, had no plans of ever evolving into an HMO either because they had no interest in taking on that higher level of risk or, more often, because of the potentially negative impact this action would have on their existing relationships with other HMOs.

Governance: The Role of Physicians and the Hospital in PHO Policymaking

Inherent in the PHO concept is an assumption of shared physician/hospital decision making. Without exception, the PHOs in this study confirm that assumption, with physician and hospital representatives having an equal voice in each of the PHOs studied. Although the size of the PHO governing boards ranged from four to 16 members, each provided for an equal number of physician and hospital representatives.

Of the eight PHOs studied, two provided for community or business representation on the PHO board. These PHOs spoke favorably of the contribution that the community/business trustees have made to the success of the PHO.

"Super majority" voting provisions, which require certain matters to be approved by a majority of the physician representatives and a majority of the hospital representatives on the PHO board, provided safeguards to the physicians and the hospital by eliminating the possibility that one party could use the governance process to dominate the other.

PHOs handled the issue of board leadership in various ways, including alternating between a physician and a hospital board chair and providing for co-chairs (one physician and one hospital representative).

though separate from the hospital's in most cases and ostensibly geared to reflect market demand, usually involves similar procedures and criteria. In PHOs that have a physician organization, the PO typically has responsibility for credentialing, and physicians have to join the PO in order to be eligible to participate in the PHO. In PHOs without a PO, the PHO board establishes the credentialing criteria, but usually with physicians playing an exclusive or lead role in their development.

Most PHO representatives expressed the view that physician practice patterns will eventually become a more significant factor in the PHO credentialing—and especially recredentialing—process. Many saw this movement toward a more "closed" approach as being integral to the future success, and perhaps even viability, of PHOs.

Most PHOs that have been in operation for more than a few years are struggling with the issue of how to make the PHO more selective. As these PHOs move increasingly toward capitation, they anticipate having to face the challenge of narrowing their panel to a smaller, more cost-effective pool of physicians who can demonstrate the ability to meet higher utilization management criteria.

Most PHO representatives agreed that, even if they had wanted to begin with a more selective panel, it would have been very difficult to do so, because of the political sensitivities involved and because of the lack of reliable data on individual physician practice patterns.

The Role of Medical Management in PHOs

All of the PHOs in this study either had, or were in the process of implementing, a medical management program to assure appropriate levels of care and the provision of high quality, cost-effective services in both inpatient and outpatient settings. Most of the PHOs had implemented a broad range of utilization management protocols to evaluate medical necessity, including prospective, concurrent, and retrospective review and case management.

All of the PHOs were exploring ways to provide better incentives for primary care physicians to manage care cost-effectively; approximately half of the PHOs utilized a primary care gatekeeper approach.

Although most of the PHOs currently do not have the information systems capability to compile and analyze their own utilization data, they are actively involved in acquiring, compiling, and analyzing utilization data pertaining to each of their physicians. Typically this involves reviewing utilization data provided by the hospital and by insurance companies (so-called "report cards"), identifying physician outliers, and undertaking educational efforts to make medically appropriate modifications in physician practice patterns.

Another significant PHO medical management initiative involves the development and implementation of practice parameters, clinical pathways and, in a few cases, drug formularies.

Regardless of a PHO's specific medical management initiatives, a common theme that surfaced throughout the discussions with PHO representatives was the importance of, and key role played by, the PHO medical director. It was emphasized frequently that this critical position must be filled by a respected, knowledgeable, physician who can work effectively with both physicians and the hospital administration.

Conclusion

Can PHOs provide an organizational mechanism to meet the needs of patients, physicians, hospitals, business, and payers? If the PHO is properly organized, capitalized, governed, and administered, it can be effective in a variety of markets, including competitive, managed care settings. A PHO will not be effective, however, unless it is based on a keen understanding of the local market and is responsive to the needs of payers Developing a sound managed care strategy, based on an in-depth market analysis, is critical to the success of a PHO.

The PHO model, however, is only one of a number of possible alternatives which warrant consideration by physicians. Depending on a physician's specialty, age, goals, preferred practice style, financial resources, level of risk-tolerance, and geographic location, other models may be more or less attractive—and may be more or less effective in achieving that physician's goals—than the PHO. In short, determining the "right" strategy for an individual physician requires a careful assessment of the above factors, in light of that physician's current situation and long-range goals. If the PHO approach is pursued, careful attention to the lessons learned from other PHOs, including those in this study, hopefully will enhance the potential for that strategy to be successful.

Physicians join forces to address domestic violence

Washtenaw County

By Tracy A. Baker

Domestic violence. Brutal, physical acts against loved ones are now an everyday occurrence in this country. Physicians who treat victims of abuse can play a key role in stopping the vicious cycle of abuse. Tragically, signs of abuse are often overlooked by physicians who simply don't recognize them or don't think to look for them. In some instances, the physician recogizes the abuse but doesn't know how to pursue the issue with the victim or proper authorities.

That trend is changing, at least in Washtenaw County, thanks to the actions of the Washtenaw County Medical Society and its former president Rhoda M. Powsner, MD, who was instrumental in bringing violence issues to the fore.

"We adopted this topic as a project during my tenure," says Doctor Powsner, who served as WCMS president in 1992. "We started getting the word out to mobilize the community."

An early initiative was to meet with representatives from the Hennepin County Medical Society in Minnesota, which had done extensive research on the patterns in domestic violence cases.

The discussions were critical in helping Washtenaw County organize its anti-abuse efforts.

Safe house established

To more widely involve the community, WCMS actively supported a county-wide millage vote to establish a domestic violence "safe house." The millage passed and WCMS offered one of its board members to serve on the safe house board. Doctor Powsner's successor, Gene Ragland, MD, who served as WCMS president in 1993, joined the safe house board in 1993 where he continues to serve as a member.

The work of WCMS has really paid off in reaching physicians with information about domestic abuse. At the 1992 MSMS Annual Scientific Meeting a course was presented by Doctor Powsner.

"One of the best things about the session was that it was not a predominantly female audience," says Doctor Powsner. "There was a lot of give-and-take discussion on the topic, and a recognition among the physicians of their responsibility to do something."

The course was such a success that two additional courses were sponsored by the WCMS at the most recent MSMS Annual Scientific Meeting held in October 1993.

Doctor Ragland also continues to work on issues of violence, including the growing threats faced by health care personnel. This interest was prompted in part by the killing of John Kemink, MD, at the University of Michigan ENT clinic in 1992. His death, at the hands of a disturbed patient, deeply affected his peers in Washtenaw County.

"The doctor-patient relationship has radically changed in the past few years," Doctor Ragland has written. "We can no longer deny or ignore violence toward caregivers."

One reason for the success of WCMS initiatives to reach out to the community has been the variety of its membership. According to Sallie J. Schiel, WCMS executive director, the membership area extends from Ann Arbor to Ypsilanti to Saline and encompasses a wide variety of medical care settings. Facilities range in size from the University of Michigan hospitals to a variety of smaller hospitals.

According to Doctor Ragland, the diversity allows WCMS to "represent the cross section of physicians, with community, urban and rural health care; it's a real spectrum."

Michael Boucree, MD

Looking AIDS in the Eye

By Ralph D. Ward

AIDS. Beyond the discussion of social policy, medical research, discrimination and gay issues, one aspect of dealing with AIDS is rarely discussed. How well do our medical practitioners deal with AIDS patients? According to Michael Boucree, MD, Michigan's doctors are growing more sensitive to the needs of their AIDS patients, but still have a long way to go.

Doctor Boucree is on staff at Hurley Hospital, Flint, and is board president for Flint's Wellness HIV/AIDS Services Inc. He also is an active member of the MSMS AIDS Provider Education Task Force which oversees the 170-member HIV/AIDS Speaker's Bureau.

Doctor Boucree works extensively with AIDS patients, a calling he finds both liberating and, occasionally, limiting. "I may have lost some patients due to the AIDS work," he says. "One elderly lady said 'I love you dearly, and I think you're a good doctor, but I hear you treat AIDS patients.' She was scared. I reassured her, and she said 'that's all I needed to hear."

Doctor Boucree's interest in AIDS goes back to his student days. "I first read about it in 1981" when he was at Xavier University in New Orleans. His medical and resident training, which took him through Washington, DC, and ultimately to Flint, saw increasing exposure to AIDS patients. This close parallel between Doctor Boucree's growth as a physician and the national growth in awareness in AIDS contributes to his sensitivity on the issue. "It first struck when I was at the age where you're hungry for knowledge. Most diseases have a definitivism, where you learn everything there is to know about them in school. Maybe 30 years from now we'll know everything about AIDS, but I grew up with AIDS, and we learned about it as I learned to be a physician." Also, as do so many younger physicians, he saw AIDS directly affecting people of his own generation. "You just approach it differently when it's people in your own age group. It is my social contemporaries who are affected. I've had not only patients, but friends who have died."

Call it compassion, call it empathy, but this shift in attitude toward AIDS is becoming more common among state physicians, according to Doctor Boucree. "More practitioners are becoming sensitive to the issue, and seeing it as a problem that needs to be dealt with. They are getting better at collaborating with community agencies and the public health sector to deal with the issues. But this is still a small fraction [of physicians]."

Why are so many physicians wary of dealing with AIDS and its victims? The politics of AIDS is a factor, according to Doctor Boucree. "HIV is a very liberal and radical disease, not just in its properties, but in those affected. If this disease had established itself in middle class heterosexual whites, we would view it differently. If someone comes in [to the doctor's office] and says 'I'm HIV positive, I'm gay, I shoot up,' doctor's tend to think 'now what do I do?'

Physicians also must deal with a different treatment regimen in dealing with AIDS patients, according to Doctor Boucree. The relative newness of the disease, and the changing, uncertain courses of treatment mean that the patient could be more informed on AIDS treatment options than the practitioner. "Physicians are becoming more respectful of patients' desires for treatment. Doctors must come to terms with this self-advocacy. At one time they knew who was in control in this relationship, but now it's more of a partnership. There is a lot of AIDS information in the underground, so you have knowledgeable patients bringing in articles. We have to negotiate with a patient who says "Well, doctor, this is what I think."

Doctor Boucree, with his growing reputation as "the AIDS doctor," is proving a resource to other state physicians who may have trouble dealing both with the attitudes and prognoses of AIDS patients. "There is a certain fear, because we just don't know everything about this disease, and it's hard for a physician to confront that. They don't want to do something wrong, yet they're dealing with a disease that doesn't obey a predictable course. Older physicians tend to take a fatalistic and feudalistic attitude, but we're the young upstarts, looking death in the eye and saying 'you don't scare me.'"

Doris Ann Suciu, MD

A leader in the fight against domestic violence

By Ralph D. Ward

Domestic violence demands a caring response from the physician, and one state doctor has taken that mandate beyond the walls of her office to create a local nexus for supporting, helping and freeing the victims of spouse abuse. Doris Ann Suciu, MD, currently works for the General Motors medical department in Flint, but before joining GM in 1990 she had her own private internal medicine practice. A patient visit in 1983 first sparked her interest in domestic violence. "I had a woman come into my office, with all the symptoms of abuse -- raccoon black eyes and so on."

Seeking help for this woman, and subsequent abuse patients, gave Doctor Suciu a frustrating insight on the legal and shelter system operating in the Genesee County area. "In working with other parts of the system, I realized there were major gaps." The legal groundwork and public awareness of dealing with domestic assault was growing, but the legal/human service framework for coordinating responses was still sporadic and vague.

Doctor Suciu found some of the most serious flaws in the police response. "Since 1980 the police have been allowed to make arrests on the spot if they have probable cause to think an assault occurred, with no need to witness the assault. But by 1985, no one was using the law." Police follow up and support to assault victims was ineffective in other ways as well. "Women would just be told 'you need a lawyer.' Well, they didn't need one to do the cop's job." Doctor Suciu also found that law enforcement tended to steer victims toward civil remedies. "The victim could, in theory, file a civil suit, but I've never known anyone to do so. This was a crime being handled as a civil matter."

Another law that wasn't being enforced in 1985 called for notifying domestic violence victims of the resources available to them. The law called for victims to receive a written list, but since there wasn't any written list, no one was getting the information. Written policies were needed for law enforcement response to domestic calls, standardized forms were needed to assure that crucial information was recorded, but few existed. Law enforcement personnel who responded to domestic calls weren't even properly identifying themselves. "One victim wanted to follow through with assault charges. But the responding authorities never left her information on how to contact them. She didn't know what jurisdiction she was in, and couldn't remember if they had been city, township or county police. We spent almost a month trying to find out who had responded." The victim would too often find herself dealing with a confusing, uncaring paper chase that left her even more vulnerable than she had been. "I tell victims 'you think your husband beat you, wait till you get involved in this system,'" recalls Doctor Suciu.

In 1985 Doctor Suciu, with several other concerned community leaders, decided to take action by forming the Genesee County Community Coalition Against Domestic Violence. The group, which has since streamlined its name to the Domestic Violence Coalition, works to support the efforts of area law enforcement, shelters, and community health groups in responding to domestic violence. "We work with law enforcement to help them develop and use standardized reporting forms and response policies." By forging the area's police, social and health care organizations into a coalition to deal with domestic violence, all are "reading from the same script," and victims find a more welcoming, helpful environment.

The work of Doctor Suciu and the Domestic Violence Coalition, which she currently co-chairs, has not gone unnoticed. Last October the State Bar of Michigan presented Doctor Suciu with its 1993 Liberty Bell Award. This award is presented annually to a state leader from outside the legal profession who has helped strengthen the effectiveness of the American legal system.

Doctor Suciu finds state physicians concerned on the issue of domestic violence, but still often uneasy with the topic. "Doctors do have some ethical questions on this," she says on the matter of reporting suspected abuse. "They have to wonder if they are crossing the ethical line, and violating a trust." She urges doctors to learn sensitive listening skills, and to ask such questions as "do you feel safe at home?" "Doctors must learn to listen."

Doctor Suciu is also an active member of the MSMS Task Force on Family Violence.

Receive AMA/Glaxo Achievement Awards

By Ralph D. Ward

Lynn Bergquist

Lynn L. Chen

Leadership, dedication, and community spirit are qualities a physician should exhibit early in his or her career. If these assets are a part of the young student's or resident's personality, the physician, patients and the community as a whole benefit.

The AMA/Glaxo Achievement Award is a nationwide program to recognize those future physicians who best display these qualities. It is presented to medical students and residents who exhibit outstanding leadership in organized medicine, civic or nonclinical medical school, or hospital activities. Those selected receive a financial grant for further study, as well as an opportunity to further develop their leadership skills through participation in the AMA's National Leadership Conference. Among the 25 medical students recognized for 1994 were two from Michigan. Both exemplify Michigan's reputation as a center for breeding physician excellence.

Lynn Bergquist is a fourth-year medical student at Wayne State University, yet has already accumulated a busy resume' with the American Medical Association. She has served as an alternate delegate to the House of Delegates, one of only 11 students nationally to be selected. In the student section she has served as a national delegate for two years. Statewide, she has served as the chair of MSMS Medical Student Section, the first woman to hold this position. Bergquist completed her undergraduate work at the University of Michigan, where she completed a dual major in neural biology and psychiatry. Her residency will be at the University of Minnesota, and her eventual goal is to work in public health policy.

Indeed, public health has been an important part of Bergquist's life already. While at Wayne State, she started a local Teen Pregnancy Education Program in which medical student volunteers work with, educate and empower Detroit area pregnant teens. "I had an interest in prenatal health care, and did some research on low birth weight babies," says Bergquist. The program is being picked up on a national basis. Bergquist also directs a Student Mentor Program that pairs student volunteers with inner city youth to provide role models and to nurture conflict resolution skills. "Physicians can't afford not to be involved in the community," says Bergquist. "It's more important to be involved than to get an A on a biochemistry test."

This mix of involvement and medical excellence also distinguishes Michigan's other Glaxo/AMA medical student recipient, Lynn L. Chen. Chen is a second-year medical student at the University of Michigan, where she is part of the school's seven-year integrated medical program. She has been very active at the U of M, serving on the student council for the past two years as representative to the school's premedical program, and as coordinator of the school Career Seminar Specialty series. Her MSMS involvement involves serving as the Medical Student Section Governing Board vice chair. She is in charge of legislative affairs and communications for the U of M chapter. Chen was just elected as the Washtenaw County Medical Society's Student Representative for 1995.

Chen's health care interests go beyond the state area, however. She has been recognized as a presidential scholar, and has served as advisor to the White House Commission on Presidential Scholars. She also organized National Health Policy Forums at the U of M.

"I was very surprised about the award," says Chen. "Meeting with the other students was impressive; this is a real honor." Chen sees "working with people" as one of the motivators in her budding medical career. "People are the focus of my life; medicine put me in a unique position to help." Her future plans remain uncertain, but she "plans to continue taking a leadership role." One major career goal: "to be the best doctor I can be."

YOCON®
YOHIMBINE HCl

Description: Yohimbine is a 3a-15a-20B-17a-hydroxy Yohimbine-16a-carboxylic acid methyl ester. The alkaloid is found in Rubaceae and related trees. Also in Rauwolfia Serpentina (L) Benth. Yohimbine is an indolalkylamine alkaloid with chemical similarity to reserpine. It is a crystalline powder, odorless. Each compressed tablet contains (1/12 gr.) 5.4 mg of Yohimbine Hydrochloride.

Action: Yohimbine blocks presynaptic alpha-2 adrenergic receptors. Its action on peripheral blood vessels resembles that of reserpine, though it is weaker and of short duration. Yohimbine's peripheral autonomic nervous system effect is to increase parasympathetic (cholinergic) and decrease sympathetic (adrenergic) activity. It is to be noted that in male sexual performance, erection is linked to cholinergic activity and to alpha-2 adrenergic blockade which may theoretically result in increased penile inflow, decreased penile outflow or both.

Yohimbine exerts a stimulating action on the mood and may increase anxiety. Such actions have not been adequately studied or related to dosage although they appear to require high doses of the drug. Yohimbine has a mild anti-diuretic action, probably via stimulation of hypothalmic centers and release of posterior pituitary hormone.

Reportedly, Yohimbine exerts no significant influence on cardiac stimulation and other effects mediated by B-adrenergic receptors, its effect on blood pressure, if any, would be to lower it; however no adequate studies are at hand to quantitate this effect in terms of Yohimbine dosage.

Indications: Yocon® is indicated as a sympathicolytic and mydriatric. It may have activity as an aphrodisiac.

Contraindications: Renal diseases, and patient's sensitive to the drug. In view of the limited and inadequate information at hand, no precise tabulation can be offered of additional contraindications.

Warning: Generally, this drug is not proposed for use in females and certainly must not be used during pregnancy. Neither is this drug proposed for use in pediatric, geriatric or cardio-renal patients with gastric or duodenal ulcer history. Nor should it be used in conjunction with mood-modifying drugs such as antidepressants, or in psychiatric patients in general.

Adverse Reactions: Yohimbine readily penetrates the (CNS) and produces a complex pattern of responses in lower doses than required to produce peripheral a-adrenergic blockade. These include, anti-diuresis, a general picture of central excitation including elevation of blood pressure and heart rate, increased motor activity, irritability and tremor. Sweating, nausea and vomiting are common after parenteral administration of the drug.[1,2] Also dizziness, headache, skin flushing reported when used orally.[1,3]

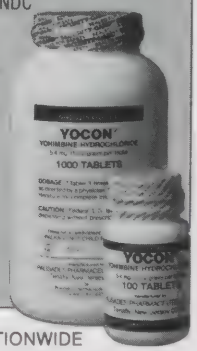

Dosage and Administration: Experimental dosage reported in treatment of erectile impotence.[1,3,4] 1 tablet (5.4 mg) 3 times a day, to adult males taken orally. Occasional side effects reported with this dosage are nausea, dizziness or nervousness. In the event of side effects dosage to be reduced to ½ tablet 3 times a day, followed by gradual increases to 1 tablet 3 times a day. Reported therapy not more than 10 weeks.[3]

How Supplied: Oral tablets of Yocon® 1/12 gr. 5.4 mg in bottles of 100's NDC 53159-001-01 and 1000's NDC 53159-001-10.

Help The Elderly Eat Right!

New Research Supports Need For Beef In Diets Of The Elderly

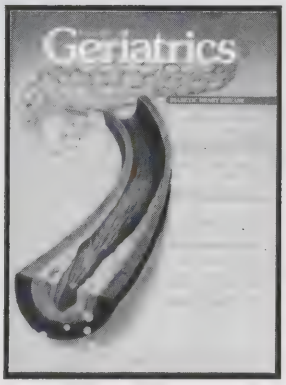

The fastest growing population segment in the United States is comprised of people over the age of 65. If the members of this expanding consumer group are to enjoy good health, they must also enjoy good nutrition.

Two recent research projects verify the important role that beef plays in the diets of elderly Americans. The first research project, conducted at the University of California, found that older women who ate more red meat had better zinc status. A related study, conducted at Johns Hopkins University, revealed that zinc increases immunity in cells and can support the immunity needs of older adults.

"Beef contains vital nutrients such as iron and zinc," explains Christine Palumbo, R.D., consultant in nutrition communications. "Zinc is involved in the immune process. Especially susceptible to illness and disease, members the elderly population need enhanced immune systems to fight back."

How To Know If Your Older Patients Are Getting Enough Zinc

An article in the October 1993 edition of Geriatrics magazine, "How To Make Sure Your Older Patients are Getting Enough Zinc," by Joseph M. Keenan, M.D. and Diane H. Morris, Ph.D., R.D., provides important insight for healthcare professionals. The article explains the importance of zinc for healthy function and identifies foods high in zinc content. According to the authors, "Oysters are the highest source of zinc, but beef is the single most important source of zinc in the U.S. food supply."

THE JAMES...THE NEXT GENERATION OF HOPE

OUR AREA OF EXPERTISE COVERS A LOT OF GROUND.

Cancer crosses all cultures and all nationalities without exception. So it stands to reason that the treatment and eventual cure of a condition experienced worldwide would require talent and intellect from around the globe.

That's why the planners of The Arthur G. James Cancer Hospital and Research Institute, a National Cancer Institute designated Comprehensive Cancer Center, set out to staff this promising medical center with the top researchers in their field, wherever they might be found. Their search resulted in a respected team of renowned specialists from all around the world.

However, this search would never have been successful without a highly attractive institution. Designed to provide the optimum environment for the development and application of effective cancer treatments, The James houses remarkable research facilities within the same building as an equally excellent treatment center. Because the organization's approach to research is so integrated, the lag time between laboratory breakthroughs and practical application is dramatically decreased. Collaboration between research teams and clinical specialists of the Comprehensive Cancer Center, which are composed of University graduate programs in chemistry, biological sciences, pharmacy and veterinary medicine, has enabled research efforts to advance efficiently while benefiting from the resources of one of the nation's leading University medical programs.

Beginning with the very first blueprints, The James was designed to provide researchers with the facilities, technology and opportunity to conduct their best work. Today, it is a reality that is dedicated to offering hope to the current generation of cancer patients as well as the promise of eradication to those in the future.

THE EPIDEMIC OF VIOLENCE

Physicians can play a key role in helping stop domestic violence

Violence, and what can be done to reduce its frequency, is on everyones' minds these days. A public opinion poll conducted by The New York Times and CBS News late last year found crime and violence deadlocking with unemployment, jobs, the economy and health care as the most important problem facing the country.

Recognizing the key role physicians can play in helping curb domestic violence, MSMS, in conjunction with the AMA, has been taking part in an educational campaign to increase physician and public awareness of family violence since the fall of 1992. This month's cover story highlights the many activities and accomplishments of MSMS in its anti-violence efforts. Also included are: a look at future MSMS anti-violence plans; a report from the MSMS Department of Medical Economics and Health Care Delivery on the growing incidents of violence; a report on the MSMS Alliance and its plans to help educate youth about the dangers of guns; and a report from the AMA on its plans to form a national coalition of groups representing medicine and law to fight family violence. Rounding out the cover story is a review of the ethical considerations of treating victims of domestic violence.

MSMS a major player in national crusade against violence

By Judy Marr

On a sunny winter day in early March, MSMS President Gilbert B. Bluhm, MD, stood before several hundred Grand Rapids sixth and seventh graders urging them to think before they act, hoping his message would help them avoid violent confrontations.

On several occasions since he began his MSMS presidential term two years ago, Thomas C. Payne, MD, has been moved as women -- physicians and physicians' wives among them -- came forward from audiences he addressed to admit tearfully that they'd been victims of domestic violence. He has been heartened to hear their thank-yous for his efforts to lead the medical society in a campaign to address those problems.

These are among the experiences in the past two years since MSMS presidents Payne and Bluhm joined the AMA in a national crusade to increase awareness of violence and to try to lessen its impact. The crusade has been aimed primarily at physicians and other health care professionals. But it also has reached the public with its message that health care professionals are people victims of violence can turn to for comfort, support and help.

"I have never been involved in a single MSMS project that has earned MSMS such good public notice," says Doctor Payne. Doctor Bluhm saw a reward in the shining smiles and gratitude of those Grand Rapids middle school teachers and administrators who thanked him for the support of a fellow professional in their never-ending struggle to teach safe and healthy life choices to their charges.

"MSMS anti-violence efforts have won the medical society new members and the praise, also, of social services and law enforcement professionals who have long worked in victim support services."

MSMS anti-violence efforts have won the medical society new members and the praise, also, of social services and law enforcement professionals who have long worked in victim support services. Over and over, Doctors Bluhm and Payne have heard the gratified remark, "Now that physicians are involved in an organized way, we know good things will happen."

Campaign Benchmarks

Benchmarks of the MSMS anti-violence campaign have included:

- A 70-page reference guide for health care professionals published in October, containing protocols for recognizing and treating victims of domestic abuse, a summary of current domestic violence laws in Michigan, and a list of shelters for abused women and children. Nearly all of the 3,000 guides published have been distributed or sold, and MSMS is considering a second printing.
- Five Annual Scientific Meeting courses on medical/legal aspects of child, domestic and elder abuse.
- Two statewide conferences on aspects of domestic abuse, including establishment of hospital-based programs to serve abuse victims and to meet JCAHO requirements for such hospital services.
- The MSMS Forum on Family Violence, a consortium of 50 Michigan organizations representing health care, law enforcement, social services and the judiciary. The Forum has convened four times since August 1992.
- The MSMS Task Force on Family Violence, a committee of 20 physicians and four advisors formed to lead MSMS efforts indefinitely.
- Sign-up of 250 Michigan physicians and other interested professionals in the AMA National Coalition of Physicians Against Family Violence, an information network through which participants receive protocols for recognizing and treating victims of child, child sexual, physical, domestic and elder abuse.
- Distribution of videotapes and instruction manuals to all Michigan public middle schools and interscholastic organizations, spreading the innovative and compelling messages of the Detroit-based "City for Youth" project designed to help youngsters make healthy life decisions.

Doctor Bluhm has now involved the AMA in support of the "City for Youth" project, at the same time the project's originator at Channel 56, WTVS-Detroit, has attracted the attention and support of national public television and its esteemed documentarian, Bill Moyers.

MSMS efforts to lessen the incidence of violence and to educate professionals to serve the victims of violence will continue (see sidebar).

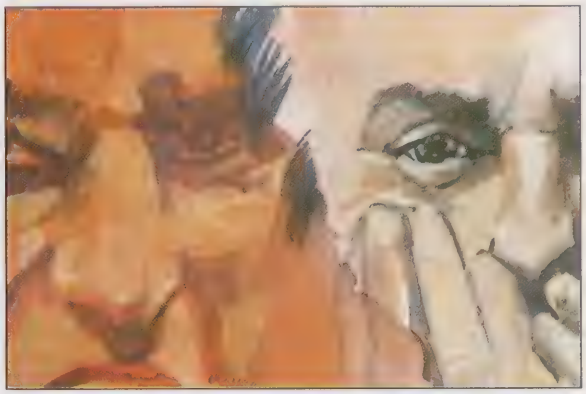

MSMS members who would like further information on MSMS anti-violence projects may contact Doctors Bluhm and Payne or call Judy Marr at MSMS headquarters, 517/336-5744.

Judy Marr is manager, MSMS Department of Communications and Professional Relations.

What's ahead for MSMS anti-violence projects

Future MSMS plans include:

- Support of a package of bills moving through the Michigan legislature which will considerably strengthen anti-violence laws.
- Publication of a reference guide to elder abuse similar to the October 1993 issues on domestic violence.
- Join projects with the State Bar and Michigan Judges Associations to streamline the court system and to train health care professionals called to testify in abuse cases.
- Continued coverage of new information for MSMS members through MSMS publications.
- Broadening of the focus of the MSMS Task Force to look at all aspects of violence in streets and schools as well as in the home. MSMS past-presidents Bluhm and Payne will share in the leadership of the Task Force as it continues to help children, youth and adults to live safer, healthier lives.

VIOLENCE IN THE UNITED STATES: The impact on society and the health care system

Editor's Note: The following information has been compiled by the MSMS Department of Medical Economics and Health Care Delivery.

Violence, and efforts to reduce its frequency, have become the number one US concern. American citizens are increasingly aware of daily acts of violence throughout the country. A November 1993 New York Times/CBS News survey of American public opinion found crime and violence deadlocking with unemployment, jobs, the economy and health care as the most important problem facing the country. The Center for Disease Control and Prevention, in its October 15 "Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report," indicates "that violent behaviors and weapon-carrying among youth are substantial problems in both school and community settings." Issues of violence are important components in the national public health and education targets for the year 2000.

An important public health problem

The incidence of violence and abusive behaviors has been increasingly recognized as an important public health problem because of its growing prominence as a source of health problems and health care expenditures experienced by Americans. Violence is the intentional use of physical force to inflict harm upon oneself or another and encompasses family violence (child, spousal, and elderly abuse and neglect). Specific acts of violence not only severely affect physical health but also emotional well-being. Injuries resulting from violence exact a heavy economic toll, both in direct medical costs and in foregone job productivity. Hospitals also encounter difficulties because many victims of violence who are admitted are uninsured and, in some locations, account for a significant portion of uncompensated care. These crime victims often require specialized, technology-intensive care.

- Over 500,000 emergency room visits are due to violent injury.
- Total medical expenditures for firearm injuries are estimated at one billion dollars per year.
- Fatal assaults in the United States added $210 million in direct medical costs in 1985.
- Each year between 1979 and 1986 more than 2.2 million suffered non-fatal injuries from violence, of which one million received medical care and 500,000 were treated at emergency medical facilities.
- In 1985, the direct medical costs of all violent injuries added $5.3 billion to the United States health expenditures.
- The total lifetime cost of injuries which occurred in 1985 include $45 billion of direct costs, most of which are medical costs.
- More than 25 percent of the 10,000 to 15,000 spinal cord injuries each year in the United States are the result of assaultive violence.
- The July 12, 1993 issue of The Detroit News reported that homicide rates among Detroit's teenagers were up 48 percent in the first six months of the year, while overall slayings in the city appear to be declining. "It's gone past the point of being a blip in statistics," said Carl Taylor, professor of criminology at Grand Valley State University, in a News quote. "Violence has become ingrained in the mental state of youth today."

A $2 million bullet

An editorial in the February 1994 issue of Money magazine gave a chilling account of how much damage one violent act can do to a family and to society as a whole. David Johnstone, a book editor on a business trip in San Francisco, was shot by teenage boys trying to hold him up, using a .38 revolver with a hollow-point bullet. Johnstone was paralyzed from the waist down. That act incurred the following expenses: $65,017 for hospital bills; $46,000 per year for Social Security benefits to the family; $525,000 in insurance policies; $22,000 in contributions by coworkers for a college fund for Johnstone's children; more than $18,000 for the police investigation; $15,000 for the juvenile sentencing hearing; $200,000 to keep two of the attackers in jail; $1,000,000 in economic loss of the 20-plus productive years Johnstone had ahead of him. In total, that one bullet cost more than $2 million dollars, not to mention the emotional trauma the family will continue to suffer.

The Journal of the American Medical Association reported in June 1992 that approximately 200 million firearms are owned by private citizens in the United States, and that an estimated two to three million are assault weapons. The study also estimated that total direct costs due to firearm injuries are more than one billion dollars per year.

A strain on the medical system

From domestic violence to drive-by shootings, these acts are straining the medical system, not to mention the damage done to families, children, and the way people behave. During one 24-hour period in October of 1991, a sample of 46 Michigan hospitals' emergency departments tallied 3,660 patients. Of this sample about five percent were victims of violence: 3.6 percent were personal assault victims, 0.8 percent were drug overdose victims, 0.7 percent were gunshot wound victims, 0.5 percent were sexual assault victims, and 0.3 percent were stab wound victims.

References for this article are available upon request from MSMS. Information included in this report is current as of March 1994.

A look at domestic violence

An estimated three to four million American women are battered each year by their husbands or partners. Estimates from the National Crime Survey put the annual medical cost of domestic violence at almost 100,000 days of hospitalization, 30,000 emergency room visits, and 40,000 physician visits each year. The following statistics illustrate how serious a problem violence against women is in the United States and in Michigan.

- Approximately 95 percent of the victims of domestic violence are women.
- Research suggests that wife-beating results in more injuries that require medical treatment than rape, auto accidents, and muggings combined.
- Abused women comprise approximately 20 percent of those women seeking emergency treatment.
- Violence will occur at least once in two-thirds of all marriages.
- The FBI reports that 30 percent of female homicide victims are killed by their husbands or boyfriends. Six percent of male homicide victims are killed by their wives or girlfriends.
- There is a domestic homicide/manslaughter every five days in Michigan.

MSMS Alliance awarded grant to help educate youth about the dangers of guns

The MSMS Alliance recently received a three-way partnership grant totaling $10,000 for the development of videos designed to educate young people about the dangers of guns. The grant, made in partnership with Metro Health Foundation, the Michigan Health Care Education and Research Foundation (MHCERF) and Blue Cross Blue Shield of Michigan, will be used to produce three five-minute videos for showing in hospital emergency waiting rooms, doctor's offices and health clinics.

"These community volunteers and community leaders have agreed to take on this leadership, relationships, commitment and talents to work on a solution to this problem," said Ira Stumwasser, PhD, MHCERF executive director. "Their work will be worthwhile and our money well spent."

MSMS-A will work with public broadcasting television station WTVS Channel 56 in Detroit to produce the videos.

AMA spearheads domestic-abuse coalition

Editor's Note: The following article appeared in the April 4, 1994, issue of AM News and is reprinted with the permission of the editor.

For the first time, a concerted effort is being made to form a national coalition of groups representing medicine and law to fight family violence.

The effort, led by the American Medical Association and likely to include Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, is an outgrowth of a recent AMA-sponsored national conference. The goal is a more unified response to the growing problem of domestic abuse.

The composition of the group and other details are still to be determined. AMA officials said formation of the coalition would be the focus of an executive committee, which will meet shortly to review recommendations developed by conference participants.

The three-day meeting in March, which brought together physicians, judges, lawyers, social workers and others, was an unprecedented display of concern about the escalating tide of family violence in the United States.

It was funded by several private and public agencies, including the CDC, National Institute of Justice and

Teens drowning in a sea of violence

A new Gallup survey asked a national cross-section of 518 teens, age 13 to 17, about violence involving friends in the past year. 66 percent had a 'best friend' who'd been physically harmed; 21 percent sexually assaulted. Sixty-three percent reported assaults on friends by other teens.*

Types of violence

Hit or beaten by someone their own age	49 %
Hit or beaten by an older teen	42 %
Attacked by a gang	26 %
Hurt by parent or other adult in household	26 %
Attacked with a knife or gun	21 %
Sexually fondled at school against their will	13 %
Hit by a teach or principal	10 %
Raped	9 %
Sexually abused in the household	6 %

Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, and it attracted government heavyweights, such as Health Secretary Donna E. Shalala, PhD, Surgeon General Joycelyn Elders, MD, and Attorney General Janet Reno.

But it was the more than 400 participants at the invitational conference who rolled up their sleeves and developed 17 pages of concrete proposals to improve collaboration between the public health and criminal justice systems, including recommendations for community, state and national initiatives to combat violence in the home.

"This conference is one of the first times that the American Medical Association and American Bar Association have come together in a national forum in shared concern about a common problem," said AMA President-elect Robert E. McAfee, MD. "The enthusiasm of the participants, the eagerness of the work groups and their plentiful recommendations demand that we continue this activity nationally, but more important, that they be implemented locally as soon as possible."

The buzz word was empowerment: giving individuals and communities the resources to find their own answers to family violence.

"Family violence has become as American as guns on our streets and murders in our movies," she said. "It affects all Americans, regardless of background...Violence is a sickness which is plaguing our entire society."

"We have to begin to educate our young people and their parents," Doctor Elders told the group. "The government has an appropriate role in making sure people have the right kind of information. [But] individuals have to assume a certain amount of responsibility. Part of that responsibility comes from education, because once you're educated you can empower yourself to do something about it."

Other pieces of the puzzle include stricter gun control, improved access to substance-abuse treatment, and a reduction in violence on TV and in the movies, many participants said.

"Unless we do something about violence in the home, we will never be able to do something about violence on the streets and in the schools," Reno said. "It's not just a public health or criminal justice problem or a problem of educators. It's everybody's problem, and we are all in this together."

Behind closed doors

Each year in the United States:

- Two million children are abused; 2,000 die.
- Up to four million women are abused.
- At least six percent of pregnant women about 240,000, are battered by spouses or partners.
- Domestic abuse is the leading cause of injury to women, responsible for 20 percent to 30 percent of visits by women to emergency departments.
- Six of 10 women murdered are killed by someone they know, about half by spouses or intimate acquaintances.
- An estimated 900,000 older Americans are abused by a family member, usually one of their children.
- The nation spends $13.5 billion on health care related to violent crime.

Living in fear

The urgency of addressing family violence was underscored in a Gallup Youth Survey on violence and teens, a portion of which was released at a pre-meeting news conference.

Two-thirds of teens reported that best friends had been physically harmed during the past year. One in five said a friend had been sexually assaulted.

One in four said a friend had been hit or physically harmed by a parent or another adult in the household.

"What's lost in the statistics is that young people are frightened," said Leonard E. Lawrence, MD, president of the National Medical Association, the nation's largest black physicians group. "And a lot of young people retreat into violence because of those fears."

AMA trustee Palma E. Formica, MD, recounted the experience of one of her patients, "Mary," who sought help from police and others to escape her husband's physical and psychological abuse. She got a job and legal advice. But none of that saved her when her husband followed her to her new apartment and fatally shot her.

"She said she didn't think the abuse could get any worse," Doctor Formica said. "And I remember telling her: 'The law is 12 feet tall. You'll be OK.'" Several weeks later, Mary was dead.

"We must all work together to make sure that, in the future, people like Mary have the medical, legal and social support so they can make it out of their crisis alive," Doctor Formica said.

Administration commitment

Doctor Shalala promised to call for new legislation and help find additional resources. She said the Clinton Administration already had allocated more funds to the CDC for epidemiological surveillance and data collection. And last year, Congress passed a $1 billion Family Preservation and Support Initiative, which addresses unemployment, poor housing, inadequate parenting skills and the shortage of day care, areas in which improvements would help strengthen families, she said.

In addition, the Senate-passed version of the crime bill includes the Violence Against Women Act, which would authorize $1.8 billion over five years to aid police, prosecutors, women's shelters and community prevention programs, Doctor Shalala said. It will also create a national hot line for victims of domestic violence.

"Family violence has become as American as guns on our streets and murders in our movies," she said. "It affects all Americans, regardless of background...Violence is a sickness which is plaguing our entire society."

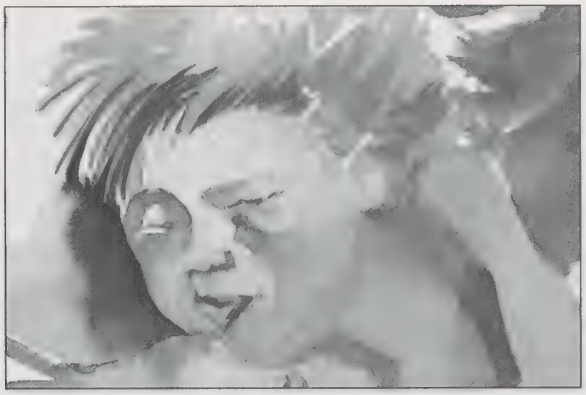

"As we conclude, my enthusiasm is even greater than when we started," Doctor McAfee said. "We have to go back and create coalitions at the local level that can best address the problems."

Taking aim

Participants at the AMA's family violence conference called for:

- Intervention systems that link medicine, criminal justice, mental health, social service and education.
- Mandatory cross-disciplinary training for all professionals.
- Establishment of a National Coalition for Social Responsibility on Media Violence.
- Early universal screening that's sensitive to racial, cultural and socioeconomic factors.
- Community-based and control-led prevention programs that undergo rigorous scientific evaluation.
- Formation of multidisciplinary coordinating councils to monitor local services and interventions.
- Comprehensive violence-prevention education beginning in the preschool years.
- A ban on assault weapons, strict control of the manufacture and sale of firearms and ammunition, and mandatory licensing and training of firearms owners.

Physicians and domestic violence ethical considerations

Editor's note: Following are excerpts of a report which appeared in the June 17, 1992 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The medical ethical principle of beneficence requires physicians to intervene in cases of domestic violence. Some may argue that physicians' ethical obligations to patients who are battered are limited to treating the bodily manifestations—injuries and other symptoms. In doing more, physicians will step out of their medical role. However, in their book on beneficence, noted bioethicists Edmund Pellegrino and David Thomasma describe physicians' duties as going beyond simply addressing the physical injury or disease of their patients:

The aim of medicine is to address not only the bodily assault that disease or an injury inflicts but also the psychological, social, even spiritual dimensions of this assault. To heal is to make whole or sound, to help a person reconvene the powers of the self and return, as far as possible, to his (or her) conception of normal life.

Treating only the injuries and symptoms of abuse will not address the ongoing family violence that is at the root of its victims' health problems. When physicians do not diagnose abuse, it is most likely to continue and will often escalate. One study found that approximately one in five battered women presenting physicians had sought medical attention for injuries from abuse 11 times previously.

The ethical principle of nonmaleficence—do no harm—also directs physicians to diagnose domestic violence. When a diagnosis of abuse is missed, treatment is likely to be inappropriate and potentially harmful. For example, it has been documented that physicians often prescribe medications for battered women, usually pain medications or mild tranquilizers, which are contraindicated for abuse victims because they are at an increased risk for suicide and drug or alcohol abuse. Further, such drugs may hamper the victim's alertness, making her more vulnerable to assault.

Failing to diagnose abuse may also further the victim's sense of entrapment and thereby contribute to victimization. Often when battered women seek help from others including the police, health care providers, friends, and family, they are met with denials of the seriousness of the abuse. Victims also often encounter blame, misinformed advice, and punitive responses when they seek help. Inability to find help often causes victims to feel that there is no escape from the violence. These feelings of helplessness and entrapment are associated with psychosocial problems caused by abuse. When physicians disregard signs of abuse, they contribute to the victims' sense of entrapment and further their patients' health risks.

Physicians are particularly well situated to intervene in cases of domestic violence because persons who are in violent relationships often visit physicians for injuries and other symptoms related to their abuse. Between 22 percent to 35 percent of women presenting with complaints in emergency departments are suffering from injuries or symptoms caused by ongoing abuse. Battered women also often visit primary care physicians for a variety of medical complaints, such as abdominal pains, headaches, and sleep disorders. Twenty-five percent of female emergency psychiatric patients are battered by a male partner, and up to 64 percent of female psychiatric inpatients are abused as adults. Physicians who specialize in gynecology and obstetrics are also likely to come into contact with battered women. Pregnancy in particular appears to a high risk factor for abuse.

Although the solutions to domestic violence extend into social, legal, and political realms, in which physicians may have limited influence, physicians can provide a number of important interventions. Currently, the American Medical Association is developing protocols for the detection and management of domestic violence. (These protocals have been developed and are now available to physicians through MSMS.) Probably the most important contribution physicians can make to ending abuse and protecting the health of its victims is to identify and acknowledge the abuse. Identifying domestic violence can initiate the process by which people may get the necessary assistance to find safety. Other primary responsibilities include providing sensitive support, clearly documenting the abuse, providing information about options and resources, and, with the patient's consent, making necessary referrals. Physicians must also facilitate an assessment of the level of danger faced at home. When danger is present, physicians must participate in efforts to secure a safe place, including offering hospitalization, if necessary, for patients when there are no available shelters.

Physician's failure to diagnose and treat family violence

A number of studies have shown that physicians often fail to diagnose abuse when signs and symptoms are present. In one study, emergency department physicians identified one in 35 of their female patients as battered, while a review of the medical charts indicated that in fact, one in four were likely to have been battered. Another study found that physicians' diagnoses correctly indicated spouse abuse in only 8 percent of the cases in which explicit information about abuse (eg, patient statements about abuse) or very strong indications of abuse were recorded in the medical chart. As the author of the study noted, "physicians in other clinical situations would not discharge a patient from the emergency room with a potentially life-threatening condition." Not surprisingly, in a survey that asked 1,000 abused women to rate the effectiveness of various professionals in addressing their abuse, health care professionals had the lowest rating, ranking behind battered women's shelters, lawyers, social service workers, police, and clergy.

Barriers to diagnosing and treating family violence

Lack of knowledge and training. One barrier to detecting and treating family violence is a lack of knowledge and training. For example, physicians are usually not trained to recognize and correctly interpret behaviors associated with spouse abuse. As a result of their abuse, battered women often make frequent visits to their doctor or an emergency department for complaints or symptoms that do not appear to have an organic basis. Physicians often respond by judging the patient to be neurotic. In a review of physicians' records, researchers found statements labeling women as "neurotic," hysterical," "a crock," and "a hypochondriac" significantly more frequently when the patient was at risk for abuse than not.

Societal misconceptions. Physicians share a number of pervasive societal misconceptions about domestic violence that undermine the medical response to battering. The most harmful of these misconceptions include the following: (1) domestic violence is rare; (2) violence does not occur in relationships that appear "normal"; (3) domestic violence is a private matter that should be resolved without outside intervention; and (4) battered women are responsible for their abuse.

Lack of resources for victims of abuse. One of the primary aims when treating victims of family violence is to help bring victims into contact with resources such as shelters, social services, legal assistance, and support groups. However, often such resources are limited or are not available.

As part of a grassroots movement, battered women's shelters have greatly expanded in number over the last two decades. Shelters often provide and coordinate numerous services for battered women and their children, including child care, legal advocacy, job training, welfare services, support groups, and counseling. However, battered women's programs do not exist in many areas. The services that do exist are generally poorly funded. Battered women's shelters are almost always filled to capacity and, as a result, must turn many women away.

Special Ethical Considerations

Confidentiality

In opinion 5.05, the Council on Ethical and Judicial Affairs states that physicians have an ethical obligation to maintain patient confidentiality. Confidentiality is necessary so that patients feel free to make full disclosure of relevant information about their health.

When a patient is subject to domestic violence, the need for patient trust in the physician is especially important since patients may feel embarrassed, ashamed, or afraid to reveal that they have been battered. Furthermore, the safety of the patient may be jeopardized if the physician discloses a diagnosis of abuse to the patient's spouse or partner. Therefore, abuse must be discussed with the patient in privacy and safety. Spouses, partners, or other third parties, including police, should not be notified of an abuse diagnosis without expressed consent of the patient. When physicians are required to report serious assaults or injuries inflicted by weapons, they should discuss their legal obligations with the patient, explain the reporting, investigation, and follow-up procedures that may follow, and address directly the risk of reprisal and the possible need for shelter.

Almost every state requires physicians to report suspected child and elder abuse and neglect to local protective services or law enforcement authorities. It is not evident, however, that mandatory reporting of domestic violence would contribute to the safety of battered women or facilitate their access to appropriate resources. In fact, few states have mechanisms for reporting domestic violence to protective services. A more appropriate alternative to mandatory reporting for domestic violence would be to expand and increase funding for resource options for battered women and their children, including shelters and safe homes.

When a patient subjected to domestic violence is legally a minor, physicians are required in every state to report the abuse to their local child-abuse protective services. Similarly, depending on the particular state statute, if the victim is an elderly person or is disabled, physicians may be required to report the abuse under elder-abuse or abuse-of-the-disabled statutes.

Informed consent

Informed consent for all nonemergency medical interventions must be obtained from competent adult victims of abuse, similar to any other adult patients. Interventions include taking photographs or roentgenograms of injuries or arranging referrals to the appropriate agency. It is important to encourage patients to consent to specific interventions and to give assurances of safety and confidentiality. However, no intervention should be forced on an unwilling patient. Overriding a patient's refusal violates the ethical principle of respect for patient autonomy. In the case of domestic violence, it also further disempowers the patient. Therefore, respecting the choices of persons who have been abused is also important for therapeutic reasons.

Conclusion

- Due to the prevalence and medical consequences of domestic violence, physicians should routinely inquire about abuse as part of the medical history. Physicians must also consider battering in the differential diagnosis for a number of medical complaints, particularly when treating women.
- Physicians who are likely to have the opportunity to detect abuse in the course of their work have an obligation to familiarize themselves with protocols for diagnosing and treating domestic violence and with community resources for battered women and their children.
- Physicians also have a duty to be aware of societal misconceptions about domestic violence and prevent these from affecting the diagnosis and management of abuse. Such misconceptions include the belief that abuse is a rare occurrence; that domestic violence does not occur in "normal" relationships; that domestic violence is a private problem best resolved without outside interference; and that victims are responsible for the abuse.

- The medical profession must demonstrate a greater commitment to ending domestic violence and helping its victims. Medical societies should work collaboratively with established services for those who are abused. Physicians must participate in community-wide efforts to establish and strengthen resources for victims and abusers. In particular, shelters and safe homes for battered women and their children must be expanded and better funded. Law enforcement reforms that would ensure greater enforcement of protection orders should be advocated. There should be more research into the effectiveness of rehabilitation and prevention programs for abusers.
- In order to improve physician knowledge of domestic violence, physicians must be better trained to identify domestic violence and to work cooperatively with the range of community services currently involved. Training on family violence should include education about the dynamics of abuse as well as presentations of diagnosis and management protocols. Hospitals should adopt protocols specific to domestic violence and they should require additional training for those physicians who are likely to see victims of abuse. Comprehensive training on domestic violence should be required in medical school curricula and in residency programs for specialties in which domestic violence is likely to be encountered.
- Informed consent for nonemergency interventions must be obtained from victims of domestic violence.
- Physicians must discuss the problem of domestic violence with patients in privacy and safety. For mentally competent adult victims, physicians must not disclose an abuse diagnosis to spouses or any other third party without the consent of the patient.

Millions Victimized by Family Members Every Year!

Are you concerned about the effects of family violence and victimization within your community?

Become an advocate within your community for the prevention of family violence.

Violence among family members has reached staggering proportions. Every year more than 2 million cases of child abuse and neglect are reported, between 2 and 4 million women are battered by their spouses, and between 700,000 and 1.1 million of the elderly population are abused.

The American Medical Association has formed a National Coalition of Physicians Against Family Violence. Through the Coalition the American Medical Association hopes to involve you in activities that address issues of child abuse, sexual assualt, domestic violence and elder abuse because you have the unique ability to identify the symptoms, first-hand. By joining the National Coalition you will be showing your concern about the effects of family violence and victimization, and will become a committed advocate within your community for the prevention of family violence.

Through the Coalition you will:

- be informed about local contacts and referrals
- become aware of local and regional resources
- be provided with information regarding model educational programs
- become aware of treatment guidelines and protocols.
- have access to newsletters, public education materials and other publications
- receive an official membership card and frameable poster alerting your patients of your interest in and concern for this problem.

The only cost to you is your commitment to help curb this problem. Simply complete the membership application form below and mail to the Department of Mental Health, American Medical Association, 515 N. State Street, Chicago, IL 60610.

Michigan Affiliate, Inc.

The Michigan Affiliate of the American Diabetes Association is currently in the process of creating a new Physician Referral Directory. Many individuals with diabetes contact the affiliate to seek advise in choosing a physician with interest and expertise in diabetes. The directory will be mailed to potential patients and they will be able to make their own decision accordingly.

The qualifications that we require of a physician to be listed in our directory are:

(1) Must be a member of the professional section of the American Diabetes Association, and

(2) Must attend either a Michigan or a nationally-sponsored CME course regarding diabetes of four or more hours each year.

If you wish to be included in our Physician Referral Directory, please call the Affiliate office at (810) 433-3830 or 1-800-525-9292 and ask for a "Referral Directory" application.

Should you have any questions, please feel free to contact Mary Lorenz, Director of Programs, at the Michigan Affiliate office in Southfield, Michigan.

HEALTHY RELATIONSHIPS

"With the Specialist Referral Network, we make one phone call and St. Luke's handles the rest."

Dr. William Starbird
Family Practice, North Branch

"Since I don't do obstetrics, I'm often in need of a good OB/GYN for referrals. St. Luke's Specialist Referral Network introduced me to Dr. Paschall and I've been referring patients to him ever since. He's always treated my patients very well and he does a good job of keeping me informed of their progress."

Dr. David Paschall, Obstetrics/Gynecology
St. Luke's Specialist Referral Network

"I enjoy working with Dr. Starbird and his patients. I make sure he's kept up to date on any significant occurrences during pregnancy. Then, after delivery, mother and baby are sent back to him along with complete documentation on the pregnancy. There's no doubt that Dr. Starbird and I, and a lot of expectant mothers, have benefitted from our relationship through the Network."

SPECIALIST REFERRAL NETWORK

What are rural physicians saying about St. Luke's Specialist Referral Network? They're saying it's quick. It's efficient. It gives them immediate access to the expertise of dozens of area specialists. It works. And the specialists of the Network couldn't agree more.

Physician voice, patient choice, universal coverage —

That's the song of organized medicine

"Our patients have never needed us more. We must stand up and speak out for our patients. Today, as never before, physicians must speak with one voice."

By Jack L. Barry, MD

Doctor Barry was installed as the 129th president of MSMS at the MSMS House of Delegates Meeting, May 6-8, 1994, in Grand Rapids.

During my year as MSMS president, I will be repeating over and over again the message of organized medicine concerning health system reform.

The message is really very simple.

It goes like this:

We believe Congress should enact:

- Universal coverage, with financial responsibility shared among employers, individuals and government;
- Freedom for every American to choose their own health plan, physician and other health care providers;
- More physician involvement in rebuilding and maintaining the system itself;
- Keeping medical decision-making in the hands of physicians and patients—right where it belongs;
- Antitrust relief so we can protect the patient-physician relationship from the spreading corporate and government control of health care;
- Competition in the marketplace to slow the increased rate of health spending;
- Less bureaucracy, not more bureaucracy;
- The kind of professional liability reforms that let medicine do its job, like the ones we worked so hard for here in Michigan.

Our message can be summarized this way:

Physician Voice*: a voice in how we change the system; a voice in how we practice; and, most of all, a voice in the decisions that affect our patients.

Patient Choice*: the freedom of all Americans to choose their own physician and health plan.

Universal Coverage*: for a standard set of benefits for all Americans, no matter if they're rich or poor, working or unemployed, healthy or sick.

Physician voice, patient choice, universal coverage.

That's the message of organized medicine. I hope you will back me up on it.

Don't give up

We are in a for a long debate. Solutions will not be quick or easy. We will need to make our voices heard again and again.

Do not get frustrated. Do not give up. Your profession is depending on you. More important, your patients are depending on you.

Remember this line from the Hippocratic Oath?

"I will follow that method of treatment, which, according to my ability and judgment, I consider for the benefit of my patients..."

Let me repeat: "...for the benefit of my patients."

Our patients have never needed us more. We must stand up and speak out for our patients.

And today, as never before, physicians must speak with one voice.

We must make our voices heard for our patients, for our friends, for our families. This is what health system reform is all about.

So during my year as MSMS President, I will be asking everyone, my colleagues, my patients, my legislators, to think about the real issues in health system reform and act on them.

This is not about special interests or vested interests. It is not about political position or partisan advantage.

This debate is about something much more. It is about our parents. Our children. Our families. Their lives. Our lives.

You know that. We know that.

Now, together, we've got to get the message out.

MICHIGAN MEDICINE

JUNE 1994 VOLUME 93, NO.6

As the debate about health system reform intensifies, so too will the discussions about health care for the nation's elderly. On behalf of Michigan Medicine, the MSMS Committee on Aging, chaired by James G. O'Brien, MD, recently invited three individuals to write about their concerns regarding health care for the elderly. They are: John Peterson, of the Office of Services to the Aging, State of Michigan; Robert Dolsen, executive director, Region IV Area Agency on Aging; and Richard C. Bates, MD, a retired internist. Their articles comprise this month's cover story.

Features

AMA/Gallup Survey Reveals Public's Attitudes on Health System Reform

According to the results of this 1994 survey, approximately three-fourths of Americans would rather pay more and be able to select their personal physician, get care right away, and use a particular hospital, than pay less and have less flexibility. This feature highlights this and other findings of the AMA/Gallup survey.

Preparing physicians for change

MSMS/MPMLC, county medical society physician leadership and staff will be "Making the Rounds" at hospitals

Doctors on hospital medical staffs who want answers on issues they're concerned about won't have to leave their hospitals to get that information. A new MSMS/Michigan Physicians Mutual Liability Company (MPMLC) and county medical society program called "Making the Rounds" will send staff to hospitals statewide to answer physician questions. The program also will include presentations by physician leaders and staff on health system reform, POs/PHOs, legislative activities and any other topics doctors want to hear about. For details, call Tom Plasman at (517) 336-5724 or Tom Wolff at (517) 336-5740.

Physicians can help each other by sharing technology experience

Doctors all over Michigan are using technology to help treat patients and manage their medical practices. The degree of use varies with the needs of the practice, familiarity with available technologies, equipment costs and trial-and-error experience. The MSMS Committee on Technology in Medicine, chaired by Nicholas J. Lekas, MD, wants to collect information about these experiences to share with other doctors. Do you use computers to help with diagnosing, teaching or medical records? What problems have you overcome with your systems, and what benefits and/or drawbacks have you experienced? Please mail or fax your experiences to Barbara Zimmerman at MSMS at 120 W. Saginaw St., East Lansing, MI 48826/fax # (517) 337-2490.

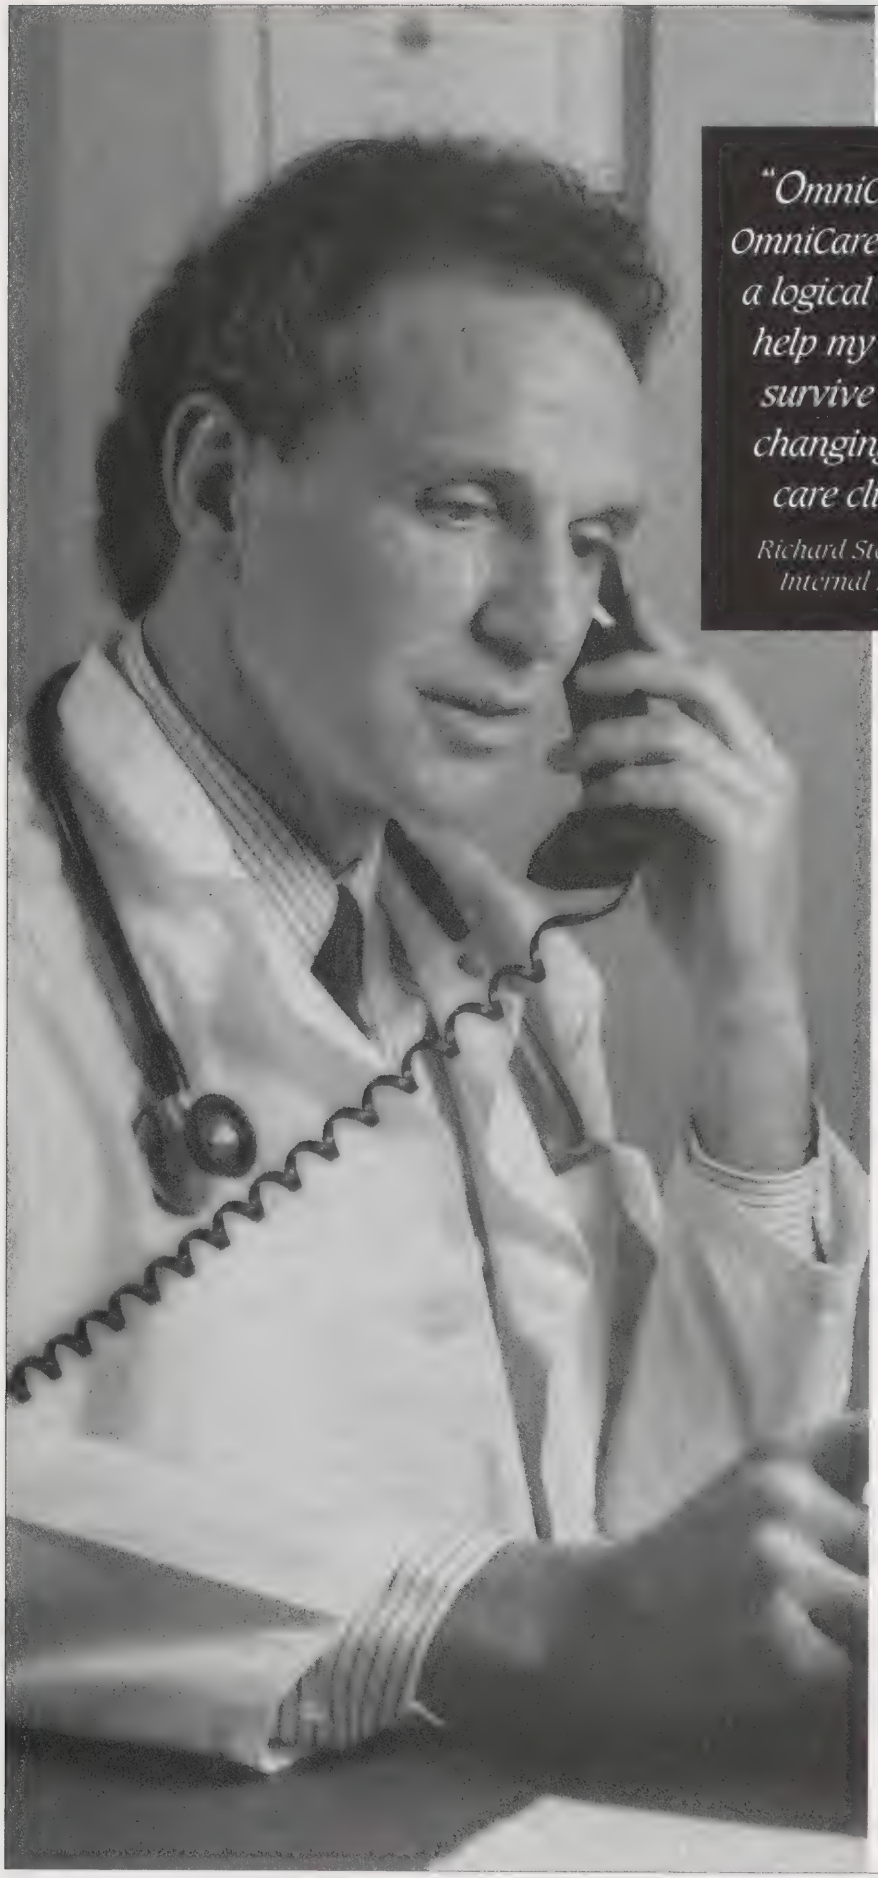

Doctors: Develop grassroots political power in workshop

The Michigan Doctors Political Action Committee (MDPAC) will co-sponsor an AMA constituent skills workshop for doctors July 13 at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in Dearborn. It's a day-long educational program to help physicians develop their skills in working with lawmakers. Doctors will learn more about the legislative process and how to get involved. Call Donna LaGosh at (517) 336-5788 for details.

MSMS mini-planning sessions can help with POs

MSMS has many services available to doctors through its Physician Organization and Management Services (POMS) division for setting up physician organizations and physician hospital organizations. One service that can be especially helpful to doctors considering a PO or PHO is the MSMS mini-educational and planning session. During the two-to-three-hour session, experts will discuss changes in the health care system and ways to respond to those changes. Call Tom Plasman at (517) 336-5724 or Tom Wolff at (517) 336-5740 for details on how this service can help you.

For details on these and other issues call William E. Madigan, MSMS Executive Director, 517/337-1351.

"OmniCare and OmniCarePlus were a logical choice to help my practice survive today's changing health care climate."

Richard Stober, M.D., Internal Medicine

Today, more than 1,500 primary care physicians and specialists — and 46 hospitals — are affiliated with OmniCare Health Plan. And already a large number of providers have associated with OmniCare's new POS plan, OmniCarePlus.

Why?

Our large patient base — there are nearly 100,000 members in OmniCare alone.

And our experience — for more than 18 years, we've successfully managed health care costs without compromising quality. Putting our plans — and our providers — in excellent position for future changes in health care.

According to Dr. Stober, "OmniCare and OmniCarePlus offer advantages beyond just a steady flow of patients."

We have, for example, developed an exclusive in-office software program that supplies immediate access to patient benefits and medical history. We encourage active physician involvement in our Quality Assurance and Peer Review Committees. And our fees are competitive and promptly paid.

For more details on the present and future advantages of becoming a participating physician, call OmniCare Provider Services today, at (313) 393-4540.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Doctors should not be labeled as "special interest groups"

Editor's Note: The following letter was sent to the editor of The New York Times.

I read with interest the editorial in The New York Times dated April 11, 1994, titled "A Sneak Attack on Health Reform." The editorial labels doctors as powerful vested interest groups. Who has the patient's best interest in mind more than the doctors? Medical decisions should be made by health professionals and doctors and not administrative clerks, government bureaucrats or journalists. If we were to reform the legal system, wouldn't we consult lawyers? Could we have won the Gulf War if all the planning and execution was done by the officials sitting in the Pentagon without any input from the soldiers and generals fighting the war in the battlefield? Can we expect to have successful health system reform without adequate input from the health professionals?

The time is now to put bias and prejudice against health professionals aside and treat them not as "special interest" groups but as active and concerned providers of health care.

Everyone involved in the health system reform debate must defend the goal of maintaining the highest quality care and should not compromise the ability of the patients to choose their own physician.

Any-willing-provider law gives the patients the choice to choose their physician as long as he/she is able to compete with the price and quality offered by the "plan."

The editorial seems to contradict and distort the provisions of the willing-provider law. Any-willing-provider law plan will let a "plan" fix its fees and choose its providers, but any other provider that is willing to compete on the basis of quality and fees should be allowed to take care of his/her patients who are within the plan. This not only gives the patients a choice of the physician but also ensures that other health care providers are not discriminated against. Any-willing-provider law is needed to see that the plans do not become "exclusive clubs."

How do we prevent a health plan from discriminating against certain providers? I believe any-willing-provider provision will accomplish this. The any-willing-provider concept involves a very fundamental right that cuts very deep. We want the patient to have the right to select a doctor, not the HMO. This is the issue.

Universal access to fine medical care should be the goal of any health system reform. One of the most important concerns of many Americans is the choice of being able to choose their own physician. This should not be compromised. Yes, our health care system is not perfect, but the quality of health care regularly provided to most Americans is without question the world's best! We want all Americans to have access to this care, the world's best!

Indiana State Medical Association praises MSMS project, publications

Editor's Note: The following letter was sent to our Department of Medical Economics and Health Care Delivery.

I want to take this opportunity to thank you for sending me a copy of the MSMS Survey on Practice Characteristics and for taking time out of your busy schedule to talk with me about it. The survey is very interesting and will help to give me some insight on your organization's approach.

Your weekly newsletter (Medigram) is very well done and the Michigan Medicine monthly journal is very impressive, to say the least. I enjoyed looking at the journal and am sure that your members had a very positive reaction to your entire project (MD Data, May 1993, Michigan Medicine.)

If there are any questions or comments you might have, please feel free to contact me at any time. I hope that we may keep in contact with each other in order to exchange information on the various projects that may come our way. Again, thank you for your assistance.

I am writing on behalf of Oliver D. W. Grin, MD, who was, as you know, profiled a little more than a year ago in Michigan_Medicine. We continue to purchase reprints of that article from you and our patients remain very appreciative to receive them. The compliments on the article are also continually received. Thank you again for your interest and the excellent article by David Fox (MSMS chief of media relations).

Doctor Grin has appreciated the many recent Michigan Medicine issues regarding health care reform and liability/risk management issues.

On a personal note, I have just received the March issue of Michigan Medicine and very much appreciate the article on page 43 by Julie Smith, "More on Medical Records." I have taken the liberty of bringing this to the attention of our practice manager, our accounts manager, and all the medical secretaries in our offices. Each one of us always finds a pertinent article or two that is very helpful to us as employees—and patients. (The "Meetings" and "New Members" sections are also helpful each month. Thank you for keeping us up-to-date!)

Physician offers proposal to those who deal with worker's comp/accident victims

I would like to make a modest proposal to those of us who deal with workman's comp or accident victims.

It is my opinion that many unnecessary "second opinions" are being rendered by very expensive individuals at the request of the claims managers, and it is usually to the detriment of very legitimate patients.

If you suspect foul play in this type of referral pattern, particularly on the part of certain "case managers" who seem to have favorites, you might have your patient send a letter of explanation to: Michigan Insurance Bureau, Consumer Assistance Division, P.O. Box 30220, Lansing, MI 48909.

I have been sending a letter directly to the patient to be forwarded with their own personal complaint to this bureau.

As physicians, we are constantly being evaluated and second guessed by those who do not have the benefit of our training, and these individuals appear not to be answerable to anyone. I can think of nothing more frustrating than trying to come up with an appropriate treatment plan for a patient, only to have to almost grovel in the presence of a petty bureaucrat of questionable intelligence.

It's time for us to re-adapt ourselves to the principles of medical ethics

By Isak Berker, MD

About two generations ago medicine, law and religion were considered the three essential professions. Subsequently, when other occupations which required extensive training were considered professions, medicine, law and theology were specified as "classic professions."

The classic professions have somewhat a common goal: "helping the fellow human being." Accordingly, medicine has the goal of helping humans live healthier lives with less pain and suffering. Physicians are guided by certain ethical principles, principles which have guided the medical profession for thousands of years: to treat the rich and the poor, the common and the noble, the criminal and the saint equally. These principles do not include giving a patient a poison if he or she asks for it, or instructing the patient where to find it.

A different lifestyle

Because physicians are guided by a Code of Ethics, physicians have to adapt to a lifestyle that is somewhat different from other people. The physician lifestyle is characterized by altruism, generosity, sacrifice and compassion.

A person may be highly educated in the sciences of medicine, may become a very skillful diagnostician, a brilliant surgeon and may have many capital letters after his/her name representing knowledge, skill and education; yet unless he/she is qualified with altruism, generosity, sacrifice and compassion he/she is not a true physician.

In some religious literature the physician is described as "God's helper." Most of the other occupations may be considered "business." Business has a different goal and different ethical principles. The ethical principle that guides business is the "law of the land," so in order to be ethical in business a person has to comply with the law of the land!

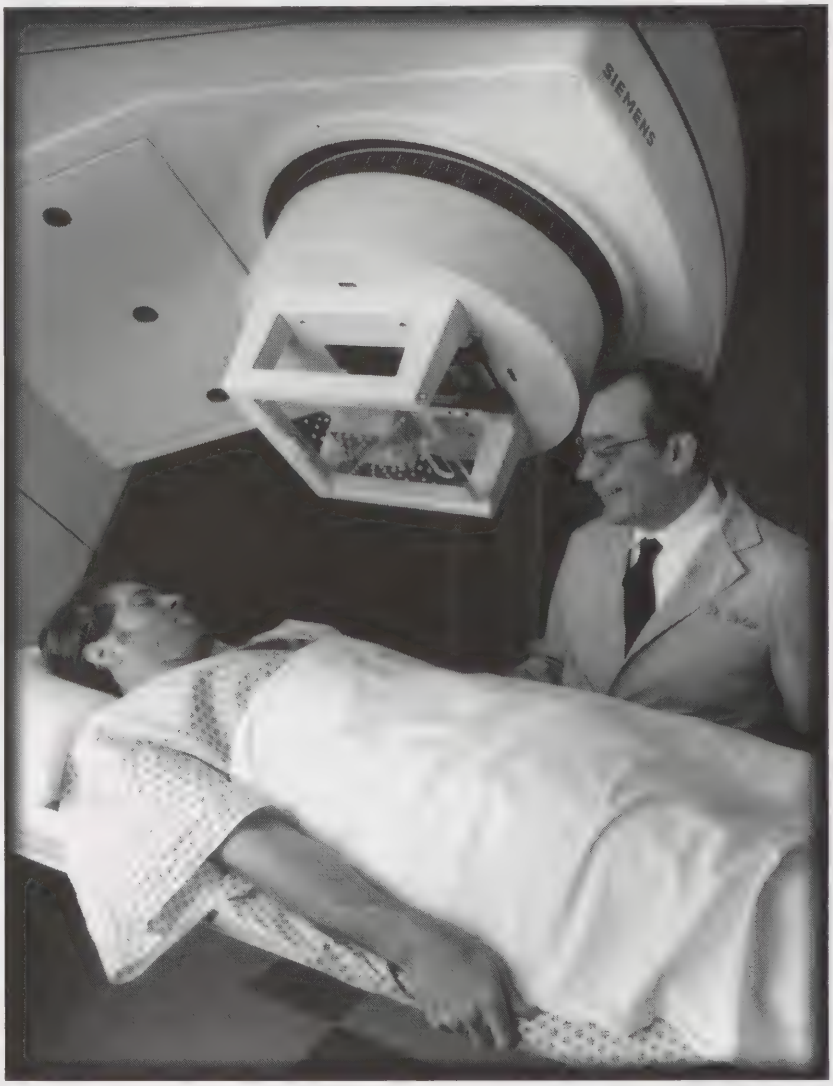

The invasion of business

Today we live in a society invaded by business and industry. Science and knowledge became slaves of business and industry with "money" representing the common denominator. Ethical principles that guided the conduct of the classic professions suffered a setback. One has to be blind not to see the medical profession divorcing itself from the ethical principles of medicine and adapting the principles of business. The same deterioration can be seen amongst lawyers and clergy.

Can the deterioration of the classic professions be stopped? Perhaps...the only hope is that there still are some physicians that practice medicine under the guidance of the principles of medical ethics; some lawyers that are guided by the "Canon Laws"; and some clergy that follow the spiritual guidance of their denominations.

Doctor Berker is chair of the Bioethics Committee, Lapeer Regional Hospital, and serves on the MSMS Bioethics Committee.

FTC endorses medical society fee peer review

By Richard D. Weber

For the first time, the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) has expressly allowed medical societies to require their members to participate in fee peer review proceedings, so long as the committee recommendations are purely advisory and not used to coerce members into accepting the recommendations.

This restriction on enforcement would also extend to "fee gouging" where there has been no other abusive conduct.

The basis for the FTC's refusal to allow discipline in fee peer review, even to the extent of fee gouging, is because, according to the FTC, it could result in a price fixing agreement whereby competitors would agree not to charge above a certain level.

The FTC did agree to allow discipline for fraudulent or abusive behavior in the context of fee agreements, on the reasoning that "such regulation is likely to promote, rather than impede, competition, by enabling consumer purchase decisions to be made free from deceptive practices."

Examples of such practices would include intentionally ordering unnecessary services, misrepresentation of material facts about fees to be charged, services to be performed, or the basis for the fee.

The FTC's approval of fee peer review by medical societies is good news for MSMS, its members and their patients. This FTC Opinion should guide medical societies and their members in fee peer review cases without fear of antitrust liability. The MSMS Judicial Commission is expected to review this Opinion and advise component society ethics committees on the appropriate guidelines for conducting fee peer review cases in the future.

Background

On February 14, 1994, the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) issued a significant 16-page Advisory Opinion on peer review of fees. The opinion was sought by the American Medical Association and supported by constituent and component societies, including MSMS.

The AMA petition described a two-tiered peer review process. A Patient Grievance Committee would be established to review physicians' fee disputes. Participation would be obligatory for the medical society physician member, but the Committee's recommendation would be purely advisory and confidential. A Physician Disciplinary Committee would be established to discipline members who exert undue influence or engage in other fraudulent or exploitive behavior in the fee context. Discipline could include censure, fines, suspension or membership termination. The disciplined physician's name would be made public.

Americans value freedom of choice

Approximately three-fourths of Americans would rather pay more and be able to select their personal physician, get care right away, and use a particular hospital, than pay less and have less flexibility. The proportion willing to pay more to choose their own physicians increased from 76 percent in 1993 to 81 percent this year.

These and other findings came from the American Medical Association's 1994 survey, "Public Opinion on Health Care Issues," conducted by The Gallup Organization.

Fifty-seven percent would rather pay more out of pocket to private doctors and hospitals than pay higher taxes and have the government be in charge of health care delivery. Support for a private system increased by eight percentage points from 1993 to 1994. Public support for government-controlled health care organization and delivery decreased from 46 percent in 1993 to 39 percent in 1994, according to the survey.

Fewer Americans have health insurance

According to the survey, 83 percent of Americans have health insurance, a five-percentage point decrease from 1991.

The proportion of Americans who were confident they could afford various types of health care costs has increased. Seventy-five percent said they could afford usual medical costs (up from 73 percent in 1993); 58 percent said they could afford major illnesses (up from 54 percent in 1993); and 44 percent said they could afford long-term care (up from 36 percent in 1993).

Americans are satisfied with physicians

A large majority were either very or somewhat satisfied with the medical care they received on their last medical visit (93 percent). Most were very or somewhat satisfied with how doctor's staffs treated them (96 percent); the way the doctors explained things (91 percent); the amount of time they had to wait to get an appointment (86 percent); the amount of time they had to wait before seeing the doctor (81 percent); and the fee the doctor charged (73 percent).

Seventy-nine percent of respondents have personal physicians, 80 percent of whom are general and family physicians.

AMA should have role in system reform

Fifty-eight percent said the AMA should have a major role in deciding what kinds of changes should be made in the health care system, an increase of 10 percentage points from 1993. Thirty-five percent said that the AMA should have a minor role. Seventy-one percent consider it very important for their doctor to be involved with the AMA, an increase of 12 percentage points from 1993.

About half of Americans think the AMA is doing a good or excellent job in helping assure quality medical care. Large majorities of Americans have seen or heard of the AMA taking action on key public health issues, such as helping stop tobacco use (70 percent); educating people on alcohol and drug abuse (68 percent); and slowing the spread of AIDS (66 percent).

The data resulted from 1,519 telephone interviews with adults from randomly selected US households. Gallup conducted the interviews from January 20 through February 13, 1994. Margin of error for items asked of all 1,519 respondents is plus or minus 2.5 percent at the 95 percent confidence level.

Public opinion on health care issues

Health system reform

• Two-thirds of American adults (66 percent) think cost is the main problem facing health care and medicine in the United States today. This proportion is a significant drop from 72 percent in 1992 and from 74 percent in 1993, and approximately equal to the 64 percent expressing this opinion in 1991.

• About one-half (48 percent) think the elderly are able to get needed medical care, up from 36 percent in 1993; 41 percent think poor people are able to get needed medical care, up from 27 percent in 1993.

How The Public Identifies Main Problem Facing Medicine

Source: 1994 AMA/Gallup Organization Public Opinion Survey

• Of five health system reform issues tested, Americans are most likely to say "being able to choose your own doctor without paying extra" and "having access to the latest medical technology" are very important to them (84 percent and 82 percent, respectively). A second tier of importance includes the issues of health care costs and universal coverage (each rated very important by 75 percent); less important is "no increase in waiting time to see a doctor or receive treatment" (very important to 59 percent).

• A slight majority think the best policy for the US would be flexible federal goals for the total amount of health care expenditures (51 percent), rather than strict federal limits on total expenditures (17 percent), or no goals or limits (26 percent).

• Reversing a three-year trend toward desire for greater government involvement in the health care system, 39 percent of Americans (down from 46 percent in 1993) would rather pay higher taxes and have the government be in charge of the organization and delivery of health care services, while 57 percent (up from 49 percent in 1993) would rather pay more out of pocket to private doctors and hospitals.

• Majorities would rather pay more for health care in order to be able to select a personal physician (81 percent), get care right away (73 percent), use a particular hospital (72 percent), and have the latest medical technology available locally (54 percent), rather than pay less and have less choice/convenience on those issues. Compared to 1993, the proportions willing to pay more are up five percentage points for selecting a physician, down seven percentage points for getting care right away, down two points for using a particular hospital, and the same for having the latest technology available locally.

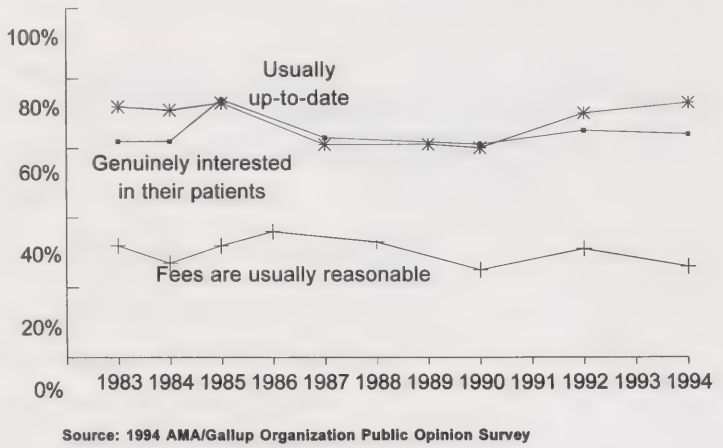

• Fifty-eight percent (up from 48 percent in 1993) think the AMA should have a major role in deciding what kinds of changes should be made in the health care system; 35 percent think the AMA should have a minor role, and five percent say it should have no role at all in those decisions.

Health insurance coverage

• Eighty-three percent of survey respondents are covered by a health insurance plan (down from 88 percent in 1991 and 1992, and 84 percent in 1993); 73 percent of those have an insurance plan through an employer. Twenty-four percent of all respondents are covered through a government plan, such as Medicare and Medicaid.

• After declining between 1990 and 1992, then stabilizing in 1993, the proportions of American adults who are very or somewhat confident they can afford various types of cost have increased at least slightly; usual medical costs, 75 percent (up from 73 percent in 1993); a major illness, 58 percent (up from 54 percent); and long-term care, 44 percent (up from 36 percent).

Patient/physician relationship

• Almost four out of five adults (79 percent) have a personal physician, and 80 percent of those individuals say their personal physician is a general or family practice physician. Those whose personal physician practices some other specialty most often say that the physician is an internist (37 percent) or an obstetrician/gynecologist (19 percent).

• Three-fourths of adults (74 percent) have been to a medical doctor within the last year; 72 percent say their most recent visit was with their personal physician rather than some other doctor.

• Large majorities were very or somewhat satisfied with several major aspects of their most recent doctor's visit: the medical care they received (93 percent); the way the doctor's staff treated them (96 percent); they way the doctor explained things to them (91 percent); the amount of time they had to wait to get an appointment (86 percent); the amount of time they had to wait before seeing the doctor (81 percent); the fee the doctor charged (73 percent). Overall, 93 percent were very (67 percent) or somewhat (26 percent) satisfied with the visit.

• Three-fourths of American adults (76 percent) have seen educational materials in their doctor's office on nutrition and healthy eating habits, 67 percent on tobacco and how to quit smoking, 63 percent on drug abuse, 60 percent on alcohol and drinking problems, 57 percent on sexual behavior and how to avoid sexually transmitted diseases, 35 percent on family violence and how to seek help, and 26 percent on health system reform issues.

Physician-assisted suicide and euthanasia

• Almost one-fourth of Americans (23 percent) think physician-assisted suicide should be legal under any circumstances, as long as the patient and the doctor agree; 34 percent think it should be legal only under specific circumstances written into law; 41 percent say it should be legal under no circumstances.

• One-fifth of Americans (21 percent) think it

Offered Through
Michigan State Medical Society:

The coverage most doctors accept is also the coverage most doctors choose.

When it comes to health care coverage for themselves, their families, their employees, it seems Michigan's medical professionals do what everybody else does.

They choose Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Michigan.

If you'd like to do the same, we have some good news for you. Through the Michigan State Medical Society, you have access to Blue Cross and Blue Shield group products on an individual basis. Even better, whether you select a first-dollar program or a cost-sharing plan, you'll be offered benefit enhancements not normally available to small groups and individuals.

If you're a member of the Michigan State Medical Society and you'd like to know more, just write or call:

should be legal for a physician to commit euthanasia under any circumstances, as long as the patient and the doctor agree; 34 percent think it should be legal only under specific circumstances written into law; 43 percent say it should be legal under no circumstances.

Public image of physicians

• Almost three-fourths (73 percent) think doctors are usually up-to-date on the latest advances in medicine (up from 70 percent in 1992), and 64 percent think most doctors take a genuine interest in their patients (65 percent in 1992), while 26 percent agree that doctor's fees are usually reasonable (down from 31 percent in 1992).

• About three-fourths (74 percent) think doctors keep patients waiting too long (up from 71 percent in 1992), 61 percent believe doctors should involve patients more in deciding on treatment (down from 63 percent in 1992), and 56 percent think doctors care less about people than in the past (the same as in 1992).

Public image of organized medicine

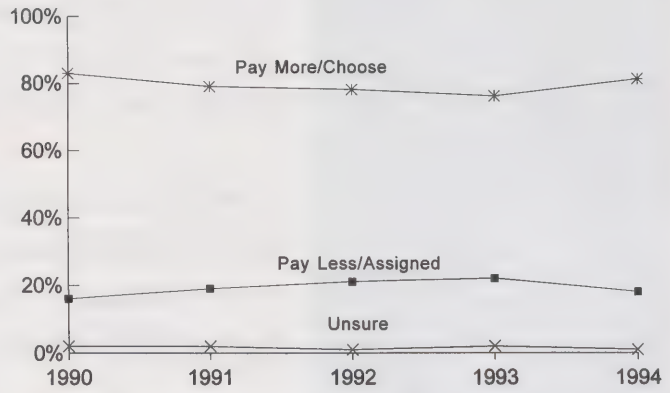

• Seven out of ten Americans (71 percent) consider it very important for their doctor to be involved with the American Medical Association, and 56 percent think it is very important for their doctor to be involved in his or her specialty association. Both figures are up significantly from 1993 results (AMA 59 percent, specialty association 44 percent).

• Over 80 percent think the AMA is a very reliable (23 percent) or somewhat reliable (59 percent) source of information on health (23 percent and 61 percent, respectively, in 1993).

• Half think the AMA is doing an excellent job (8 percent) or a good job (41 percent) in helping assure quality medical care to Americans (6 percent and 37 percent, respectively, in 1993).

• Large majorities report having seen or heard of the AMA being involved in or taking action on helping stop tobacco use (70 percent), educating people about alcohol and drug abuse (68 percent), and slowing the spread of AIDS (66 percent). Fewer have seen or heard of AMA involvement in reforming the health care system (50 percent), promoting biomedical research (38 percent), and preventing family violence (36 percent).

A future of medical excellence starts with a few good ideas

A lot of old fashioned ideas go into 21st Century medicine. Ideas like dedicating resources and energy to things that matter. What matters at Rehabilitation Institute of Michigan is exploring new ways to rebuild lives by designing better ways to diagnose and treat individuals with physical and cognitive disabilities.

We're confronting our future by putting good ideas to work right now. That's why we're developing the first clinical research unit in the nation devoted entirely to rehabilitation research.

We've staffed and equipped our clinical rehabilitation research unit to study the quantification of human functioning. We'll develop and test new equipment, new diagnostic assessment methods, new treatments and use objective outcome measurement.

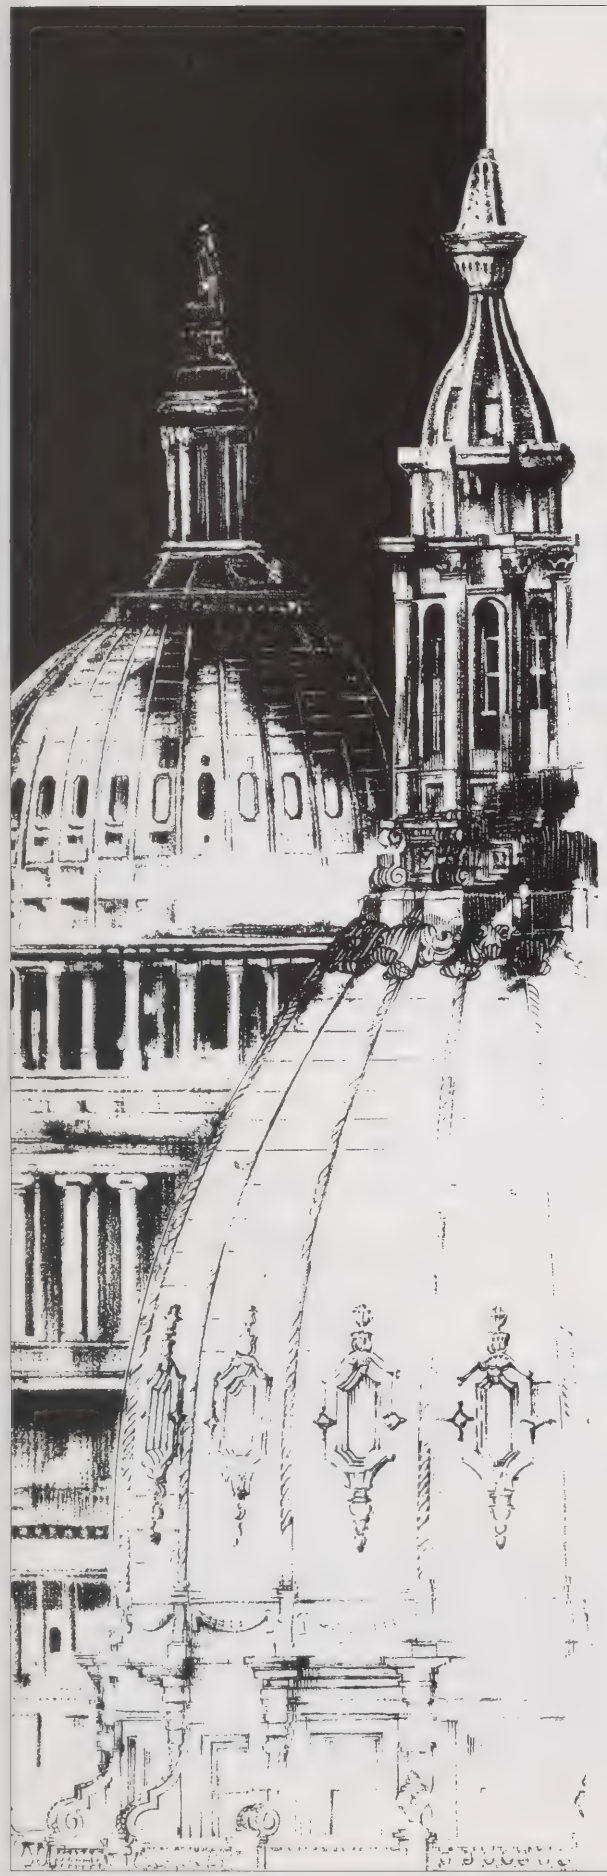

Trying to improve the future of health care isn't a new idea. But it has given birth to new ways to achieve excellence in physical medicine and rehabilitation.

At Rehabilitation Institute of Michigan, rebuilding lives is our future.

MSMS Legislative Update

Following is a status report on key Michigan legislation prepared by the MSMS Department of Government Relations, May 1994.

Scope of Practice

1. Chiropractic: HB 4494
Introduced: 3-11-93
Sponsor: Representative Lynn Owen (D-Monroe)
MSMS position: Oppose
Status: Referred to the House Committee on Public Health; several hearings have been held, but little support exists for this bill; anticipate additional hearings in April in attempt to move bill prior to election season.

This bill would significantly expand the scope of practice for chiropractors, allowing them to use light, heat, water, and other physical modalities to treat ailments "related" to the spine. This bill would expand the chiropractic scope of practice far beyond their current educational or clinical training. There appears to be very little support for this bill, it is believed that some legislators would support a less expansive substitute bill.

2. Optometric: HB 4330-4331
Introduced: 2-23-93
Sponsor: Representative Michael Bennane (D-Detroit)
MSMS Position: Oppose
Status: Reported out of House Public Health Committee May 6, 1993; Passed House of Representatives and Reported to Senate Health Policy Committee June 3, 1993; Anticipate hearing in April, 1994; Governor has agreed to sign bill that would allow optometrists to use topical pharmaceutical agents for therapeutic purposes.

House Bill 4330 would significantly expand the scope of practice for optometrists. This bill would allow optometrists to use topical pharmaceutical agents to treat diseases of the eye and areas around the eye, whereas, currently the optometrist scope of practice only allows them to diagnose and correct visual problems. Governor Engler has agreed to sign bill that would allow topical pharmaceutical agents for therapeutic purposes.

Direct Reimbursement

1. Certified Nurse Midwives: HB 4989 & 4991
Introduced: 10-10-93
Sponsor: Representative Lynn Rivers (D-Ann Arbor)
MSMS Position: Oppose
Status: Reported out of House Insurance Committee 2-3-94; Anticipate that House of Representatives will vote on this bill in the Spring of '94.

This Bill would require insurance companies and health care corporations to directly reimburse certified nurse midwives. This bill could significantly diminish the collaborative relationship that exists between certified nurse midwives and physicians. MSMS has worked closely with Representative Bill Martin (R-Battle Creek) to develop a more acceptable substitute bill. The substitute was voted down by the House Insurance Committee on February 15, 1994. It is very possible that this bill will pass the House of Representatives. MSMS has expressed its strong opposition to the House members. We have also sent out a PLN alert to members to contact their legislators.

2. Physical Therapists: HB 4853
Introduced: 6-15-93
Sponsor: Representative Nelson Saunders (D-Detroit)
MSMS Position: Oppose
Status: Passed House Committee on Public Health; Reported to Senate Committee on Commerce; Working to delay hearing. This bill would require Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Michigan to directly reimburse physical therapists for their services.

This bill would aide physical therapists in their effort to practice completely independently of physicians. Although the bill passed the House of Representatives, it is not likely that Senator Paul Wartner (R-Kalamazoo), chair of the Senate Commerce Committee, will take the bill up for a hearing.

New Licensure

1. Medical Technicians: HB 4485-4486
Introduced: 12-21-93
Sponsor: Representative Michael Bennane (D-Detroit)
MSMS Position: Oppose
Status: Currently pending in House Public Health Committee; hearing held 2-15-94, second hearing anticipated in March, 1994.

This bill would require the state of Michigan to license and register medical technicians, as well create of Board of Licensure and Discipline. Medical technicians claim this is necessary to ensure quality lab tests, however, CLIA is currently being implemented to address this situation. In addition, it is not clear how licensure of medical technicians would ensure quality laboratory tests. This bill may be an effort to establish the first step towards expanding the scope of practice for medical technicians.

2. Physical Therapist Assistants: HB 5343-5344
Introduced: 2-15-94
Sponsor: Representative Beverly Hammerstrom (R-Temperance)
MSMS Position: Oppose
Status: Referred to the House Committee on Public Health.

HB 5343-5344 would require the state of Michigan to register physical therapist assistants. Registering physical therapist assistants would require anyone using that title to meet certain criteria, which includes the completion of two years formal training. Physical therapists assistants and physical therapists argue that registering physical therapist assistants would protect patients from individuals using that title without actually having the appropriate training. They argue that this is currently a problem in Michigan.

Health System Reform

1. Michigan Health Access Program: HB 4741-4744
Introduced: 5-11-93
Sponsor: Representative Michael Bennane (D-Detroit)
MSMS Position: No position; many concerns expressed
Status: Referred to House Public Health Committee; Several hearing held on bills throughout spring and fall 1993; bills not expected to be reported from House of Representatives due to apparent lack of support.

House Bills 4741-4744 would create the Michigan Health Access Program. These bills would essentially prepare Michigan for a Clinton type health system reform plan. These bills create managed competition through the development of six regional alliances. Certified health plans would be required to negotiate with the regional alliances. The regional alliances would contract with the most competitive certified health plan. Elements of this proposal that concern MSMS include: 1. physicians are not permitted to be a member of the regional alliance Board; 2. There is no funding mechanism for this proposal. Due to the legislature's political make up, it is unlikely that these bills will become law.

2. Republican Health System Reform Plan: No legislation at this time.
Sponsor: Rep. John Jamian
(R-Bloomfield Hills)
MSMS Position: Support concept
Status: Rep. Jamian formed task force during the summer, 1993; Reports from various organizations submitted to Rep. Jamian September, 1993; Rep. Jamian's report on health system reform anticipated in April, 1994.

Representative Jamian's health system reform task force is the primary republican response to the health system reform debate. The task force includes individuals representing business, consumers, labor, public health, physicians, hospitals, and others affected by a potential change in the health care delivery system. The following physicians represent MSMS to the health system reform task force: Bradley Barns, MD, Gilbert Bluhm, MD, Thomas Payne, MD, and Joel Saper, MD. The purpose of the Rep. Jamian's task force is not necessarily to reconstruct the entire health care delivery system, but to maintain the elements of the system that work well and to incrementally change the elements of the delivery system that need to be changed.

3. Individual Medical Accounts (IMA's): HB 4878 & 4879
Sponsor: Representative Terry London
(R-Marysville)
MSMS Position: No position; support concept
Status: Referred to House Committee on Insurance; Passed House of Representatives winter, 1993; referred to the Senate Commerce Committee; HB 4879 passed Senate winter, 1993; HB 4878 substituted with SB 925; House has yet to concur with Senate changes.

These bills would permit businesses to establish tax-free individual medical accounts (IMA) for their employees. One third of the funds collected for the accounts would be used for a high deductible, while the other two thirds would be used for health care bills exceeding a set amount. Employees would have the choice to withdraw the funds from the medical account or let the funds roll over into the next year. The funds are taxable once they are withdrawn from the individual medical account. Many view individual medical accounts as a cost effective method of delivering health care to Michigan citizens. Others feel that IMA's are a positive step, but not enough to address the problems with the health care delivery system.

4. Individual Medical Accounts: SB 925 & 926
Introduced: 11-2-93
Sponsor: Senator John Pridnia
(R-Hubbard Lake)
MSMS Position: No position; support concept
Status: Referred to the Senate Committee on Commerce; SB 925 substituted for HB 4878 on Senate Floor; passed Senate winter, 1993; House of Representatives has yet to concur with Senate changes.

These bills would allow individuals to establish tax-free individual medical accounts. A portion of the funds would be used for a high deductible, while the rest of the funds would be used for health care bills exceeding a set amount. While most are supportive of the concept of these bills, the House of Representatives has yet to concur with the Senate changes, solely for political reasons.

5. Prudent Purchaser Agreements: SB 590-593
Introduced: 4-29-93
Sponsor: Senator Mat Dunaskiss
(R-Lake Orion)
MSMS Position: No position
Status: Referred to Senate Committee on Health Policy

These bills prohibit the use of incentives to steer patients from one provider of prescription services or of durable medical goods to another within a health plan and require organizations providing health care coverage to contract with all providers of pharmacy and durable medical equipment who wish to be part of a plan.

Public Health Legislation

Tobacco
1. No Smoking in Malls: HB 5212
Introduced: 10-2-93
Sponsor: Rep. John Jamian
(R-Bloomfield Hills)
MSMS Position: Support
Status: Referred to House Committee on Public Health; passed House of Reps. fall, 1993; currently pending in Senate Health Policy.

This bill would prohibit smoking in malls.

2. Anti Smoking Legislation: 1993

The first year of the 1993-94 legislative was a landmark year for anti-tobacco legislation. The following bills which were signed into law by Gov. John Engler will certainly improve the public health of Michigan.

SB 459 prohibits the use of tobacco products on school property; SB 4457 requires restaurants to provide at least 50 percent of their seating capacity to non-smokers; HB 4687-4690 prohibit smoking in day care centers.

MSMS is currently working with the Tobacco Free Michigan Action Coalition (TFMAC) to introduce legislation that will restrict smoking to certain areas of the work-place.

Domestic Violence

1. MSMS organized the family violence forum, which includes approximately 50 organizations representing: law enforcement, domestic violence shelters, The Michigan Bar, medicine, and other organizations interested in curbing the occurrences of domestic violence. The Family Violence Forum and the MSMS strongly supports the following bills which will make the legal system easier for domestic violence victims to work through, increase the penalties for domestic violence suspects, and hopefully reduce the occurrences of domestic violence: HB 4064, HB 4308, HB 4325, HB 4357, HB 4359 - HB 4362, and HB 4397.

HB 4064 has been signed into law, the rest of these bills have passed the Senate and are pending on the Governor's desk awaiting his signature.

Gun Violence

1. MSMS participates in the Coalition to Reduce Gun Violence, which is sponsored by Senator Lana Pollack (D-Ann Arbor). In addition, the MSMS Alliance is hosting the 1st annual "Gun Awareness Week" during the third week of April. A resolution has been introduced in the Senate, SCR 371, that officially declares that week as Gun Awareness Week. A resolution has also been introduced in the House, HCR 664, that declares the third week of April as Gun Awareness Week and has passed the House unanimously. Referred to Senate Committee on Government Operations.

MSMS also supports House Bills 4672-4675, which would establish "weapons free school zones: and severely penalize individuals who bring weapons into those zones. The bill is currently pending in the Senate Health Education Committee. In addition, MSMS is currently working with other members of the Coalition to Reduce Gun Violence, to introduce effective legislation.

Child Immunizations

1. MSMS currently supports House Bill 4763, which would remove "philosophical reasons" from the exception to the law that requires children to be immunized before entering school. HB 4763 passed the House and is currently pending in the Senate Committee on Health Policy. A hearing is anticipated in April. MSMS also Senate Bills 767-769 which would require insurance companies to cover immunizations, well baby and well child checkups.

MSMS also participates as a member of the Alliance to Immunize Michigan (AIM), a coalition organized to address the access barriers to immunizations. MSMS continues to work closely with MDPH and MDSS to increase the level of immunizations in Michigan, especially in children two years old and younger.

Traffic Safety

1. MSMS continues to support Senate Bill 506, which requires all individuals to wear a helmet while riding a moped. This bill was rejected on 3/22/94 and sent back to the House Committee on Transportation where it is currently pending.

2. MSMS also supports House Bill 4953, which would require children under the age of four to wear a helmet when riding as a passenger on bicycle or in a carriage attached to a bicycle. This bill recently passed the House of Representatives and is currently pending in the Senate.

3. Finally, MSMS strongly supports House Bill 4511, which would allow police officers to pull an individual over if someone in the car, are 16 or younger, is not wearing a seatbelt (primary enforcement). The bill passed the House of Representatives, summer, 1993, and is currently pending in the Senate Transportion.

Wayne and Oakland counties join forces to better serve member needs

By Tracy A. Baker

Cooperation among county medical societies is a high priority in Southeastern Michigan. In the last four months, the Wayne County Medical Society (WCMS) and the Oakland County Medical Society (OCMS) have been forging a relationship based on cooperative efforts to better serve their members.

"A lot of times we duplicate services," says Wayne County Medical Society President Joseph M. Beals, MD. "If we can get closer to other counties, we can streamline many of our operations."

One of the primary means to bring the organizations closer is through holding joint functions for members. The activities give physicians from several counties the opportunity to interact and understand the concerns of physicians in different parts of Southeastern Michigan. Specifically, they bring together physicians from the city of Detroit with physicians from the suburbs so they can discuss and understand the unique perspective and problems facing each group.

Many similarities

"We are adjacent counties with the same over-all philosophy, the same goals, the same principles and approaches," says OCMS President Murray B. Levin, MD. "Until now, we have not worked together on projects despite our similarities and there is no good reason for it."

The relationship has been fostered through a variety of successful programs such as the March 30 presentation featuring American Medical Association Executive Vice-President James S. Todd, MD, who spoke to 150 physicians from Oakland, Wayne and Macomb counties. Doctor Todd provided an update on health system reform and explained the role and function of the AMA in issues of importance to physicians.

Event organizers expect future conferences will be held together to increase attendance, reduce costs and bring members together.

"This is a way of having a convivial relationship with organized medicine throughout Southeastern Michigan that will benefit all who participate," says Doctor Beals.

Another successful endeavor was a May 9 golf outing and fitness day for members of WCMS, OCMS and the Macomb County Medical Society. Also present at the event as special guests were AMA Speaker of the House of Delegates Daniel H. Johnson, Jr., MD, and State Representative John Jamian (R-Bloomfield Hills).

The guests provided a great opportunity for physicians to talk informally with policymakers about health system reform and other issues important to organized medicine.

Future plans

Trying to balance the demands of a career and family is particularly difficult for young physicians. With this is mind, future plans include a "Day at the Zoo" for young physicians and their families from Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties to be held on June 26, 1994, at the Detroit Zoo in Royal Oak. This event is designed to give physicians time with their families while interacting with other physicians who are at a similar point in their careers.

According to Doctor Beals, WCMS and OCMS will continue to explore ways they can work together to economically provide quality services to their members. Sharing service bureau benefits, newsletter services and pooling resources on projects have been discussed.

"The ball has been set in motion and we will continue to work with our surrounding counties on a variety of projects," Doctor Levin said.

"These programs are just the beginning of what I expect to be a very successful relationship between the counties in our area," says Kathleen Maslanka, WCMS executive director.

For more information about the "Day at the Zoo" and other joint programs contact Jeff Stein at the WCMS department of public relations at 313-567-1640.

What Health Experts Are Advising About Meat

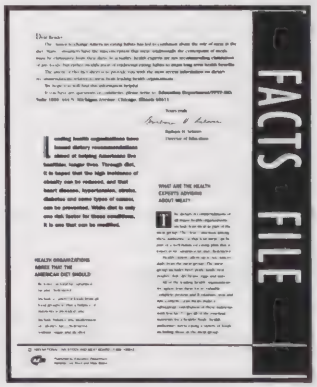

The dietary recommendations of all major health organizations include lean meat. The clear consensus among health authorities is that meat can be part of a well-balanced eating plan that is lower in fat, saturated fat and cholesterol. Meat, especially beef, is recognized for providing valuable nutrients such as complete protein, B vitamins, iron and zinc.

RECOMMENDATIONS AT A GLANCE
Organization	Cooked* meat ounces/daily
American Heart Association	up to 6 ounces
Food and Nutrition Board, National Academy of Science	up to 6 ounces
National Heart, Lung, and Blood Institute	up to 6 ounces
USDA and Health and Human Services (Dietary Guidelines for Americans)	up to 6 ounces
USDA and Health and Human Services (The Food Guide Pyramid)	5-7 ounces
*3 ounces cooked meat = 4 ounces raw lean meat

- Health organizations resoundingly agree the American diet should:
  - — be lower in fat, saturated fat and cholesterol;
  - — include a variety of foods from all food groups so that a balance of nutrients is provided; and
  - — follow a philosophy of balance and moderation.
- Beef has 27% less trimmable fat (at retail) than in 1987 and remains one of the most nutrient-dense foods.

MSMS Group Insurance Trust invites member participation

By Valerie Barker

June has been declared Delta Dental Month by the Michigan State Medical Society Group Insurance Trust. MSMS member physicians and their employees are encouraged to join this MSMS-sponsored dental program.

The MSMS Delta plan offers a choice of dental options. Subscribers may choose either traditional or PPO coverage. The percentage of coverage does differ slightly between the traditional and PPO options. The Delta plan administered by the MSMS Group Insurance Trust is billed in quarterly installments.

Delta's plan is designed to promote good dental care by covering all or most all preventative procedures, depending on the plan you choose. Other procedures are covered on 50 or 75 percent cost-sharing reimbursement. See accompanying "Delta Benefit Features Chart" which details the available options.

To learn more about the MSMS Delta plan, refer to the enrollment information mailed to you recently, or call the MSMS Group Insurance Trust at 1-800-748-0195 for more information.

Valerie Barker is chief of insurance marketing, MSMS Group Insurance Trust.

Dental Benefit Comparison

The following chart indicates the services and the percentages of the contracting dentist's usual/customary fee for the Delta traditional and PPO options.

	Traditional Delta Pays	Delta PPO Pays
DIAGNOSTIC	100%	75%
Includes oral examinations and emergency palliative treatment.
PREVENTATIVE	100%	75%
Includes prophylaxes and topical applications of fluoride solutions.
RADIOGRAPHS	100%	75%
As required, and in conjunction with the diagnosis of a specific condition requiring treatment.
ORAL SURGERY	50%	75%
Includes extractions and other oral surgery procedures usually employed by a dentist, including pre and post operative care.
RESTORATIVE
Minor:	50%	75%
Includes amalgams (silver fillings), synthetic porcelain, resin restorations, relines and repairs to prosthetic appliances.
Major:	50%	50%
Cast restorations, crown and jackets may be used, but only when the teeth cannot be restored with another filling material.
PERIODONTICS	50%	75%
Procedures usually employed by a dentist for the treatment of diseases of the gums and supporting structures of the teeth.
ENDODONTICS	50%	75%
Procedures usually employed by a dentist for the treatment of non-vital teeth (i.e., root canals).
PROSTHODONTICS	50%	50%
Includes procedures required for the correction of bridges, partial and complete dentures.
ORTHODONTICS	50%	0%
Treatment and procedures required for the correction of malposed teeth. Eligible persons are covered only to age 19.

BENEFIT MAXIMUMS

The maximum dollar amount the Delta Traditional plan pays during each contract year for each covered person is $1,000. For orthodontic care, the plan pays a lifetime maximum of $1,000 for each eligible person.

The maximum dollar amount the Delta PPO plan pays during each contract year for each covered person is $800. Orthodontic care is not included in the PPO benefit plan.

Primary care physicians to play a greater role in the treatment of HIV-infected patients

By Tracy A. Baker

It is estimated that by the year 2000, HIV will be the third leading cause of death in the United States. With HIV-infection expanding into all segments of the population and into regions of the country previously unaffected, the need for well-informed health care providers is increasing.

In addition to the changing demographics of HIV, there also are changes to the health care system on the horizon that are expected to put a greater responsibility for the management of HIV-infected patients on the shoulders of primary care physicians.

"I feel very strongly that as health care reform comes into existence, pressure will intensify which will require more HIV training programs be made available and accessible for primary care physicians," says Randall S. Pope, chief of the HIV/AIDS Prevention and Intervention Section, Michigan Department of Public Health.

Many physicians are unable/unwilling to treat HIV-infected patients

Currently, many clinics which care for HIV-infected patients are pushed to their limits because many physicians are unable or unwilling to care for HIV patients. One example is the HIV/AIDS Program at the Detroit Medical Center (DMC) which has a three-month waiting list.

David B. Martin, MD, an infectious disease specialist in Traverse City and chair of the MSMS AIDS Provider Education Project, sees a similar occurrence in his area.

"I would estimate that my practice with Timothy Burke, MD, cares for 99 percent of the HIV patients in this area."

Lawrence R. Crane, MD, medical director of the Detroit Medical Center (DMC) HIV/AIDS Program and a director of the DMC HIV Clinical Course for Physicians, says there are only a handful of physicians that care for the majority of HIV patients and many physicians who care for a few patients. "However, most simply do not care for patients and don't care to learn how," he says.

Situation likely to change

Others see this situation changing as young physicians, who have been exposed to the problems of HIV-infection throughout their medical training, enter practice.

"Young doctors accept the fact that they are going to be caring for HIV-infected patients," says Daniel H. Havlichek, MD, an infectious disease specialist and associate professor of medicine at Michigan State University. "It's a fact of life."

While many physicians were trained at a time prior to the identification of HIV or when it was relatively rare, the training of physicians now is much different. At the MSU College of

MSMS AIDS Provider Education Project

The AIDS Provider Education Project was established in 1987, in conjunction with the Michigan Department of Public Health, to provide accurate and up-to-date HIV/AIDS prevention and treatment information to health care workers across the state.

Since forming, members of the HIV/AIDS Speakers Bureau have reached over 70,000 people with information ranging from universal precautions and other infection control advice to legal issues surrounding HIV. The speakers bureau has available nearly 200 trained professionals to conduct training sessions and provide information on many topics. The sessions can be tailored to suit the needs of many audiences.

In addition to the Speakers Bureau services, the AIDS Provider Education Project also has a video and slide library to assist speakers with presentation material. The slides and videos are available to anyone requesting them.

For information about the MSMS AIDS Provider Education Project, contact Tracy Baker or Bonnie McCauley at MSMS.

Recognizing that many physical conditions that are indicators of AIDS were not in the existing AIDS case definition, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention revised its classification system for HIV infection in 1993. The new system includes an expanded surveillance case definition for AIDS in adolescents and adults.

Human Medicine, students encounter HIV at every level of their training and are familiar with the disease progression and treatment.

"At MSU, students are exposed to HIV information multiple times and have a lot of opportunity to learn about the disease," Doctor Havlichek says.

Pope agrees that the medical schools are largely addressing the needs of today's medical students. He sees the real challenge as educating the physicians who have been in practice for many years.

"Primary care physicians have done a great job in identifying the risk factors associated with tobacco use," explains Pope. "The same level of commitment is now needed with HIV care. The tobacco efforts prove physicians can do it when they have the appropriate levels of education, commitment and interest."

One problem is that many physicians have become quite skilled and comfortable treating a group of diseases. And HIV is not usually included in that group. Often, it becomes a matter of efficiency when faced with an HIV-infected patient. Referring the patient to a physician who regularly cares for the disease is frequently the course taken.

More education needed

Although younger physicians are increasingly comfortable with the treatment HIV, there are still many physicians who did not have the benefit of HIV information in their early training and may now require additional training.

There are tools available for this group of physicians to update and develop the skills needed in today's health care environment.

One option is the DMC HIV Clinical Course DMC run by Doctor Crane. This program is a joint effort of the DMC HIV/AIDS Program and the East Central AIDS Education and Training Center site at Wayne State University.

Doctor Crane says that the people who complete the clinical portion of the program are much better equipped to provide the quality of care needed by HIV-infected patients.

Clinical treatment guidelines were also completed in January by the US Public Health Service, Agency for Health Care Policy and Research in Rockville, MD. While experts say there is nothing really new in the guidelines, Evaluation and Management of Early HIV Infection is the first comprehensive, practical advice targeting family physicians, internists, pediatricians and other frontline care physicians.

The new guidelines took a panel of physicians and other health care providers over two years to complete. The now finished document is 200 pages. The major treatment issues addressed in the guidelines include the monitoring of CD4 cell levels, initiating antiviral therapy and initiating therapy to prevent Pneumocystis carinii pneumonia (PCP).

The guidelines are aimed at physicians who may not be current with the treatment protocols for the early management of HIV-infection. They also include a quick reference guide with easily accessible charts including information on recommended antiretroviral therapy and PCP and tuberculosis prophylaxis.

Other areas addressed in the new guidelines, which may not have been incorporated in previously published manuals, include recommendations on the evaluation of HIV-related gynecological care, pregnancy counseling, caring for adolescents with early HIV infection and the evaluation and management of HIV-infection in infants and children.

"The guidelines are a great resource and training tool for physicians," says Pope.

HEALTH CARE FOR THE ELDERLY

As the debate about health system reform intensifies, so too will the discussions about health care for the nation's elderly.

Here's a quick rundown of some of the statistics compiled and published in Aging America: Trends and Projections (1991 edition):

- The projected growth in the nation's older population is expected to raise the median age of the US population to 36 by the year 2000, to 42 by the year 2030, and to 43 by the year 2040.
- Between 1989 and 2030, the 65+ population is expected to more than double.
- By the year 2030, there will be proportionately more elderly than young people in the population: 22 percent of the population will be 65+, and 21 percent will be under age 18.
- In 1988, approximately 6.9 million older people needed long term care. By the year 2000, the number will have increased to almost nine million, and by 2040, the aging of the baby boom generation is projected to increase the population needing long-term care to 18 million.
- In 1990, approximately 30 million people living in the community were age 65+, of whom 4.3 million experienced difficulties in one or more activity of daily living, such as the ability to walk, bathe, leave the house, transfer from a bed or chair, dress, use the toilet, and eat.
- The rate of nursing home use by the elderly has almost doubled since the introduction of Medicare and Medicaid in 1966, from 2.5 to five percent of the population age 65+.

On behalf of Michigan Medicine, the MSMS Committee on Aging, chaired by James G. O'Brien, MD, recently invited three individuals to write about their concerns regarding health care for the elderly. They are: John Peterson, of the Office of Services to the Aging, State of Michigan; Robert Dolsen, executive director, Region IV Area Agency on Aging; and Richard C. Bates, MD, a retired internist. Their articles comprise this month's cover story. ☞

Michigan's elderly hope for a brighter future

By John Peterson

Three imperatives surface quickly in any discussion of the various health care proposals before Congress. They are: (1) Will Medicare be preserved?; (2) Will there be coverage for prescription drugs?; and (3) Will there be long term care coverage?

Older Americans in Michigan have had a keen interest in health care reform for the last 10 to 15 years. During the 1980s, Michigan's senior advocacy groups regularly participated in conferences and workshops on health care cost containment, long term care insurance, universal coverage, and Medicare reform. Most participated in the passage, and many in the demise, of the Medicare Catastrophic Coverage at the end of that decade.

Three imperatives

Such experiences in the health care arena govern today's older Americans and their reactions to health care reform. Three imperatives surface quickly in any discussion of the various health care proposals before Congress. They are: (1) Will Medicare be preserved?; (2) Will there be coverage for prescription drugs?; and (3) Will there be long term care coverage?

#1: Will Medicare be preserved?

Medicare has provided older Americans with comprehensive health insurance for nearly 30 years. As with Social Security before it, Medicare has become an institution, a given. While in different times, people's interest in Medicare focused on expanding coverage, eliminating deductibles and co-payments, and ending balanced billing, today's concern is on preserving the Medicare that we have come to know. This remains the case even after discussions of broader coverage promised in health care reform proposals such as those in President Clinton's package. It also remains the case in spite of ongoing frustrations with balanced billing.

There is an increasing recognition among older Michiganians who are knowledgeable about health care coverage in other countries, that Medicare provides the most comprehensive acute care coverage. The coverage is also free from the worst fears older persons have regarding rationing of health care services. So, the initial issue for seniors is: Will Medicare be preserved?

Preservation clearly does not mean that coverage should not be improved. The two other imperatives respond to the most important coverage lost with repeal of the catastrophic legislation in 1990--pharmaceuticals, and with filling the most glaring hole in America's health care coverage--long term care.

#2: Prescription drugs

Prescribed medications have provided a series of problems for the older person. The sheer number of drugs a person takes is the beginning. In early studies commissioned by the Office of Services on Aging, it was not uncommon to find individuals with as many as 14 different prescribed medicines. Those with seven or more were almost guaranteed serious problems with drug interactions, interactions which in themselves often led to hospitalizations. Warnings were issued. Seniors were encouraged to talk with their physicians and pharmacists to guard against interactions. We printed, and distributed statewide, little booklets called "Passport to Good Health," in which people could list and thereby keep track of their medicines.

Cost a major problem

Cost of prescription drugs, however, became a major problem. Much of the escalating cost of America's health care can be attributed to the cost of drugs. Cost increases in excess of 11 percent per year hit senior citizens with low or fixed incomes especially hard. Eleven percent of today's senior population spend more than $100 per month on drugs. Nearly 50 percent have no drug insurance coverage. Government and private sector efforts to alleviate the problem help some, but more often than not, they point up the overwhelming nature of the problem. The purchase of a new prescription often necessitates the choice between drugs on one hand and heat, other utilities, rent, and food on the other.

Michigan's state aging office annually distributes $2.5 million worth of vouchers to senior citizens whose income lies between 100 and 150 percent of the poverty level through its emergency drug program. Under this program, an individual is only eligible for such services twice a year. Another $14 million is distributed in the form of State Income Tax rebates to similarly eligible seniors.

Universal coverage ideal

While there are numerous proposals under discussion at the present time, the enormity of the prescription drug cost problem, the high percentage of seniors who have no drug insurance coverage at all, as well as the sheer force of economies of scale, leads to the conclusion that some form of universal national drug coverage would be the best solution. Following the aborted catastrophic coverage experience, the deductible could be at the relatively high range of $300 per year which together with a 20 percent copayment would reduce the estimated federal expenditure burden by half.

While the exact approach to prescription drug coverage is a long way from being settled, it is clear that some form of insurance to expand the presently limited Medicare coverage is a major goal of older Americans. A similar situation exists in regard to long term care.

#3: Long term care

For all intents and purposes, there is only the most limited long term care coverage in the existing Medicare program. Medicare's skilled care coverage accounts for only about five percent of Michigan's total annual nursing home expenditures. Medicaid, the joint state/federal insurance program for the poor and elderly, pays for about 65-70 percent of the bill, and private pay, including long term care insurance, pays for the remainder. The lack of Medicare reimbursement for custodial long term care is compounded further by the absence of home care beyond home health. The simple fact is that Medicare has no provision for caring for the chronically ill.

Clinton plan intriguing

President Clinton's plan for long term care, a part of his health care reform proposal, has been received with considerable interest by the elderly. It is not difficult to see why this is so. The center piece of the program is home and community based care for the elderly and those with disabilities. Experience shows that most elderly prefer to receive long term care services at home. Clinton's plan is not age specific. It is a universal program driven by a person's level of disability.

The home and community based care program comes in two parts. The first would be created under a new section of the Social Security Act. The second part is a continuation of Medicaid community long term care programs and would cover those who are poor and are not severely disabled.

The first part covers those who are severely disabled. It will be jointly funded by the federal and state governments. Eligibility is restricted to persons with three or more deficiencies in activities of daily living from the following five: eating, dressing, bathing, toileting, and transferring in and out of bed. There are three other categories of eligibility which cover the severely cognitively or mentally impaired, the severely mentally retarded, and children with high health needs.

The long term care benefits are similar to those provided currently by federal home and community based services waiver programs. That program operates in 14 of Michigan's 83 counties. The site of service delivery includes, in addition to the person's traditional home, a range of other residential settings which includes just about anything except a nursing facility. It certainly includes assisted living, an increasingly popular form of independent living which holds considerable promise.

The plan includes a sliding fee scale beginning at 150 percent of poverty which reaches a maximum payment of 40 percent of service cost at or above 400 percent of poverty (nearly $30,000 this year). States are responsible for the administration of the program through a state plan. The plan defines benefits, services, payments, and eligibility determination.

This bare outline of the long term care proposals reveals an understanding of the importance of comprehensive long term care coverage to America's elderly population. In fact, in so far as each of the three imperatives has been addressed in the Clinton plan, it may be regarded as an effort to secure senior citizen support for the broader health care reform proposals. So far, with some exceptions, that has not happened. That aside, it is clear that when older persons approach the subject of health care reform, they do so with the three imperatives in mind: Medicare preservation, prescription drug and long term care coverage.

Home-based care a key issue for senior citizens

By Robert Dolsen

At first it may be mystifying that older Americans are so much in the center of the health care reform debate. Their primary source of health care insurance is Medicare, which in 1965, was modeled after the existing private health care insurance system. Medicare includes patient choice of physician and hospital, fee-for-service, physician authority to do whatever it takes to do the job — all those things that we've grown to love and expect in health care. So, why are seniors upset?

Overall costs high

There are three salient issues. The first is the overall cost of health care to the older patient. A recent study by the Urban Institute revealed that Americans over 65 spend 23 percent of their income on health needs — an average of $2,803 out-of-pocket — twice as much as they spent in 1987.

Valid reasons can be cited for the increase in costs, and since reimbursement for care covered by Medicare is low relative to reimbursement for care covered by private insurance, doctors can make a compelling case that they are being short-changed. But the force of these arguments does little to alleviate the financial problems of many older persons.

Prescription drugs expensive

The second health reform issue facing older Americans is cost of prescription drugs. Our experience with the Michigan Emergency Prescription Pharmaceutical System (MEPPS) reveals that all too often older persons cheat on the dosage of their prescriptions, delay refilling them, borrow substitutes from their friends and, in the case of very expensive, and often very critical drugs, they occasionally forego the therapy altogether.

A patient with five or six prescriptions may be spending $200-$400 a month on drugs. That can cut quite a swath out of a monthly income of $500-$700. Yes, some people really do choose between drugs and food. And they wish deeply that Medicare would pay for outpatient prescription drugs.

Long term care needed

The last issue concerning seniors in health care reform is the need for a comprehensive program of long term care, particularly home and community-based care. The current system of Medicaid-subsidized long term care has an institutional bias and requires that a potential recipient become impoverished in order to be eligible for public help.

Some policymakers and media hostile to Medicaid or seniors have focused on the abuses of some well-to-do elders who have their fortunes in trusts to make themselves eligible for Medicaid nursing home payments. But the vast majority of older persons — and younger persons — with chronic disabilities who become eligible for Medicaid come from America's besieged middle class and dutifully spend down their modest life savings before receiving help. And now with the Estate Recovery Act, persons over 65 receiving Medicaid for long term care benefits will have liens placed on their homes and personal property so the government may recoup the Medicaid money paid for their care.

The argument of reluctant policymakers goes something like this: "Why should the public pay just so some older person who needs long term care doesn't have to deplete her life savings? Besides, for those in bad shape, the nursing home is the last home, where life space is narrow and elemental needs are met, so the justification for personal savings and income no longer exists."

Seniors advocates respond, "Why? Because the securing of one's hard-earned savings in the case of a catastrophe is a well-established American principle. And when the costs of private insurance for that security outstrips an individuals's ability to purchase, then a public insurance program is established. That's why Medicare was enacted. And we prefer to be cared for in our own homes as long as possible and use most of our income and our savings to live lives as normal as possible under the circumstances."

Home care too costly?

Well, can we afford it? Estimates from the Federal budget analysts range up to $56 billion annually for a full scale, nationwide home and community-based program. That's a hefty price.

Many of the high end estimates have been based on the Medicare home health experience. Since the Duggan v. Bowen decision in 1988, which liberalized the home health provisions of Medicare, Federal home health expenditures have exploded. The decision made possible the use of home health care far beyond the post-acute arena to the chronic care arena, where the clinical need for skilled care is questionable.

This is a "medicalized" system, but physicians play only a perfunctory role in it. They certify that home health care is appropriate and they approve home health agency-designed care plans. From there on in the real decisions for level of care, frequency, and duration rests with the home health agency, which has the primary financial interest in the services.

The Health Policy Center concluded that this "supplier-driven" system, left unchecked by cost management, could exceed expenditures of $60 billion by the turn of the century, a figure greater than those policymakers feared. And the majority of persons with disabilities would still go without care.

Health Policy Center experts call for a greater delineation of recuperative care, those efforts aimed at improvement of a patient's condition, and supportive care, those efforts aimed at maintaining functional abilities, far less expensive care when carefully managed.

The experience of the Michigan Medicaid waiver is instructive here. The waiver is tightly targeted toward those certified for nursing home placement, and the services are managed by agencies with no fiduciary interest in them. The services are, for the most part, unskilled social support services, but with the care managed by registered nurses and social workers, when symptoms of acute episodes present or signs of medical instability emerge, patients are referred quickly to the primary care physician or admitted to the hospital, as appropriate.

The program has not only been effective in reducing nursing home admissions, but costs much less without denying medical care when it is necessary. Indeed, it is precisely the model proposed by the Health Policy Center and could be implemented with universal coverage nationwide at about a third of the cost of the surging medicalized model.

Will Federal policymakers propose a home-based care provision in the health care reform package we expect to see in the next year or two? Probably not. In fact, some of the savings from Medicare might come from the home health provision.

An issue too big to ignore

But by the year 2000, medical research will have found ways to address the problems of Alzheimer's Disease and other dementias, control incontinence, and manage congestive heart failure — in the home. The residents of nursing homes will be a much smaller and very different group from current residents, and the issue of home-based care will be simply too big to ignore.

A Retired physician speaks out

Let my people go

By Richard C. Bates, MD

We face a new era in medicine. Our new abilities to replace organs, pace hearts, circulate blood, ventilate lungs and extract urea, coupled with the costs of that technology, are forcing us inexorably to the wall of determining who shall die.

For a decade, I've been bemused with a hypothetical scenario in which the good news is that we have a cure for cancer. The bad news? It costs a million dollars a case. Heart and bone marrow transplants have brought us almost there.

Then, someone or some committee will finally be forced to determine who is worth saving and who is not. The moment approaches, and it is inevitable. Having finally learned how to "save" life, we must now determine when to let it self-destruct.

But these problems should, properly, only involve the care of young people, patients who have reserves of life expectancy. The older the patient, the easier it should be to pare medical efforts to the minimum.

We aren't quite at the dilemma of the million-dollar cancer cure, and we can postpone it a little longer by saving some of the millions presently wasted on lesser treatments for the elderly. Not only would it save money, it's good preparation for what's to come.

Despite the popularity of living wills and ethics committees, most of the decisions about intervention in death-threatening illnesses of the aged are still made by individual physicians. I, for one, believe these decisions should all be made by the attending doctor. The last people to make them, it seems to me, are the patient and his relatives: every day we hear of thousands of dollars wasted by people who "want everything done" despite the hopelessness of the prognosis. For years to come, some of those relatives who chose the opposite option will agonize over the rectitude of their decision.

As for ethics committees, I object to their usual membership of philosophers, clergymen, social workers and laymen who have not our training in medical prognosis, dispassionate decision-making and the natural history of life and disease, much less the attending doctor's knowledge of the patient and his family. Before I'll respect an ethicist I want to know how many people he's seen die; how many people he's pronounced dead, and how many times he's personally faced the decisions you and I have made regularly.

Sir William Osler was such a man. He even kept a record:

"I have careful records of about five hundred death beds, studied particularly with reference to the modes of death and the sensations of dying.

"Ninety suffered bodily pain or distress of one sort or another, eleven showed mental apprehension, two positive terror, one expressed spiritual exaltation, one bitter remorse, the great majority gave no signs one way or another; like birth, their death was a sleep and a forgetting."

Unfortunately, many of the "who shall live" decisions are made by young doctors; it is inevitable because medical neophytes are more likely to be at the bedside in emergency rooms and critical care units.

Too often, young doctors make such decisions on the basis of their own attitudes toward their own mortality; they think of death as an irreconcilable adversary to be defeated at any cost. Many people my age see death, rather, as the inevitable terminal of a long journey. The limitations of the aging body — loss of senses, loss of power, mental decline — force us to understand and, in time, welcome, death. Then, too, we face the lonesomeness of losing friends. Asked what was the worst part of growing old, my father answered "the funerals."

Many of my contemporaries fear falling into the hands of an eager young doctor who has not, perhaps, accepted his own death, or has been taught, erroneously, that the Hippocratic Oath binds him to save lives at all times and costs, or who enjoys exercising his power and skill in bringing life back from the brink. (Sometimes, it pays well, too.)

The Hippocratic ethic does not require us to preserve life at all cost and to the bitter end. Rather, it says we are to do no harm. Is not keeping a blind, deaf, brain-damaged, 100-year-old from pneumonia cruel? Do we not offer less harm to our terminally disabled dogs than we do to people? Applied to pets, the things we do in ICUs would bring the SPCA down about our ears.

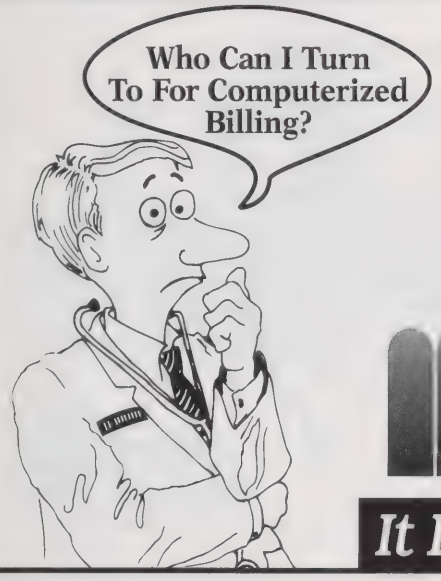

Let me share with you two cases in point. These were related to me in anguish by two of my friends whose aging parents died in other parts of the country.

A 94-year-old man, living with his 89-year-old wife, was in reasonable vigor and mentally intact when he collapsed in the bathroom at 4:30 p.m. He was taken to the emergency room of a 300-bed hospital serving a community of 50,000 and environs. While the family waited anxiously, he was examined by a nurse (but not by a physician) until 6:30 p.m. when a surgeon came in, examined him, and announced that he had an obvious rupture of an abdominal aneurysm. Although the family stated they did not want heroic measures taken, the surgeon said that he "felt obligated" to operate. So they signed the permit.

The patient had a cardiac arrest while awaiting surgery, but was resuscitated and survived the surgery long enough to arrive in the recovery care unit where he died at 10:30 p.m.

The hospital bill was $19,557, of which Medicare paid $16,405 and an AARP supplement policy $728. The balance of $2,424 was written off by the hospital.

There were two anesthesiologists' bills of $1,092 and $724, which totaled more than the surgeon's bill of $1,659. The doctor who handled the cardiac arrest charged $816; a consultant charged $140, and another doctor billed for $265. The pathology group asked for $69, making total doctor bills of $4,765. Oh yes, the ambulance cost $172. Grand(?) total: $24,494.00.

Only later did the family realize that the surgeon hadn't answered when they asked him how many successful aortic repairs he had done on 94-year-olds: he just repeated that he had no recourse but to operate.

After a series of strokes left her unable to recognize members of her family, an 89-year-old woman was admitted to a nursing home. Before her decline, she had signed a living will stating that her life was not to be prolonged unnecessarily and that extraordinary procedures were not to be carried out.

Shortly, thereafter, she became comatose. Her family were notified, and "do not resuscitate" injunctions were placed on the chart. The family left for the evening, but upon their return the following morning found her bed empty. They were told that her condition had deteriorated during the night, so she had been sent to a nearby hospital by ambulance. Shocked and disbelieving, they rushed there to find her on a stretcher in the emergency room, on oxygen, with tubes in both arms and on a monitor. When they remonstrated with the emergency room doctor, he admitted that he had seen the living will and resuscitation instructions, but said that he worked for the hospital, not for the patient, and that his job was to save lives.

When the attending physician was contacted at home he refused to return the patient to the nursing home and, instead, after six hours in the emergency room, admitted her. She died the next day. Total bills were in the neighborhood of $3,000. When asked about his care later, the attending physician said that he had been called by the nursing home in the night because the patient had a fever, so he ordered her transferred to the hospital. He did not see her then or subsequently.

I hope you share my outrage at the pain and money wastage caused by these callous devotees of medical care uber alles, but in a more subtle way, and to a far lesser degree, most of us participate in the same folly.

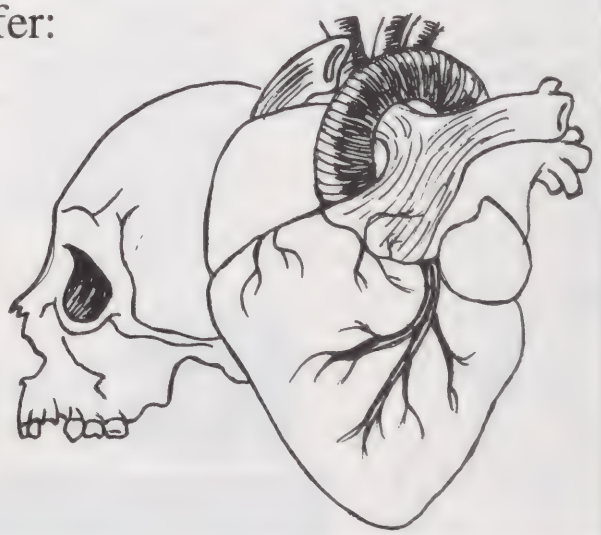

Take flu shots. An individual so fragile that influenza will push him over had better go that way than any other. Pneumonia — the usual cause of influenza deaths — used to be known as the old's man's friend: Is it really our mission to take away such a good friend?

The cruelest thing one can do to a dying oldster is to initiate intravenous fluids, or worse, tube feedings. Dehydration promotes the easiest of deaths: stupor, coma, then death. There is probably no sensation of thirst. It is far easier not to initiate fluid therapy than to begin it and then discontinue it.

The same goes for respirator assistance for severe emphysema. Anoxia and hypercarbia cause coma leading to death. Why bring a person back from this time after time just because we know how to do it? It's far easier not to insert a tracheal tube than it is to put it in and then get approval from all hands to discontinue it. Easier on the doctor, easier on the relatives and merciful for the patient.

And, after age 80, I oppose any treatment of hyperglycemia, hypercholesterolemia and hypertension. Old people don't need to be protected from diseases whose complications take years to develop. Had they significant problems in these regards, they wouldn't have lived to be 80. We treat those conditions to avoid premature death, an impossibility for the elderly. Nor is there much reason for exercise tests, coronary catheterization and arteriograms of any sort after age 70. After 80, sudden death from coronary disease is the best, not the worst, choice.

Naturally, there must be room for compromise in these situations. I didn't object when one of my friends, age 75, stated he was having his cholesterol checked monthly, because he was doing it at his own expense. But I did cavil when a 86-year-old widow reported ruefully that her doctor had limited her life-long daily breakfast egg to three a week. Obviously, he felt her diet might shorten her life.

The Colorado governor, Richard Lamm, caused excitement 10 years ago when he stated that old people had a duty to die and warned the medical profession that we should not impose life upon people who are suffering. As Francis Peabody said in his essay, The Care of the Patient, "Death is not the worst thing in the world."

As I approach the average life expectancy for American males, see more of my medical school classmates listed in the AMA obituary columns, and find half of the obituaries in the daily paper listing people younger than I, it becomes impossible to deny the approach of the inevitable. Now I pray that I can avoid medical care from any doctor who doesn't understand his role in my care the same way I do. Hemingway was preoccupied with "the good death," and took his own life when liver disease was worse than living. Suicide is common among older doctors, for the same reason. I'll take my chances with "natural causes," and with Osler's 80 percent chance of slipping out with a sleep and a forgetting. Don't you dare interfere — just leave me alone, you hear?

Annual returns shown for Doctors Capital Management represent the performance of a model investment portfolio of securities selected by DCM or its predecessor investment manager. Annual returns shown for DCM reflect the deduction of annual management fees paid by DCM clients and transaction costs. DCM returns include dividend income, reinvestment of dividend income, interest income and capital appreciation. S&P 500 returns reflect the growth of the S&P 500 index which is comprised of 500 widely held common stocks as designated by Standard & Poors Corporation; it is not a managed investment portfolio therefore there is no deduction of management costs or related expenses. Returns shown for the S&P 500 include dividend income. DCM returns shown reflect actual trading for that portion of DCM accounts which are managed according to the model but may not reflect the effect of material economic and market factors. That is, the returns of DCM actual accounts may be greater than or less than the returns shown for the model portfolio due to individual account objectives, timing of implementation of investment decisions and transactions, timing of account inceptions, and existing securities position of new accounts. Returns shown for 1983 through 1989 represent the model portfolio managed by David J. Master, the predecessor investment manager. For 1990 and beyond he has been responsible for investment management at DCM. The investment philosophy, objectives and style were consistent throughout the period shown. Management fees may be billed separately from managed accounts and would increase returns of these accounts. Fee schedule is contained in form ADV. Performance figures represent past results and are no guarantee of future performance. Portfolio values will fluctuate as market conditions change.

Dean Sienko, MD

Dean Sienko, MD is fighting MADD about drunk driving

By Ralph D. Ward

Public health issues often drive physicians to become involved in social causes, and one Michigan physician has brought his concerns to the fight against drunk driving. Dean Sienko, MD, is well acquainted with public health issues as medical director for Ingham County. His interest in drunk driving issues was piqued when he started "looking at health statistics that showed unintentional injuries are the leading cause of death in the young, and many of these involve autos and drinking. So from a public health standpoint, as well as to be a good citizen, it was important to get involved."

Doctor Sienko's involvement led him, in 1987, to join the Ingham County branch of the Mothers Against Drunk Driving and, in 1991, to be named president, a position he has held until the present. Doctor Sienko feels that MADD's mission dovetails well with his public health interests. "The MADD agenda has several parts. First, we try to prevent future deaths and injuries from drunk driving. Second, we support the victims of drunk driving. We have trained volunteers, many who are victims themselves, who train as counsellors. They help other victims through the court proceedings."

Doctor Sienko says that the county MADD chapters work primarily with local concerns, and that most involvement with legislation and day-to-day lobbying activities is handled at the state level.

How involved are Michigan's medical professionals in drunk driving issues? "There could be more physician involvement," says Doctor Sienko. "Most physicians are concerned with the public health aspects, though. Once they evaluate MADD's mission, they're sympathetic."

Doctor Sienko notes that an MSMS-drafted physician resolution on drunk driving was ultimately endorsed by the AMA.

MADD involvement effective

Doctor Sienko sees involvement with MADD as an effective way to help combat drunk driving, in part due to the organization's proven effectiveness on the issue over the past decade.

"If you look at public awareness, and the reports of drunk driving deaths nationally, you see a strong correlation between MADD activity and a decrease in incidents. Certainly the group has struck a chord in the national conscience of America by highlighting what a senseless personal tragedy this is." Immediate goals of the group include a tightening of permissible blood alcohol levels. Long-term goals are to, quite simply, "make sure that there are no more deaths or injuries from this cause, and that no one chooses to drink and drive. We want to make drinking and driving socially unacceptable."

While Doctor Sienko maintains that MADD is not a prohibitionist group. "Alcohol is not the issue. The issue is people who drink and drive. People must act responsibly — if they choose to drink, don't drive.

Work by MADD to raise physician awareness is limited, but showing its effects. "I work with other physicians, although not in a formal way," says Doctor Sienko. Physicians are involved in drunk driving law petition drives, and MSMS has supported the holiday-season "Tie One On" red ribbon campaign. "If physicians can counsel their patients on this they can be important elements in the overall effort."

While Doctor Sienko finds the typical physician sympathetic on the issue, "there are still some misconceptions on the seriousness of the problem. I say to physicians, how many of you would scrub with someone who has recently had something to drink? Most wouldn't tolerate it. We should approach drinking and driving the same way."

William G. Zimmerman, MD

Taking off with the Flying Physicians

By Ralph D. Ward

In the public mind, medicine and flying are both associated with skill, precision, and risk. They are both exhilarating, can both leave practitioners feeling a little Godlike at times — and both have been stung by liability lawyers.

Medicine and private flying have some intriguing similarities, according to William G. Zimmerman, MD, who should know. "Physicians want to do everything as precisely as possible. There's as much of a thrill to completing a perfect instrument flight as in seeing a patient recover from a successful operation."

Doctor Zimmerman, a Grand Rapids ophthamologist, has been elected 1994 national president of the Flying Physicians Association, a national group for physicians who are pilots or aviation enthusiasts. The Flying Physicians group was founded in 1954 by three doctors who had flown to a California AMA meeting in the 1950s, a time when America was experiencing an unprecedented boom in general aviation. By the late 1960s, the Flying Physicians membership topped 2,500. However, retirement of many of the early members, plus sharp increases in the cost of private planes and flying time, have cut the membership to a current level of around 1,000.

Physicians should note that one reason private aircraft prices have climbed into the six-figure range over the past 20 years (and why many manufacturers have left the business) is sharply increased liability insurance costs. "Flying physicians see the results of runaway liability in both their work and their hobby" observes Doctor Zimmerman.

The group puts its interest in medicine and aviation to work in many ways. Many members are examiners for the FAA, certified to give the physician exams required for pilot and air controller licensing (private pilots must be examined every two years; airline pilots every six months). The Flying Physicians also helps fellow physicians who are

YOCON®
YOHIMBINE HCl

Description: Yohimbine is a 3a-15a-20B-17a-hydroxy Yohimbine-16a-carboxylic acid methyl ester. The alkaloid is found in Rubaceae and related trees. Also in Rauwolfia Serpentina (L) Benth. Yohimbine is an indolalkylamine alkaloid with chemical similarity to reserpine. It is a crystalline powder, odorless. Each compressed tablet contains (1/12 gr.) 5.4 mg of Yohimbine Hydrochloride.

Action: Yohimbine blocks presynaptic alpha-2 adrenergic receptors. Its action on peripheral blood vessels resembles that of reserpine, though it is weaker and of short duration. Yohimbine's peripheral autonomic nervous system effect is to increase parasympathetic (cholinergic) and decrease sympathetic (adrenergic) activity. It is to be noted that in male sexual performance, erection is linked to cholinergic activity and to alpha-2 adrenergic blockade which may theoretically result in increased penile inflow, decreased penile outflow or both.

Yohimbine exerts a stimulating action on the mood and may increase anxiety. Such actions have not been adequately studied or related to dosage although they appear to require high doses of the drug. Yohimbine has a mild anti-diuretic action, probably via stimulation of hypothalmic centers and release of posterior pituitary hormone.

Reportedly, Yohimbine exerts no significant influence on cardiac stimulation and other effects mediated by B-adrenergic receptors, its effect on blood pressure, if any, would be to lower it; however no adequate studies are at hand to quantitate this effect in terms of Yohimbine dosage.

Indications: Yocon® is indicated as a sympathicolytic and mydriatic. It may have activity as an aphrodisiac.

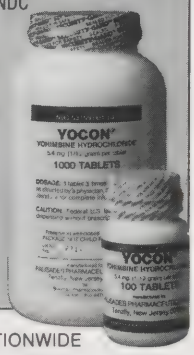

Contraindications: Renal diseases, and patient's sensitive to the drug. In view of the limited and inadequate information at hand, no precise tabulation can be offered of additional contraindications.

Warning: Generally, this drug is not proposed for use in females and certainly must not be used during pregnancy. Neither is this drug proposed for use in pediatric, geriatric or cardio-renal patients with gastric or duodenal ulcer history. Nor should it be used in conjunction with mood-modifying drugs such as antidepressants, or in psychiatric patients in general.

Adverse Reactions: Yohimbine readily penetrates the (CNS) and produces a complex pattern of responses in lower doses than required to produce peripheral a-adrenergic blockade. These include, anti-diuresis, a general picture of central excitation including elevation of blood pressure and heart rate, increased motor activity, irritability and tremor. Sweating, nausea and vomiting are common after parenteral administration of the drug.[1,2] Also dizziness, headache, skin flushing reported when used orally.[1,3]

Dosage and Administration: Experimental dosage reported in treatment of erectile impotence.[1,3,4] 1 tablet (5.4 mg) 3 times a day, to adult males taken orally. Occasional side effects reported with this dosage are nausea, dizziness or nervousness. In the event of side effects dosage to be reduced to ½ tablet 3 times a day, followed by gradual increases to 1 tablet 3 times a day. Reported therapy not more than 10 weeks.[3] trying to get their pilot licenses, and offers programs to help members improve their piloting skills. "Doctors who fly have a bum rap for getting themselves into positions they can't handle, such as pushing beyond the limits in bad weather," says Doctor Zimmerman. "Our group has stressed the importance of getting an instrument rating, and other safety factors." Flying Physicians has six national chapters, and Michigan has about 50 members.

The flying physicians also use their flight time to help good causes. "Good Samaritan" activities include flying into remote areas to provide free health clinics for the poor. The group also sponsors and staffs a family practice medical clinic in Jamaica, at the town of Trelawny. Doctors fly in to staff the clinic as volunteers for two-week hitches. The clinic is maintained for most of the year, but a goal is to keep it staffed year-round. Physician members donate some supplies, but drug companies are also donors, and Rotary International supports the clinic as one of it causes.

During his year as president of the group, Doctor Zimmerman plans to work on recruitment. "It's disappointing to see membership dwindling." Doctor Zimmerman, who personally flies a Beechcraft KingAire turboprop (which he also leases to Butterworth Hospital for its Aeromed transport program), believes the sheer attraction of flight will help rebuild membership. "I like the freedom, the challenge of doing everything as precisely as possible. Flight is as demanding as eye surgery. The thrill never diminishes."

The Benefits of Membership

The availability of comprehensive insurance coverage is just one of the many benefits of Michigan State Medical Society membership. Over the years, MSMS, through its affiliated insurance agency, Stratton, Cheeseman & Walsh has been able to offer many cost-effective insurance programs. With Stratton, Cheeseman & Walsh's three decades of experience, MSMS members can deal with them in confidence.

Designed especially to meet the diverse needs of today's physicians, MSMS members have access to quality, group life, disability, business overhead protection and accidental death coverage. Employee group life and disability plans are also available.

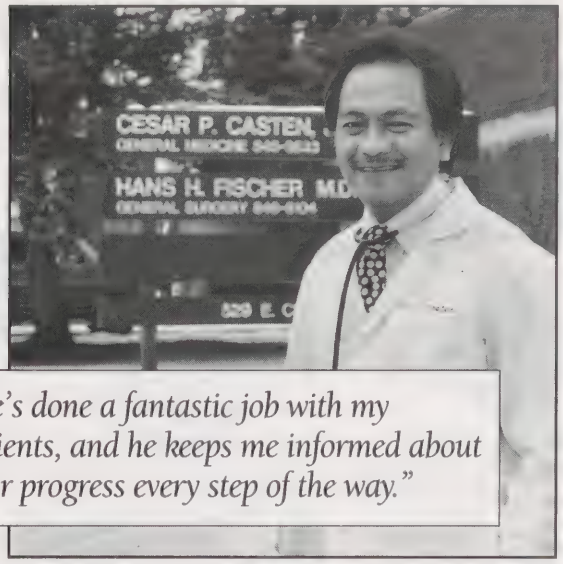

Striving to meet the needs of physicians, the Michigan State Medical Society is pleased to announce its newest member benefit, group automobile and homeowners insurance. Auto Owners Insurance Company, a financially strong, Michigan-based property and casualty company was chosen because of their committment to service.

Why not join the several thousand MSMS members who currently enjoy the benefits of membership and call Stratton, Cheeseman & Walsh at 1-800-968-4929 and put your membership to work for you.

HEALTHY RELATIONSHIPS

"He's done a fantastic job with my patients, and he keeps me informed about their progress every step of the way."

Dr. Cesar Casten
Family Practice, Standish, MI

"The St. Luke's Specialist Referral Network introduced me to Dr. deBari. I work closely with a local foster home in our area that houses many individuals with paraplegia and other disabilities, and I frequently send these patients to Dr. deBari for the more specialized orthopedic care they need. It's a great relationship. I benefit. Dr. deBari benefits. And, of course, our patients benefit most of all."

Dr. Anthony deBari, Orthopedic Surgery
St. Luke's Specialist Referral Network, Saginaw, MI

"I've only been practicing in this area for three years, and St. Luke's Specialist Referral Network has been very helpful in marketing my practice. I've had many doctors refer patients to me and consult with me about a patient. I'm more than happy to do that. After all, that's what the Specialist Referral Network is all about. Physicians helping physicians."

SPECIALIST REFERRAL NETWORK

It's a simple idea. Rural physicians call St. Luke's Specialist Referral Network when they need the advice or services of a specialist. The Network contacts the appropriate specialist, arranges a phone consultation or makes a referral appointment, then calls the rural physician with the information. No hassles No waiting. A simple idea. And it's working.

When a healthy relationship with one of our Saginaw area specialists can help you and your patient, call the Specialist Referral Network at 1-800-541-3939.

St. Luke's Specialist Referral Network. Building healthy relationships among rural physicians, area specialists and their patients.

"Mercy allowed me to maintain my independence while becoming part of the team here. They did everything. They moved me, put ads in the newspaper, and printed up cards, stationery and announcements. They introduced me to the physicians in the area, and because they were actively recruiting someone in my position, I felt needed and wanted from the word 'go.'"

Mercy Health Services North is actively recruiting physicians in Internal Medicine, Family Practice, Pediatrics and OB/GYN. We helped Dr. Bizzigotti find professional satisfaction and we'd like to do the same for you. For further information, call or send C.V. to: Physician Recruitment, Mercy Health Services North, Dept. Scope of practice battles

We must forge ahead to protect our patients

"There's a reason we went to medical school and endured internships and residencies. We went to gain the knowledge and skills required to treat the whole patient."

By Jack L. Barry, MD

A couple of weeks ago leaders from the Michigan State Medical Society and from the Michigan Ophthalmological Society made a unified show of force at the Capitol in Lansing.

They were there to testify against two bills that would expand the scope of practice of optometrists. However, the committee where a vote was expected to take place—the Senate Health Policy Committee—was not called into session.

Several of the physicians who had closed the office and travelled all day to Lansing were initially disappointed. Frustrated. Even angry.

But with a little explanation from the more Capitol-experienced physicians, they went home energized. The victory, it was explained, already was theirs.

The committee is controlled by scope expansion supporter Sen. John Pridnia (R-Hubbard Lake). He apparently had taken a straw poll of his committee members in advance and found he did not have enough votes to get the bills, which already have passed the House, passed out of his committee. Therefore, the committee meeting was called off and the scope bills did not advance to the floor of the Senate.

A victorious beginning

True, it was only one skirmish in a long, difficult battle. But it was a victory. Even more important, it wasn't just the leaders showing up in Lansing that determined the vote. The skirmish was won by the advance work of individual physicians over the preceding months who wrote letters, made telephone calls and talked one-on-one, face-to-face with their own local legislators, some of whom serve on the Senate Health Policy Committee.

These legislators were educated and informed. They made up their minds based on the facts, not on partisan politics or misinformation.

It was a particularly bright day in Lansing because the system worked. But as I said, it was only one skirmish in an on-going battle. These individual efforts must continue in order for the battle to be won.

And you know optometric scope expansion is not the only "scope" issue floating around the Capitol. The chiropractors want to expand their scope. Nurse midwives want direct reimbursement. Physical therapists want direct reimbursement. MSMS is on record in opposition to all of these efforts.

We must continue to work to protect our patients from those in the health care field who want to expand their scope of practice beyond their training and education. We don't oppose these efforts to protect our turf. We oppose these efforts to protect our patients.

There's a reason we went to medical school and endured internships and residencies. We went to gain the knowledge and skills required to treat the whole patient.

We agree it takes a health care "team" to treat many patients. We respect all team members. But in every team, someone must take charge. The leader is usually the person with the best overall skill and knowledge. In health care, it's the physician and it must stay that way to protect our patients.

Stay involved

I urge you to contact your local legislators and educate them on these issues. Call MSMS and ask for background information if you need it. We have seen that the system works if everyone is working in concert. All we have to do is just do it.
